Jewett City is to have three state roads, one through the borough and one on each side, and there are to be improvements between Danielson and Central Village with grade crossing eliminated.

Because Rhode Island is not to build a connecting road to the Connecticut state line, the commissioner said he could see no reason now for building a road through Preston City and Voluntown towards Rhode Island.

Regarding the revenue of the state highway department he said this is about $15,000,000 annually, of which $10,000,000 is used in road building. About $6,000,000 goes for maintenance and $4,000,000 for new roads. About $300,000 annually is spent by the bureau in charge of the beautification of highways, but about $200,000 of this is required for the work formerly done by the maintenance of way bureau. Thus about $100,000 is left for actual beautification work. He said he believed that for every dollar spent that way the state took in $5 back from out-of-the-state tourists who were attracted to the state by the scenic beautification programme.

CLEVER GRANGE CAST PRESENTS MUSICAL COMEDY

Norwich grange, No. 172, Patrons of Husbandry, again proved its talent along histrionic lines when it presented a musical comedy, Sally of the Music Store, at grange hall, on Wednesday evening.

The title role was in the hands of Miss Helen Bellows, who had a charming stage presence and played the part to perfection. The cast was well chosen throughout and made the comedy thoroughly enjoyable to the audience which filled the hall to capacity.

The following was the cast:

Sally True, Helen Bellows; Mamie, the accompanist, Mrs. Lena Pukallus; Mrs. Socialstanding, Mrs. Snow; Mirandy, Mrs. Clara Burke; Pete, Clarence Lillibridge; Mrs. Obliging, Mrs. Amy Coles; Mrs. Elderly, Mrs. Frederic Ross; Mrs. Bonanza, John Rathbone; Mr. Sneezawitski, Ralph Marsh; a mother, Mrs. Loretta McVerney; Miss Terpischor, famous dancer, Virginia Hastedt.

Pleasing vocal numbers were rendered by Miss Charlotte Fowler and Mrs. Tillie Russell. Little Miss Shirley Nulen surprised both audience and cast by her skill in playing the accordion. A scarf dance and "Putting on the Ritz," by Miss Virginia Hastedt contributed much to the spice of the program.

A unique feature was the representation of an organ in which the chorus members hummed to produce the music as the organ was played.

Mrs. Wm. S. Murray was the coach and Charles Lillibridge was the announcer.

Dancing for which the Musical Aces played concluded the evening.

OBITUARY

Mrs. S. C. Gates

Following a long illness, Harriet Winchester, widow of Simon Chester Gates, formerly of this city, died Tuesday at Wallingford. Mrs. Gates was the daughter of James and Lydia Winchester and was born in this city. For some time after her marriage she resided in Jersey City. Surviving is a nephew, Otis Winchester of Norwich. Mrs. Gates was a sister of the late Charles and Otis Winchester of this city.

The government's "bread line" in Glacier Park has been one of the most popular animal rendezvous in the Rocky mountain region. Here it was that hunger reduced animals of all kinds to a common level; here it was that internecine strife was foregone in the desire to obtain food. Among the patrons of the government dole were weasels, mink, crows, blue jays, mountain sheep, deer, bear, magpies and other birds and animals.

NORWICH ART STUDENTS MAKE THEIR 40TH ANNUAL EXHIBITION

Having had 87 students registered this year in the Norwich Art school, with 181 Norwich Free Academy students coming to the school for instruction, the 40th annual exhibition of the work of school was opened Wednesday afternoon in Converse Art gallery. The work will remain in the gallery through Memorial day and may be seen each day from 2 to 4:30 in the afternoon.

Besides the instruction here, work has been carried on at Williams Memorial institute, New London, where the classes in drawing have been in charge of Miss Blanche Wilber and those in metalry under Miss Margaret Ray.

Work in the metalry and pottery departments has increased considerably. The school has had a busy year, and many commissions have been executed by the students.

Wednesday afternoon, Lloyd Potter demonstrated pewter spinning on the new motor drvien metal spinning lathe, Mrs. Wilson poured pottery, and David Isham showed the guests how the Norwich glazes are made. These Norwich glazes are used successfully in other high schools as well as in our own. Visitors to the school were much interested in the work being done in the class rooms. The awards and scholarships announced for the year are:

Children's Class Exhibition

The children's class which meets on Saturday morning is divided into three divisions according to age and ability. The children work alternate weeks with Miss Wilber in design, Miss Trumbull in modelling and Miss Triplett in drawing. Miss Wilber's problems illustrating central bi-symmetric, and free balance, have been carried out in designs for squares, circles, and triangles. Circles made by Susan French and Elizabeth Main, squares by Arabelle Lyman, Vivian Bolduc and Charles James; and triangles by Mitchell Jakubowski, and Edward Manning are excellent examples of these problems. As a result of studying the various kinds of balance, the younger children have been able to develop interesting tiles, original figures, toys, and border designs. The toys by Ruth Prentice, Susan French and Priscilla Huntington show creative ability and the dolls and figures by Elizabeth Main, Clementine James and Catherine Mitchell are entertaining.

The division of older children has developed designs for repeats which are rich in balanced color and most interesting in subject. The repeats made by Donald Benjamin, Nancie Greenman, Mitchell Jakubowski, Charles James and Carl Hitchon are striking.

Drawing

In the work in drawing, the lessons have been divided between direct representation of objects and imaginative drawing. In the imaginative drawing the children display their creative ability.

Clay Work

The division in clay work has devoted itself largely to modeling. Nancie Greenman, Mitchell Jakubowski, Clementine and Charles James are exhibiting pieces of good pottery. Birds, animals, figures and toys have been modeled. Elizabeth Main has a spirited cat, and the younger children have made models of houses. Susan French, whose house is perhaps the best, has also completed a pretty plan for a formal garden. Ruth Prentice, Dorothy Diachyshyn, Vivian Bolduc, and Elizabeth Main, fashioned cottages with trees. Arabelle Lyman and Geraldine Waldo chose for their houses medieval castles: One is built on a rocky hill and the other has a moat for protection. Mary Mero has specialized in modeling and has made careful studies.

Drawing, Composition, Sketch

The north wall of the gallery is devoted to the work of the classes in drawing, under the instruction of Miss Margaret Triplett.

The center panel shows work of the sketch class, and features gay water colors, painted by Elinor Moore, Eleanor Dart and Carlotta Damon. The smaller free brush drawings which are shown have been selected from many made by the class in one afternoon when each member of the class posed to represent a character in a fairytale. The costumes were improvised, each pose was held for about twelve minutes. Freedom of drawing and beautiful color are found in the work of Glorianna Gill, Gertrude Church, Daniel O'Neil and Eleanor Sargent.

Silhouettes of Chinese subjects, made in the composition class, are the work of Daniel O'Neil, Leona Giguere, Priscilla Hough, Elinor Moore, Carlotta Damon and Glorianna Gill.

Daniel O'Neil, a senior in the Academy, deserves special mention for his original and spirited work in watercolor. A composition entitled "The Circus," is indicative of his ability.

Elinor Moore, '31, has done well in watercolor, and in strong line drawings. Glorianna Gill, also of the upper middle class, shows much artistry in her drawing.

Eleanor Dart, of the lower middle class, '32, has done good work in drawing, design and history of art. Her line is sensitive and firm, disclosing unusual power in observation and an artistic appreciation.

A still life in water color by Kirkner Bailey, '33, is full of promise. Caroline Noyes and Alice Barnes have also done good work in junior drawing.

History And Appreciation Of Art

The work of Miss Leavens' classes in history and appreciation of art is displayed in the photograph room on the third floor of Slater Memorial museum.

As heretofore the exhibit is made up of pages from the students' note books, illustrating the courses in Egyptian and Greek art, Italian painting and sculpture and architecture.

In connection with the latter course the students have carved architectural details in ivory soap. Particular attention is called to the pencil drawings of Miss Eleanor Dart, and the lettering of Miss Carlotta Damon—both first year students—also to the work in color and black and white of Miss Barbara Rowland in the second year class. The work of Miss Leavens' class is always of great interest and discloses the enthusiasm and application which her pupils give to their work.

Metalry

There is a modern tendency in much of the work of the craftsmen working with Miss Aida Watrous. There is much that is conservative, but in all the work a fresh impulse is felt. The classes in both pottery and jewelry have produced varied and colorful pieces. The trend in jewelry has been toward costume ornament, although numberless rings have been made by the younger group of students. Margaret Ray, Lloyd Potter, Benjamin Shanley, Arthur Cutz, I. Yoselevsky and Edith Wheeler have made especially good pieces. Black onyx, carnelian and intaglios have been used in settings. A brooch original in design, but Etruscan in feeling, has been beautifully executed by Miss Jean Hamlet. A silver chain by Miss Barbara Taylor and a brooch of Celtic origin by Miss Sherman are simple, refined and of sound craftsmanship. A mahogany box has been decorated in bright pewter by Mrs. Knup. The rings, brooches, and neck chains, by Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Sudlow, Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Goodyear and Miss Ufford, are conservative and well done. Pewter spun on the electric driven lathe is attractive and beautiful. Lloyd Potter, Benjamin Shanley and Thomas Sample are represented by bowls, plates, salad sets and trays.

Ceramics

The attention given to ceramics during the past few years, not only has increased, but shows marked growth. The examples shown serve to illustrate how strong this growth is. The varied interests of the individual workers and the freedom from constraint is evident. Some have produced pieces largely with slip molds, in order to devote time to color and to glaze combinations. Others have used coils of clay placed one over another and have built pieces in beautiful proportions; and as heretofore some students have worked only on the potters' wheel, producing large and effective vases. Of special accomplishment are the pieces wrought by Mrs. Allis, Mrs. Browning, Mrs. Coyle, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. J. P. Huntington, Miss Trumbull, and Miss E. Huntington. Five of the Sisters of Nazareth have formed one of the most diligent classes of the year. In view of the fact that the Sisters were unfamiliar with work in clay, their progress and achievement has been remarkable. Their pieces are distinguished by simplicity, restraint, and sound workmanship. The group of Spanish water jars both glazed and unglazed are an excellent example of their work. Clay making for the year has been under the efficient management of Mrs. Claude Wilson. She has prepared hundreds of pounds of clay for use in the school, and prepared clay for eight other high schools in Connecticut. Walter Krukowsky and David Isham have made the glazes for use with these clays.

Design

There have been 85 students registered in Miss Loring's classes in first year design. From the exhibition of her students' work one can judge the excellent results which she has obtained. The students have worked with enthusiasm and have covered a good deal of ground. The work is brilliant in color, strong in pattern, and free in treatment.

The first of the year was given to lettering, and to the study of color. Later in the year principles were applied to a variety of problems, tiles, repeats, lunettes in stained glass, and decorative panels. Conspicuous in the twenty odd designs for printed fabrics are those made by Helen Duch, Annette Morse, Pauline Kreciglowen, Mildred Brodeur, Dorothy McClure and Alex Mekoslick. In the group of tiles there is work by Beatrice Eggleton, Helen Main, Diana Zachem and Chester Pickarski. Repeating square patterns show a variety of designs, and are represented by the work of Eleanor Barrey, Florence Bellows, Chester Pickarski and Lawrence Deauville.

The upper classes in design have also given attention to lettering. An illumination entered by Olive Rathbun, '30, is beautiful in spacing and in workmanship. The panel by Gertrude Church, '30, is strong and individual in treatment.

Evelyn Eccleston and Thelma Meister exhibit designs for plates which are Persian in spirit and of good pattern. In contrast to these plates are the designs they have made in sparkling colors of full intensity. Margaret Ray's designs for brooches are appropriate and attractive. The work of Carlotta Damon, Eleanor Sargent and Genevieve Bovee, is well represented. Of the Academy students, work of Eleanor Dart, J. Hurinowich, Rose Brown, D. Hinchey, Alice Barnes, Edith Adams, Marie Spicer, and of Hussey, Quinn, and Albertine is shown.

Because of the number of students in the school it is no longer possible to represent the work of each student. The work that is hung is not always the best, but is chosen because it can be combined with other work.

ACADEMY CHORUS RENDERS FINE CONCERT PROGRAMME

The Academy chorus of about 75 members gave its annual concert Wednesday evening at Slater hall, with George Guile, violinist, assisting and Henry J. La Fontaine accompanist for Mr. Guile.

The chorus had an interesting programme, which they rendered with spirit and musical intelligence, under the direction of Frederic H. Cranston, of whose inspiring leadership the well-trained chorus gave evidence. The chorus numbers were well balanced and the sweet, young voices sang with harmonious effect. The accompanist was Miss Elizabeth L. Lyman and Edwin W. Wigley was at the organ.

Mr. Guile's violin solos were delightful parts of the programme and were enthusiastically received by the audience.

SETTLEMENT IS MADE IN DISPUTED CLAIM

By a workmen's compensation agreement in settlement of a disputed claim to which approval has been given by Commissioner A. J. Bailey, compensation in the lump sum of $504.14 is given to Axel Aberg of Taftville, an employe of the Ponemah mills of Taftville. This constitutes final settlement of a claim for compensation made by Aberg as the result of injuries sustained on March 12, 1928, which injury was described as "injured head, left leg." Since the date of injury, Aberg has been receiving weekly compensation at the rate of $19.39.

Aberg contended that he is still disabled as a result of his injury and he sought further compensation for his alleged further disability.

The insurance company and employer which constitute the respondents in the case contended that all the factors that gave rise to Aberg's disability as a result of his injury of March 12, 1928 have ceased and that whatever disability is now present is unrelated to and not connected with his original injury but is due to old age. Aberg being 73 years old.

NORWICH MEETING IN ALLIED JEWISH CAMPAIGN

Leading Jewish citizens of Norwich are now actively engaged in preparations for a drive to raise $8,000 which is that city's quota in a national fund-raising effort to raise $6,000,000 by the Allied Jewish campaign. This sum will be applied for the American Jewish Joint Distribution committee's reconstructive work on behalf of the destitute Jews of eastern Europe and for the programme of the Jewish Agency for Palestine to aid in the development there of a Jewish homeland. This agency is to receive $2,500,000 from this campaign.

Agreement to conduct a unified fund-raising effort for both of these causes was effected at a national conference in Washington on March 8 and 9.

The Norwich campaign is to be inaugurated with a mass meeting next Sunday at the Wauregan hotel at which there will be a prominent speaker.

SPOKE AT MEETING OF VEGETABLE GROWERS

Prof. E. A. Wilkenson, vegetable specialist at Connecticut Agricultural college, was the speaker Wednesday evening at a meeting of the Norwich Vegetable Growers association at the New London County Farm bureau rooms, Shannon building. Prof. Wilkenson spoke on Cultivating Practices Recommended for Good Crop Productions. After his talk there was a motion picture and a general discussion of everyday problems. This was the final indoor meeting of the season. During the summer months the meetings will be in the form of twilight gatherings at farms throughout the county.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Chase, of Sachem terrace, have as their guests for several days Francis Munroe Endicott and Waldo Friend, who motored from Boston.

A Portland (Me.) man was invited over the telephone to "come over to the corner and I'll buy you a drink" In answer to the cheery voice the man trudged uphill several blocks to a drug store and was treated to a soda—rather to his disappointment. Then the host, who was a constable, proceeded to serve a summons to court in a debt action on his guest.

INDEPENDENCE HALL

In this old "State House" built in 1734 in Philadelphia, now known as Independence Hall, the Declaration of Independence was signed. In its belfry hung the famous "LIBERTY BELL." The building is now a museum where some of the most treasured relics of American history are kept.

ACADEMY WITH 23 POINTS PLACES SECOND IN SCHOLASTIC TRACK MEET

(Special to The Bulletin.)

KINGSTON, R. I., May 21.—Coach Frank Hamlen's Bulkeley high track team from New London won its first Eastern Connecticut Western Rhode Island Interscholastic league championship at the annual meet at Rhode Island State college today with a total of 31 points. Norwich Free Academy, last year's titleholder, was second with 23 points and Westerly high and Chapman Tech tied for third with 22. Nine schools competed and the remainder finished as follows: Stonington, 17 1-2; Tourtellotte, 10; Windham, 9 1-2; Fitch, 4; Killingly, 1.

Bulkeley Gets Three Firsts.

Bulkeley collected three firsts, Westerly, Chapman Tech, Tourtellotte and Stonington, two each, and N. F. A. and Windham, one apiece.

Capt. Dan Wetmore, and Johnny Priolo were the shining lights in the Bulkeley victory. Each ran on the winning relay team, with Morrissey and Davidson, while Wetmore captured the 440 yard run. Priolo won the 100 yard dash in a great performance.

The meet, which had been shifted to the local track on only a few days' notice, was run off in good shape and under ideal conditions.

Ed Flather, running his first race, proved a big surprise by capturing the 220 yard hurdles in convincing fashion for Norwich's only first of the day. Capt. Berkman and Frank Barber, who had been looked upon to furnish at least one first each, were not up to their usual standard. Barber took second in the discus throw, but was dethroned of his shot put league championship when he failed to place in that event. Berkman, bothered by a leg injury sustained in a fall Monday at practice was only able to gain third places in the 220 yard dash and 220 yard hurdles as compared to his recent high scoring performances. Beebe ran well to finish second in the 880 yard run.

Chubbuck High Scorer.

The high scorer for the way was not a boy of the leading teams, but Chubbuck, from Tourtellotte Memorial high of North Grosvenordale, a brother of Dan, the Conn. Aggies one-man track team. He took first in both the shot put and discus throw for a total of ten points.

One of the prettiest races of the day, although the time was slow, was seen in the mile run, which Cotter, of Westerly, carried with Miner, of Chapman Tech, second. These boys are veterans of their respective squads. The time was 4 min. 53 seconds.

Priolo of Bulkeley, showed the best form of the season in winning the 100 yard dash. Deutsch, of Westerly, was second, and Dolan of Chapman Tech, got no better than third. Dolan, however, came into his own by capturing the 220 yard dash, in which Deutsch, of Westerly, was again second.

In the half mile relay Bulkeley and N. F. A. fought a great duel that saw the Wildcats get away to a bad start only to have Lenkiewicz and Holden run great 220's to pick up much of the distance.

Summaries:

440-yard run—Wetmore (B), Davidson (B), Winkler (F), Miseveth (Wind.). Time 54.3 seconds.

RUTH SLAMS THREE HOMERS AS A'S TAKE DOUBLE BILL

PHILADELPHIA, May 21—(AP)—Before 30,000 fans, the champion Philadelphia Athletics turned back the New York Yankees in both games of a double header today. Although Babe Ruth added one more record to his home run hitting feats by connecting for three circuit blows, the Mackmen won the first game 15 to 7. Rube Walberg pitched them to a 4 to 1 victory in the second.

Ruth became the first major league player to hit three home runs in a game on three different occasions by nicking George Earnshaw for two on his first two trips to the plate and getting another off Bob Grove in the eighth inning. But the Athletics wiped out a six run lead and won the game by rallying for nine runs in the seventh inning.

Ruth's three homers gave him the American league lead with nine for the season while Jimmy Foxx took second place by hitting his eighth.

Al Simmons and Jimmy Dykes continued the four base clouting to bring in three Philadelphia runs in the second game while Walberg allowed the Yankees only five hits. Vernon Gomez yielded both long clouts before McEvoy replaced him in the seventh.

WASHINGTON STAYS ON TOP WITH DOUBLE WIN

WASHINGTON, May 21—(AP)—Sam Jones and Ad Liska led their Washington teammates through the ranks of the Boston Red Sox today for two decisive victories, the first 10 to 2, the nightcap 6 and 1.

While Jones held the Sox to seven scattered hits in the opener, his team got in 16 safeties including two three baggers and three doubles. Sam Rice, hard hitting outfielder, batted an 800 mark for five times at bat.

Liska allowed but six safeties in the second game, while his teammates made the most of six walks yielded by the Boston moundsmen.

CLEVELAND, May 21—(AP)—The St. Louis Browns opened their four-game series with the Indians here today by taking the first game 6 to 5. The Browns came from behind with a four-run rally in the sixth at the expense of Wesley Ferrell, ace of the Cleveland staff, and never relinquished the lead after that.

The Indians drove Fred Blaeholder from the mound under a three-run attack in the seventh but Crowder stopped that rally and then checked another outbreak in the ninth with one run. The score:

PENA WINS JUDGES DECISION OVER AL BEAUREGARD IN FEATURE BOUT

Johnny Pena of New York gained the referee's decision over Al Beauregard of Taftville, New England bantamweight champion, in the feature bout of ten rounds at the Shyma club outdoor boxing show held Wednesday evening at the J. B. Martin grounds in Taftville. This fight proved to be the best of the evening's card, which on the whole met with the favor of the practically filled arena. The show was blighted, through no fault of the management, by the behavior of Bob Adams, a substitute, who took a nose dive in the first round.

In the semi-finals Eddie Reed of Hartford was awarded the decision over Jose Routis of San Francisco, as the result of the latter injuring his right hand in the sixth round. The bout was scheduled for eight rounds. Ray Myers of Brooklyn, N. Y., was given a knockout over Bob Adams of New Jersey in a six-round preliminary, while Pat James of Providence easily beat Long Sing Que of New York in another six-round preliminary. In the opener Ted Blanc of Montville lost a close decision to Julio Rossi of Westerly.

Beauregard Beaten by Pena

The star bout of the evening between Beauregard and Pena provided the fans with a large amount of slugging and jabbing with the Taftville boy being on the receiving end more than his opponent. Both boys took considerable punishment from start to finish with the New Yorker jabbing his way to a victory, while the Taftville midget kept himself wholely to slugging. Pena turned out to be one of the cleverest boys that the Frenchman has met during his ring career, not only having a good defense, but was capable of using either fist.

Pena had unusually good control of his left mitt, using this to good advantage, jabbing it into Beauregard's face almost at will, and with good effect. His blows upon the Frenchman's button were so frequent that they finally drew blood and Al fought the best part of the fight with his nose bleeding profusely. Al also made good use of his powerful mitts and at times plastered Pena with good, heavy cracks, but these did not materially tire the New Yorker, who was in tip top condition, and withstood his blows, some of which carried enough steam to knock out any fighter. In the last two rounds the titleholder made a strong bid to knock out Pena, but his efforts were futile. Weights, Beauregard 117, Pena 118.

Reed Gets Decision

Eddie Reed of Hartford continued his winning streak by gaining a decision over Jose Routis of San Francisco in the semi-final bout, which was scheduled for eight rounds, but was stopped at the end of the sixth as the result of the latter hurting his right hand in that stanza. Routis put up a good fight, but was outclassed by the clever leather pusher from Hartford, who won every round but the second. In the first two rounds Reed, who is seeking a bout with Beauregard, did not look so hot, but after that he evidently found out his opponent's style of fighting and rained blows upon Routis, who was inclined to wait for his opponent and not carry the fighting. Routis weighed in at 119 and Reed at 118.

Myers Wins by Kayo

Ray Myers of Brooklyn, N. Y., did not have a chance to show the fans why he was crowned former national amateur featherweight champion for his opponent, Bob Adams of New Jersey, who was substituting for Eddie Ziegler of Newark, whom it was announced suffered a broken hand, had a streak of yellow down his back a mile wide. Adams tore into the ring in the first like a wild bull with both hands covering his face, and did not attempt to strike a blow upon the former champion, who waded into him with a few blows to the head and he went down. Adams was up again in a few seconds and was struck another blow, going down for the count. The fight lasted about a minute. Myers weighed 126, Adams 129.

James Awarded Decision

As Rene Peloquin of Danielson received a cut over the eye in training for this fight a substitution was necessary and the last minute choice of the Shyma officials was Pat James of Providence, who stacked up against Long Sing Que, the fighting Chinaman and won an easy decision. James, who is fighting his way through college, is a smart, flashy fighter and won every round from the Chinaman. James was as quick as lightning, getting in there with a right or left and landing it to good effect before the Chinaman had a chance to say I. The Providence boy had beautiful foot work, but at times tried to make an exhibition of it.

Blanc Loses by Small Margin

Julio Rossi of Westerly took a close decision from Ted Blanc of Montville in the opener, during which both fighters mixed it up in good shape. The Montville fighter received several good pelts, but they did not seem to bother him, and went at his opponent looking for more and landing a number himself. Had Blanc been in better condition the fight probably would have turned out differently. He had several layers of fat on the abdomen.

Between the bouts the fighters, who were to have appeared and were compelled to drop out because of injuries, were introduced by the announcer, Harold Pimypton. Joe Williams of New Bedford who was scheduled to meet Jose Routis and had to be replaced by Eddie Reed the last minute, challenged the winner for a bout to be held at a later date. Frank Petroll of Hartford acted as referee.

TORONTO, May 21—(AP)—With a finish characteristic of champions, the touring Glasgo Rangers, holders of the Scottish cup, won their first game in Canada today, defeating Ulster United of the local National Soccer league 4 to 3.

Nine thousand spectators saw the visitors extended for the greater part of the play. With seven minutes to go Ulster United held a 3 to 2 lead. The Scottish forwards took command of the situation, however, and tallied two quick goals on brilliant passing and timely shooting. The teams were deadlocked 1 to 1 at half time.

NEW YORK, May 21—(AP)—The Giants found their batting eyes again today to defeat the Phillies for the sixth straight time this season, mixing eleven timely hits with nine walks for an 11 to 4 victory.

Fred Fitzsimmons managed to outlast three Philly pitchers to turn in his first victory since the Giants returned from the west. Pat Crawford was the most effective hitter, knocking a home run within the grounds and a triple with the bases full. Fred Leach made four hits in five times at bat and Mel Ott drove out his seventh homer of the year with two on base. The score:

ROBINS HIT HARD BEHIND VANCE TO WIN 12 TO 1

BOSTON, May 21—(AP)—With Dazzy Vance pitching brilliantly and his mates hitting hard when hits counted the most, the Brooklyn Robins scored their fourth straight victory today, defeating the Boston Braves 12 to 1. Vance kept ten hits well scattered and fanned seven to win his third successive start.

The Robins started their heavy hitting in the first inning when Del Bissonette hit a home run off Burleigh Grimes' delivery with two on base to give Brooklyn a four run lead. Grimes gave four more runs in the sixth on two hits, two walks and two errors. The Robins bunched five hits for another quartet of runs in the seventh with Johnny Cooney pitching for Boston.

Singles by Maranville, Richbourg and Sisler in the eighth enabled the Braves to escape a shutout.

Pride—still impels the achievement of the Best

"Copper Fastened"

"SEE that schooner laying over yonder!" said an old shipbuilder beaming with pride. "Well, sir, the man I built her for was going to be satisfied to have her fastened with iron. 'No, sir,' said I. 'If I build her she's going to be doweled and copper fastened.' 'What's it to you? It's my vessel,' said he. 'What's it to me? It's my self-respect; it's my pride in my trade,' said I. 'It's my reputation for building only the best that can be built.'"

Conscientious pride in the achievement of the best still lives. It is the spirit upon which in 1874 at Manchester, New Hampshire, Roger G. Sullivan laid the foundation of 7-20-4—now the largest strictly hand-made cigar industry in the World. It is the same spirit that today—after fifty-six years of public confidence—refuses to lower its standard of workmanship and tobaccos at the sacrifice of the finest cigar Quality.

GIANTS PROCURE CRITZ FROM REDS IN TRADE FOR PITCHER LARRY BENTON

(By Brian Bell, Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, May 21—(AP)—A pair of big baseball shoes, standing practically emty around second base at the Polo Grounds, since Frankie Frisch and Rogers Hornsby went away, were filled today by a little fellow from way down in Mississippi. The Giants announced that Hughey Critz had been procured from the Cincinnati Reds in a trade for Larry Benton, right-handed pitcher.

Critz, by more or less unanimous concent for the last six years, has been acclaimed the best defensive second baseman in the National league. The Giants, after long boasting parity with or advantage over other clubs in the league at the important pivotal spot of the infield, fell into evil days when Frisch was traded for Hornsby and the Rajah in turn passed on to Boston.

For years Larry Doyle reigned supreme. Frisch was Fordham's gift to the Giants, and then came Hornsby for a brief season. The Giants had Thompson, now a Phillie star, but parted with him while Hornsby was on the job.

In 1928 and 1929, Andy Cohen and Andy Reese divided the position between them, without conspicious success. This year, the second base job has been given out on a piece work basis to Eddie Marshall and Pat Crawford.

The coming of Critz to the Giants breaks up one of the greatest double play combinations baseball has known. Horace Ford teamed with Critz in pulling spectacular defensive stunts, helping the Reds set a new record of 194 double plays for the 1928 season. In a game against the Giants in 1925, they made six double plays, tying the record.

A coincidence is that the two players figuring in today's trade were teammates on the Memphis club of the Southern association in 1922. Neither had extended experience in the minors when they came to the majors within a year of each other.

Critz was graduated from Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical college, in 1920, the school that has engaged Red Cagle as a football coach. Critz played for his home town of Greenwood, Miss., until he was sold for $2,000 to Memphis. He was sold to Minneapolis in 1923 for $12,000 and Doc Prothro, now Memphis manager, and in 1924 went to the Reds for $30,000.

Benton started his career with Portsmouth in the Virginia league and joined the Boston Braves in 1923. He remained there until June 12, 1927 when he was traded to the Giants, with Taylor and Thomas for McQuillan, Farrell and Greenfield.

Benton won 25 games and lost six in 1928 when his earned run average per nine innings was 2.73, but last year he won only 21 while losing 17 with an average of 4.14. In seven years of major league pitching he has won 91 games and lost 70.

This year Benton has been credited with one victory and charged with three defeats.

Critz batted only .247 last year but his six year batting average is .282. His best year was 1924 when he hit for .322. In 1928 he batted .296. This year he has been hitting at a .239 pace.

Little Hughey is a soft spoken young man of 29 years with keen wit and high intelligence.

The smart Benton knows how to pitch and a change of uniform may restore his mastery over National league batsmen. He is 32 years old and in going to Cincinnati will be returning home. He was born and reared in the Ohio city and now makes his off season home there.

Frigidaire Features.

Another sure sign of rain—the ache in grandma's back—promises to become less dependable. Tomorrow's grandmothers, according to signs of the times, will have no backaches, due for the most part to labor-saving devices in common use today.

Grandmother's daily housework used to include scrubbing the floor on hands and knees, stooping over the kitchen range to get at the oven underneath, bending low to get food out of her icebox, wielding the dust cloth bout the lower portions of the furniture and other strenuous tasks, according to Carl W. Brown, local Frigidaire dealer.

"Long-handled dust mops, scrub brushes with handles, kitchen ranges with the oven waist-high, and similar improvements in the design of housekeeping equipment have benefited the woman of today. "One of Frigidaire's outstanding features is that its shelves are waist-high to avoid tiresome stooping," he said.

"Because the compressor unit is located in the bottom of the cabinet, shelves are placed where they are has a doubled advantage. Contents of the food shelves are easily reached and at the same time the compressor unit is located where the air is coolest, thus assuring maximum efficiency in its operation.

"The flat top, so provided, makes an ideal service shelf. Finished in marproof poreclain, it can be used for all such purposes without fear of damage."

POETRY

Fall In Love With Life

You've a chip on your shoulder?
Forget it!
The frogs and the blackbirds are here.
The wordd has aplenty to fret it,
Go pick dandelions, my dear!

The hens—listen how they do cackle!
The farmer is plowing his land.
Go bring out the old fishing tackle
And dig in the dirt or the sand.

Don't go into politics butting!
Don't start some new panic or strife.
The season is ready for putting;
Get out in the country and hike!

And now that they've taken the census,
You've probably had the last word.
Slip out where they climb over fences—
Try whistling the songs of a bird!

From potions and pills we are dizzy,
We're fed up on tonics—oh, boy
Let's hunt up a shade and get busy
And plant us a garden of joy!

—Kansas City Star.

I Want To Go

I want to go—Where? No one thinks—
I dream some Fairy spot
Where no man sighs between his winks,
And sorrow is forgot—
Where smiling sunlight turns the gray
Locks brown, or gold, or black,
And smooths the wrinkles all away,
And brings the dimples back.

Unless by laughter made—
Where weary Care forever sleeps—
And Roses never fade;
Or if they shatter ere they fall,
To dewy buds return—
Where happiness enough for all,
No soul is left to yearn.

Where skies are always blue—
Where no smart aches and no heart breaks
For all the hearts are true;
I long to go—I pine to go
Where Life's a wakeless dream,
Eternity untouched by woe,
And joy no fitful gleam.

—Samuel Minturn Peck in Boston Transcript.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"What would you do if a horse fell into your bathtub?"

"I'd pull the plug out."

Frank—I don't see how you tell those Smith twins apart.

Hank—That's easy. Mabel always blushes when we meet.—Tiger.

"You must love your wife; you never let her go out of your study."

"If I did she would go into the kitchen and cook."—Lustige Kolner-Zeitung.

Jimmy (four years)—Mamma! I just saw a rat!

Mamma—No, Jimmy, it's just imagination.

Jimmy (a little later)—Mamma! Has imagination a long tail?

Mrs. O'Brien—"Was your old man in comfortable circumstances when he died?"

Mrs. Finnegan—"No, 'e was under a train."—Judge.

The wife had been put on the budget plan. At the end of each month she and her husband would go over the accounts together. Every once in a while he would find an item, "L. O. K., $3," and a little further on, "L. O. K., $6."

Finally he said, "My dear, what is this—'L. O. K.?'"

"Lord Only Knows," she replied.

A new minister was scandalized to observe the old verger who had been collecting the offertory quietly extract a two-shilling piece before presenting the plate at the altar rail.

After the service he called the old man to account.

The verger was puzzled for a moment, and then a sudden light dawned on him.

"Why, sir, you don't mean that two shillings of mine? Why, I've led off with that for the last fifteen years!" —Montreal Star.

KALEIDOSCOPE

Metals may be made proof against acids and other corrosive agents by an enamel coating.

German is spoken by more people than any other European language, and Russian ranks second.

Rust-resistant steels and irons for automobiles hub caps, radiator caps, and trim are gaining in use.

In ancient China tamed deer were used to draw carriages, says Dr. Berthold Laufer, of the Field Museum.

Trachoma, a disease of the eyes which is prevalent among southwestern Indians, is believed to have been first introduced into that region by early Spanish settlers.

Omnibus eggs are the usual thing with a hen owned by Mrs. George Fyre, of East Orange, N. J. The hen lays eggs three inches long and almost two inches in diameter with two and three yolks. One egg hatched Siamese twin chickens that soon died.

One of the most unusual appendicitis operations in South Dakota was performed at Pierre when physicians removed thirty-six shotgun pellets from the appendix of a patient. The presence of the pellets was thought to be caused from eating pheasant meat.

A used airplane shop to cater for those who can not afford a new plane, and who wish to buy a certified reconditioned ship, has been opened near the Los Angeles Metropolitan airport. S. L. Erickson, the proprietor, is a pioneer in the used plane business in southern California.

Robert Miller's French teacher at Altoona (Pa.) high school may discover a marked improvement in the twelve-year-old boy's ability to speak the language. When Miller was injured in an automobile accident he was irrational for hours and during these periods spoke nothing but French to nurses, doctors and hospital attendants. Physicians said his French grammar was very good. Robert has recovered and will return to school soon.

R. W. Cooke, manager of the Y. M. C. A. hotel at Chicago, says 92 per cent. of the men who pass through the hotel are honest. The hotel has been in existence for fourteen years, and in 1929 it served an average of 2,239 men a day. Occasionally among the transients are men who need money. The executives of the Y. M. C. A. sometimes lend money, and it is from these loans that their statistics come. There have been 35,426 loans and 92 per cent. have been repaid. All loans are character loans, necessarily, for most of the men have no collateral to present. In 1918 the repayments were as high as 97 per cent.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

United Music Company

The United Music company, with stores in Brockton, Plymouth, Taunton, Webster, Fall River and Rockland, Massachusetts; New London, Willimantic and Norwich, Connecticut; Providence, Olneyville and Westerly, Rhode Island, has purchased the Home Radio company, 718 Pleasant street, New Bedford, Mass.

The United Music company was organized 21 years ago by Charles Popkin and Charles Feldman. Since then the rise of the company has been rapid and today it is the largest radio retailer in New England.

Their methods of merchandising have been copied more than any other retailer in the trade. They handle only nationally advertised products such as Stromberg-Carlson, Majestic, Philco, Radiola, Victor, Brunswick, Atwater Kent, Fada and Day Fan and their service is second to none in New England.

The policies employed throughout their chain will also be adhered to in their New Bedford store.

Maurice Feldman, the district manager of their Connecticut stores, will be transferred to take charge of the New Bedford store. He will be assisted by John Machol, who is well known to all radio fans in New Bedford and vicinity.

Palace Theatre

"Hold Everything," that scintillating comedy, starring Winnie Lightner and Joe E. Brown, is the feature of Laugh week, carnival of fun, now being observed at the Palace theatre. "Hold Everything" is positively the best musical comedy ever screened and is a sure cure for the blues. If you haven't seen it already don't fail to get to the Palace before the run is over and for the tardy people "Hold Everything" is to be continued through Friday.

Ramon Novarro-Lottice Howell

"Hold Everything" has everything. The scenes are all in technicolor and it is an improved process which makes the coloring more real and more beautiful. And there are Winnie and Joe. Winnie sings her songs and puts them over better than ever. She is Joe's sweetheart and with her rough-housing is quite an Amazon. Joe is a prizefighter and has as many contortions with his face as with his limbs. In the ring he is a scream, on the golf course he is a riot and as a lover he is incomparable.

There is a real fight too and the hero of this bout is none other than the well-known Georges Carpentier. Georges is quite an actor too and is most intriguing as the devoted swain of charming Sally O'Neil. There are other well-known stars in the picture among whom are Dorothy Revier, that enticing blonde who is inclined to be a bit vampish with designs on Joe and Georges. And there is Bert Roach, roly-poly comedian, who as the camp cook, delivers a characterization that is full of laughs. It is he who concocts the famous Schnitzelputzer, a powerful home-brew that sends Joe on a wild tear.

Don't fail to see this production. You can't afford to deprive your laughing apparatus of the greatest chance it has ever had to function and if you will just stand outside the Palace when a show is over and watch the crowds as they come out you will know that this is the funniest show in the world. The short features are comedies too, and it may well be said that every picture is a laugh.

Ramon Novarro—"In Gay Madrid", is the feature which will be shown at the Palace starting Saturday. This is modern romance with a fine cast and many beautiful scenes and six big song hits.

Norwich Symphony Orchestra

The men and women who will play in the Norwich Symphony orchestra, at the concert to be held tonight at Slater hall, deserve great credit for their untiring effort to bring good music within the sphere of all people. The members of the orchestra are musicians living in Norwich and vicinity and have put in months of arduous practice and have now attained a musical coordination which is amazing.

Great credit is also due to Dr. Drago and to Concert-master Walter Lang for their tact and cooperation with the men and women participating in the symphony. The patience and perseverance of the entire organization in the many months of effort in preparing for the concert was indeed worth while by the results attained.

Prominent music lovers believe that the maintenance of a symphony orchestra in Norwich is a great civic boon to the city, and that the symphony ought to be supported by all who believe in the cultural values of Norwich. They have also learned of the proficiency musical attainment of the orchestra and hope that it will be attained by music lovers and friends of civic enterprises. This is also the expectation of the many friends and admirers of Henry La Fontaine who will be the soloist of the concert.

Mr. La Fontaine and all connected with the symphony are offering their services entirely free. The cost of admission is only to defray the large expense incidental to putting on a symphony concert.

Breed Theatre

Norma Shearer's fourth talking picture is now on view at the Breed theatre. It is "The Divorcee," said to be based on Ursula Parrott's "Ex-Wife." Her supporting cast includes Conrad Nagel, Chester Morris, Robert Montgomery, Zelda Sears and other well-known players.

Miss Shearer is seen as Jerry Bernard, daughter of a millionaire, who after three years of married life discovers that Ted, her husband, has recently carried on a liaison with Janice. Bitterly hurt, she forces herself to accept the explanation of her husband that he still loves her only and that the affair was simply an unimportant phenomenon of the current moral code of modern civilization.

When, however, she subsequently meets her husband at his own game and gives herself to his best friend, Ted looks at things in an entirely different light and deserts her. Utterly disillusioned, Jerry abandons herself to a period of free living. After a notorious existence a climax reveals to her the futility of her actions and in an unexpected manner she contrives to win her husband back again.

The plot carries with it several minor situations, including a pathetic interlude in which the husband of a woman whose beauty has been ruined as the result of an automobile accident is torn between loyalty to his wife and his love for Jerry.

Broadway Theatre.

In "Young Man of Manhattan," now playing, the Broadway has one of the best pictures shown locally in many a month. Paramount has here produced a living, breathing, thrilling picturization of the everyday lives of four typical young Americans, so intensely interesting that the many climaxes literally leave you gasping at their naturalness. In the picture you come to know these neighborly youngsters as you know your best friend—closely, intimately. Katherine Brush wrote the story last year as a magazine serial, and it was immediately demanded in book form. Claudette Colbert, more loveable than ever, is a rising movie editor on a big daily, Norman Foster, a screen "find," a peppy sports writer with a gin complex, who loses his heart to the little editor, Charlie Ruggles, avowedly out to drown Volstead, is another reporter on the staff, and "Ginger" Rogers, another newcomer, is a man-hunting society debutante! The stirring life of newspaperdom is cleverly blended with heart-racing shots of sporting life, including the Dempsey-Tunney fight, the St. Louis world's series, the Navy-Princeton football game, the six-day bike races, and through it all runs the golden thread of an everyday little romance, with its joys and sorrows, its clear sailing and its snags.

Laurel & Hardy in their latest "Blotto," are hilariously funny, and "Room 909," a vitaphone special, reveals inside information for wives on many a convention. The latest issue of Fox movietone news completes the program. It is rumored that a dangerous character, heavily armed and desperate, is at large near Norwich, headed this way, and is liable to arrive about Saturday. Variously labelled "The Llano Kid" and "The Texas," he is liable to shoot first and ask questions afterward! The Broadway will keep you posted of his arrival, but in the meantime, be on the lookout!

E. VOLUNTOWN ROOSTER FIGURES ON N. Y. STAGE

Reports were heard Sunday at Mt Misery, that told of the far-flung fame of a one-time Eastern Voluntown rooster, known as Moses, of whose busy life and untimely end, much has been written for The Bulletin. Along the picturesque shores of Beach Pond, there is a number of fine summer bungalows. While most of these are owned locally, there is now and then one belonging to parties from New York. A man was here Sunday from the metropolis, looking over his summer cottage with a view to putting it in order for future occupancy. While trying for a few trout in Mt. Misery brook, this man told his fishing companion about a joke he had recently heard during a vaudeville skit on a Sixth avenue theatre stage that had to do with Eastern Voluntown. Among the properties for this very funny sketch was a great hanghai rooster which strutted around and performed all sorts of remarkable stunts, even to hopping up on a chair back down near the footlights, letting out a most wonderful crow and then making a final hit by singing a bar of Who's Looney Now? "While the audience waved its approval," the New York man said, "one of the stage artists inquired of his partner where he had procured such an extraordinary bird, to which the other replied that it came from Eastern Voluntown, and that his name was Moses." A New York evening paper often publishes the Eastern Voluntown news, copied from The Bulletin.

Miss Marguerite McGowan, during the season's bowling contests at the Jewett City alleys, showed the highest string of the four teams of girl contestants. She was awarded the prize, a silver cup, for the high single of 122 pins. Miss Josephine Giveniskie, with a total of 292 pins, was chalked up as the winner of the highest three.

At the foot of Crooked Hill, near a small stream that runs along beside the road, golden ragwort is in bloom. It is a striking flower, defying domestication, and is easily identified. Stain yellow the white rays of a field daisy, diminish the size of the whole head somewhat, and one has a pretty good likeness of the ragwort. Its generic name is from "senex," an old man, alluding to the silky down of the seeds which is supposed to suggest the silver hair of age.

Have your eyes examined by Dr. C. A. Spear, optometrist. Hours 7 to 9, Friday evening, Anthony block.—adv.

VISITING MASONS ATTEND MT. VERNON LODGE MEETING

Over 100 Masons, including 42 visiting members of the craft from Somerset No. 34 of Norwich, Moriah No. 15, Danielson, and Moosup No. 113, Moosup, witnessed the work in the Master Mason's degree in Mt. Vernon lodge rooms Tuesday evening. During the evening the master, Walter A. Field, turned the gavel over to Worshipful Brother Edwin M. Gray, who conferred the degree in full form. The new degree team came in for many compliments, with the outstanding applause going to Worshipful Brother Norman B. Parkhurst. His wonderful feat of memory included the giving of the second and third lectures in this degree verbatim. Mr. Parkhurst speaks rapidly and the presentation occupied the space of 28 minutes, which accounts for the committing to memory of over 4,000 words. Worshipful Brother Wallace H. Payne at the piano added a much appreciated feature. Following the work of the evening, lunch was served by the officers of the lodge.

POPPY DAY IMPORTANT IN AUXILIARY WORK

Poppy day will be observed Saturday under direction of Miss Rosanna DesJardins and Mrs. Mary Godek. The secretary, Mrs Helen Babcock, of the auxiliary to the Legion post, gave the following statement at the meeting of the auxiliary Monday evening: Received from the sale of poppies May 30, 1929, $140.36. This money has made it possible for the auxiliary to give to disabled comrades pleasures and help in their lives, which without the sale of the poppies would be impossible. These poppies are all made by disabled men who take this way of helping support themselves and oftentimes their families. The following items show how this money is used We have paid out for fruit and flowers in the past year $4.17. At Thanksgiving we gave $10 for holiday cheer at Norwich State hospital and Uncas-on-Thames. At Christmas time we gave $20 to be used toward Christmas boxes for boys in hospitals. All units contribute and this makes it possible for each boy in a hospital to be remembered at this time, including many who are a great distance from home. Also at this time, $10 was given to a young man in a hospital He has a wife and five children and depends greatly on the American Legion and its auxiliary. Ten dollars was given to provide Christmas cheer for children of our boys; $23.22 was spent in buying clothing for those in need; $25 was also spent to make it possible for one of the boys to accept a position. Having received a job after three months of unemployment, he was unable to get where the work was and this money was used for that purpose. The poppy money is kept in a separate savings account and is used only for welfare work among ex-service men and their families. The public has stood by us in this work in years past and we sincerely appreciate the support and are looking forward to the same loyalty again this year when we have our Poppy day, Saturday May 24.

Solenski, third baseman for the Campers, poled out the first home run in the Twilight league games Tuesday evening and was awarded the catcher's mitt offered for the first home run swatter by F. Arremony. L. E. Boucher offers a pair of spiked shoes to the player who gets the most home runs during the season's games.

George A. Ross is also offering a prize for some other record, which is not decided.

Leon C. Boss, of Atlantic, Mass., a railway postal clerk on the Federal express, was a caller at the home of E. H. Hiscox, Tuesday. Mr. Boss, who is a golf expert, was on his way to Plainfield, N. J., where he and Leon Gregg, of Westbrook, and Loyal J. Cooper, of Norwalk, are entered in the spring foursomes These four men at one time ran in the same Boston and New York night line R. M. S. crew.

AS YOU COOK DICED CARROTS YOU CAN EMPHASIZE THEIR FLAVOR DELICIOUSLY BY ADDING a dash of Sugar

Often carrots are tasteless because their original sugar content has been lost by keeping them too long. By adding a dash of sugar at the same time that you add salt, you will restore this goodness. This rule applies to peas and tomatoes as well.

A dash of sugar will heighten the flavor of many familiar, nourishing foods. Use sugar this way in preparing children's meals. You will find the youngsters relishing cereal, stewed fruits and vegetables much more when these foods are flavored with sugar.

Sugar is nature's supreme seasoning. And when used in wholesome desserts, such as puddings and custards, it fills an important place in the diet of young and old. Just ask your doctor about this. Sugar promotes the necessary flow of gastric juices and makes digestion easy and more complete. The Sugar Institute.

This Woman In 4 Weeks Lost 19 Pounds of Fat

Here's a letter written October 21, 1929, by Mrs. Fred Barringer of Lewiston, Montana, that ought to be read by every overweight woman in America.

"Gentlemen: I first saw your advertisements in a Billings, Montana, paper and decided to try Kruschen Salts.

I started taking them every morning as directed as I was very much overweight and wanted to reduce.

I had tried going on a diet but would get so hungry that my diet would not last long, so I decided to give "Kruschen Salts" a fair trial. The day I started to take them I weighed 256 lbs. and at present, which has been just four weeks, I weigh 239 lbs. And I must say, I feel much better. Kruschen Salts had a decided effect upon the quantity of food I took and stimulated my desire to greater activity.

I have recommended Kruschen Salts to many of my friends, in fact, have a number of them taking Kruschen Salts.

May all large people, both men and women, who want to reduce in an easy way, give Kruschen Salts a fair trial. I am sure it will convince any one."

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts four weeks costs but 85c at any drugstore in America.

FOUR OUTSTANDING VALUES AT ALL A&P FOOD STORES

MARKET WAS DULL WITH FINAL PRICES OF IMPORTANT STOCKS OFF ON THE DAY

NEW YORK, May 21—(AP)—The bears found comparatively easy picking in today's stock market. With the exception of rallies in the food and rail shares, which were fairly well sustained, the short interest had the list virtually to itself. Although the close was enlivened by another flurry of covering, final prices of important stocks like U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Westinghouse Electric, General Electric and American Can were off on the day.

However, the market lost none of its professional character and trading again dwindled, totaling 2,078,400 shares, nearly a million and a half below yesterday's volume. Leading commission houses were said to be doing virtually no business with the public, which meant that the floor traders had their own way with prices. The situation was well illustrated by the performance of J. I. Case. Professionals toyed with this issue, whose small floating supply makes it extremely volatile, moving it up a couple of points and then dropping it about 23, only to bring it up 5 points from the low at the close. The net loss was 16 3-4.

Operators for the decline were aided by several items in the day's news. The steel trade reviews were unfavorable, pointing to another decline in both operations and prices, although Iron Age suggested that it was difficult to tell how much of the decline was due to caution rather than to curtailed consumption.

The Iron Trade review pointed out that to unsteady demand and easing prices had been added "the further complication of probably the most drastic freight rate revision in the history of the industry." Reports from Cleveland said that quotations on semi-finished steel had been reduced $1 to $2 a ton.

The most recent car loadings statement revealed another drop. Calumet & Arizona Copper company cut its quarterly dividend to 50 cents from $1.50 and the stock fell about 10 points. Demand for farm machinery was said to be displaying slower tendencies.

Buying of the rails was pushed rather vigorously during the morning and early afternoon and gains of one to three points in Atchison, New York Central, Union Pacific, Rock Island, Southern Railway and Pennsylvania resulted, although several of the group failed to hold the top. Missouri-Kansas-Texas climbed 4 points on the expectation of the initial $1 quarterly dividend, announced after the close, but met with enough profit-taking to cancel most of the rise.

National Biscuit was strong, approaching its year's high. General Motors, in which important accumulation has been reported, found itself a selling target whenever it crossed 50 and was down nearly a point at the close. International Salt, whose directors were said to be contemplating a splitup and an extra dividend, rallied smartly. International Harvester, Eastman Kodak and Johnsville were heavy. American Machine & Foundry made one of its wide swings, soaring 16 points.

The feature of the money market was a concession of a quarter of one per cent in long-term time loan rates. A rise of 3-32 in sterling cables was accompanied by reports that the Bank of England contemplated another reduction in its rediscount rate and that other central banks abroad might do likewise before the flotation of the German bonds, now expected early in June. At present the New York banks are virtually out of debt to the federal reserve, while their deposits are increasing rapidly in the face of the small demand for credit.

Refining sugar prices were reduced 20 points to a 4.70 cent basis. Wheat was up fractionally on a bullish government weather report. Corn eased from 3-8 to 7-8 of a cent. Cotton was quiet and irregular, closing 6 to 7 points lower.

Foreign currencies held generally steady. Aside from the firmer tone to sterling, a feature was a 6 point decline in the Spanish peseta.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, May 21—(AP)—The bond market was lethargic today, returning to its slow pace of the past few weeks after early orders were satisfied.

The stock privilege issues and secondary bonds in the lien group gave a ragged appearance to the market. Best investment bonds in the railroad and utility group moved up slightly. Traders apparently turned their attention to the new financing that was offered this week. Industrial issues slumped.

Trading in foreign bonds covered a wide field, many inactive issues being in fair demand. On the whole, they gained some ground. United States governments were practically unnoticed, Liberty 4 1-4s being the only issue to gain attention.

Atchison General 4s, Rock Island 4s, Erie 5s, Missouri Pacific 5 1-2s, Pennsylvania issues, Southern Pacific warrant 4 1-2s, were active and advanced from 1-4 to 3-4 of a point. Denver Rio Grande 5s rose two points. Railroad convertibles held firm in contrast with most stock privilege issues.

A $30,000,000 6 per cent convertible issue of B. F. Goodrich Co. will be offered tomorrow at 98. Other new financing includes a $8,500,000 5 per cent mortgage bond issue by the Illinois Commercial Telephone company, priced at 95 1-2.

NEW YORK, May 21—(AP)—Hunter S. Marston, president of Banc-America-Blair corporation was elected a director and member of the executive committee of the General Food corporation at the meeting today. During April, Bancamerica-Blair purchased 400,000 shares of General Foods common stock at private sale.

The board of governors of the National Metal exchange has ordered the exchange closed May 30 and 31.

Traffic on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad showed decided improvement in April, according to Frederick E. Williamson, president, but May is running about 10 per cent behind the same month last year. He said he expected the business recovery will be "a little slow."

Steel production is declining much more slowly than usual at this time of year, says the American Metal Market. On the other hand, the review says, there is a likelihood that the upturn after the usual summer slump will be smaller than usual.

Total assets of the United Corporation on May 12 were $412,648,399 including the value of the 1,430,000 shares of United Gas Improvement company's common stock. This total compares with $323,807,177 on December 31. Cash on hand at the recent date was $759,401 against $18,390,280 at the end of last year.

Individual members of the directorate of Columbia Gas & Electric corporation have agreed to deposit about 25 per cent of their holdings under the offer made recently by United Corporation. The directors have also decided to recommend that other holders of the common deposit at least a similar proportion of their stock.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, May 21—(AP)—The curb market was a listless affair today, sales aggregating less than 700,000 shares, and prices moving irregularly and uncertainly. A few natural gas, oil and specialty issues made moderate progress.

Utilities were generally inclined to sag. Electric Bond and Share and American Superpower were active features, and each lost nearly a point. United Light A sold up a little, but lost its gain and closed a shade lower. Associated Gas and American and Foreign Power warrants lost about a point each, Nevada California Electric, however, shot up 7 1-2 points in one of its characteristically wide moves.

Missouri Kansas Pipe Line was a firm spot in the gas issues, rising fractionally to new high ground. National Fuel Gas sold up a point, and other issues moved narrowly. In the oils, Gulf made an extreme gain of 3 points, and closed up 3, net. Cosden and Columbia each lost about a point.

Technicolor was an acutely weak feature in the industrial specialties tumbling nearly 9 points to a record low at 51, and closing at 52. Columbia Pictures lost more than 3 points, and Cooper Bessemer, a firm spot yesterday, sagged a point in profit taking. Deere new stock dropped 4, then rallied 2. Davenport Hosiery reached new low ground for the year. Van Camp Packing, which recently shot up to 16, sagged 1 1-2 points to a new 1930 low at 7.

The Dresser Manufacturing stocks were firm, and Pacific Coast Biscuit rose more than 2 points, duplicating its best level of the year, in sympathy with strength of National Biscuit on the big board. Douglas Aircraft mounted about 2 points.

In the investment trusts, Reynolds rose more than a point to a new 1930 high at 8 1-4, and Chatham Phenix was firm. General capital recorded a new 1930 minimum at 50 1-2.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, May 21— (AP) —Wheat values showed an upward trend today, aided by assertions that the grain stabilization corporation has absorbed much wheat at Buffalo, Montreal and elsewhere east. Furthermore, some speculative purchasing of Chicago wheat future deliveries was credited to the influence of traders who were active in expressing themselves as "bullish on the United States." These men were contending that declines in commodity prices are unjustified by the actual economic outlook. There were also reports current that extensive wheat crop damage southwest, Oklahoma and Kansas in particular, is threatened if the weather becomes unusually hot.

Closing quotations on wheat were firm, 1-4-7-8c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 5-8c off to 1-8c up, oats 3-8-1 1-8c advanced, and provisions varying from 12c decline to a rise of 5c.

It is estimated that ownership of fully 1,000,000 bushels of hard winter wheat at Buffalo, various other lake ports and Montreal, has passed to the national grain stabilization, and that the purchase price has been a little higher than the cost to ship the wheat to Chicago. Another stimulating factor was something of a jump in Liverpool quotations, together with authoritative advices that as a result of the exceptionally small amount of wheat on ocean passage and because of curtailment of British supplies on hand, trans-Atlantic import buying will have to enlarge. It was indicated that the greater part of such purchases would have to come from North America, and that unfavorable wheat crop conditions in Europe are persisting.

Sharp attention was also given to reports from a widely known Chicago crop expert who sent dispatches today from Kansas City saying that as a rule wheat in southern Kansas and in most of Oklahoma has insufficient foliage to conserve soil moisture, and that exhausted condition of roots will require plentiful moisture continually, or that otherwise temperatures hotter than usual will bring about serious crop deterioration. On the other hand, transient setbacks today in the wheat market here were ascribed to increased selling at times from the southwest when prices bulged. The effect of such selling, however, was more than counter-balanced by scarcity of offerings in the final dealings.

Auspicious weather throughout the corn belt did much to handicap friends of higher prices for corn. Oats tended upward on account of tightness which developed in the May delivery.

Provisions were responsive to downturns in the value of hogs.

Closing indemnities: Wheat—July 1.03 3-8-1-2, 1.05 5-8-3-4; Sept. 1.06-1-8, 1.08 1-8; Dec. 1.10 3-8, 1.12 1-2-5-8. Corn—July 78 7-8-79, 80 1-8-1-4; Sept. 80 1-4, 81-1-8; Dec. 78 7-8, 75-1-8.

LEDYARD

The annual roll call of Ledyard Congregational church was held Sunday afternoon in the vestry. The regular service conducted by Rev. Edward P. Kelly, the pastor, had preceded the roll call and was followed by holy communion and Sunday school. There was an attendance of over 70 at the morning service. The business meeting was opened by singing a hymn, after which Miss Nellie W. Geer, clerk of the church, read the call of the meeting. Rev. Edward P. Kelly was moderator. The roll was called by Miss Geer and there were 57 responses. Miss Geer, as clerk and treasurer of the church; S. E. Holdridge, clerk and treasurer of the Ecclesiastical society; Mrs. John M. Gray, chairman of the Missionary society; Mrs. Edward P. Kelly, chairman of the Woman's board, Mrs. Henrietta Finnegan for the cradle roll, Joseph A. Clark, superintendent for the Sunday school; Carl Holdridge, secretary and treasurer of the Sunday school; Mrs. W. I. Allyn, for the Ladies' Aid society; Paul Holdridge, president of the Young People's Christian Endeavor society presented their reports. These reports of the different activities of the church were accepted. Miss Nellie W. Geer was re-elected clerk and treasurer of the church. The music committee, with the addition of Mrs. Edward I. Kelly, was re-elected, as was also the same church committee. Carl H. Holdridge was elected a deacon of the church. A bountiful dinner furnished by the Ladies' Aid society of the church was served. The exercises closed with singing God Be With You Till We Meet Again.

James F. Connelly, of Norwich, supervisor of Ledyard schools, gave a very interesting talk on Japan at Ledyard grange meeting Friday evening. Mr. Connelly spent some time in Japan. He was given a rising vote of thanks for his splendid talk. Mr. Hartung of Gales Ferry played several selections on the piano and harmonica at the same time. He had a frame which passed around his head and the harmonica was enclosed in this. His playing was interesting and he was also given a rising vote of thanks.

A strawberry short-cake supper is planned in the vestry.

SGT. NELSON SMITH, NEW LONDON, HELD IN $2,000 BAIL FOR SIMS SHOOTING

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 21—Coroner Edward G. McKay, Norwich, came to New London last night when informed that Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith had shot and killed Gordon Sims, 35, automobile mechanic, who was fleeing from arrest after having brutally assaulted the officer. Coroner McKay arranged for a preliminary hearing, which was held from 11 until 1:30 o'clock today. He adjourned the session by announcing that the hearing would be resumed Friday at 2:30 in the police court room, at which time witnesses he had caused to be summoned would relate their version as to what occurred during the time that Smith placed Sims under arrest at Jimmie's tire station, Crystal avenue and the attack upon Smith by the prisoner, together with the firing of the fatal shot. Coroner McKay also ordered Smith, who had been temporarily suspended from duty pending the inquest, to be held in bail of $2,000; this was furnished by Louis Eitenbein. Smith was technically placed under arrest early this morning by Lieut. James C. Sullivan, but he was not held a prisoner, although booked at police headquarters. Smith was permitted to go to his home on Rogers street, where he remained the balance of the night and this morning he appeared at police headquarters. He remained in close touch with his superior officers the balance of the day and until he was placed under bond, when he went to his home.

The arrest and killing of Sims was indirectly due to his having wrecked the home of W. O. Burhoe, of Crystal avenue, last June. Had Sims, who was married refrained from alienating the affections of Mrs. Burhoe the slaying last night would not have occurred. Sims became estranged from his wife and last May he went to Burhoe's home as a lodger. Then domestic troubles between Burhoe and his wife started. When Burhoe realized the intimacy between the man and woman that Sims had taken her husband's place in the affections of his wife, together with the fact that Mrs. Burhoe was known to be spending money for Sims' clothing, etc., Burhoe went to the office of Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer and related his story. Sims was summoned to the office of the prosecutor and was advised to vacate the Burhoe house if he desired to avoid prosecution. Instead of heeding the advice of the prosecuting attorney Sims continued to reside at the Burhoe home. When another complaint was received by the prosecutor the latter issued a warrant for Sims' arrest on a charge of breach of the peace. The warrant was served on Sims May 5 and the following day in the police court, Sims assured the court that he would leave the Burhoe premises without further delay. Again Sims failed to keep his promise. May 18 Burhoe went to his home and was unable to obtain admission. He was satisfied that his wife was at home and went a short distance from the house where he maintained a watch. When Sims came out a short time later, Burhoe remonstrated with him for frequenting the house, whereupon Sims attacked and beat Burhoe, inflicting among other injuries a fractured nose. Prosecuting Attorney Boyer issued another warrant for Sims' arrest, but in the meantime, Sims and Mrs. Burhoe left the city.

Recently Sims returned to New London and when Burhoe learned that the man who had broken up his home was at the garage, he communicated that fact to Sergeant Smith who was at his home. The officer went to police headquarters, obtained a warrant and proceeded to the garage. There he met Burhoe and the two men went to the rear of the building where Sims was found standing in the entrance. Smith informed Sims that he was under arrest, also acquainted him with the nature of the charge. Sims was surly, but started to accompany the officer to police headquarters. When Smith and his prisoner reached the sidewalk where the officer's auto was in waiting, Sims demanded that Smith display his authority for arrest and the officer showing his shield, when Smith believed Sims was about to enter the auto, the latter turned and attacked the detective. Sims landed several blows on the officer's face and being a man over six feet in height and weighing close to 220 pounds, the blows carried punishment. One blow felled the officer and while Smith was on one knee, Sims pulled a flashlight, larger than the ordinary light, which he undoubtedly intended to use as a weapon, and which Smith probably believed in his dazed condition was a revolver. Smith grabbed his own revolver and fired at Sims, the bullet entering the flesh, but not deep, near the ribs on the left side and passing out near the breast. Sims then started to run and as he did so Smith fired another shot. The missle struck Sims opposite the left ear and entering the skull, took an upward course, passing through the brain and lodging at the top of the skull. Sims fell unconscious, face down, on a pile of metal, sustaining a laceration that opened the face from ear to chin.

Smith then took charge of his prisoner, but the shooting attracted a crowd. A police car in which was Sergeant Patrick Murphy and several officers was parked less than two blocks from the location of the shooting and had passed the garage about five minutes before. A trolley employe informed the officers of a crowd collected on Crystal avenue and the car was speeded to that thoroughfare. Sims was placed in a commandeered auto and was rushed to Lawrence-Memorial hospital, but he lingered but a few minutes.

During today Sims' wife decided to take charge of the body and through a relative has made arrangements for its final disposition.

Sims was not a native of New London. He was an ex-service man. His home was said to be in the south.

CHAS. WIRTH GOES FREE IN STOLEN NEW JERSEY CAR

Charles Wirth, Elizabeth, N. J., was arrested in Groton yesterday by State Officer William E. MacKenzie, charged with the theft of an automobile, but he will not be prosecuted for the offense. Wirth several days ago stole a DeSoto car in Elizabeth and since then had been touring the country. Tuesday morning the fuel became exhausted when the car was at Trail's corner, so Wirth decided to slumber. He climbed to the rumble seat and was sound asleep when aroused by the officer. It then developed that Wirth had stolen the car of a Hire and Drive It concern. He was taken to the police barracks and last night an employe of the company went to Groton and took charge of the auto. As the Elizabeth police did not want Wirth, nor did the owners of the car desire his prosecution, Wirth was released and returned to Elizabeth in the auto he had stolen.

Burning Ties Blamed

Fire that threatened damage was subdued this afternoon when a stretch of underbrush west of the Ocean avenue bridge of the New Haven railroad caught fire. A still alarm was sent to headquarters and Chief Thomas Shipman and Deputy Chief Calvin Edmunds responded. The officers subdued the blaze with brooms. The fire originated when wind carried sparks from ties that were being destroyed by railroad employes.

LAW IS INGENIOUS— NOLLE IN FARACI CASE

Frank Faraci, 147 Shaw street, was in the police court today, charged with violation of the liquor law on two counts, keeping with intent to sell and possession. He was discharged, a nolle being ordered. Not only did he escape a penalty, but the court ordered the return of 15 cases of beer and a small quantity of whiskey seized by raiders. Faraci, a blacksmith, is one of four tenants in the Shaw street house. Last Saturday evening a raiding squad in charge of Sergeant Samuel Hick went to the house and seized the beer and liquor. In court today it was represented that the beer and whiskey was the property of all of the occupants of the building, that they stored it in the cellar for their personal consumption. There was no evidence to dispute the contention of Faraci, neither did the police possess information that Faraci had sold any of the liquor. Because of the absence of evidence to sustain the charges against Faraci, Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer recommended a nolle and it was ordered by Judge Daniel M. Cronin.

Benjamin Denehey, an old offender, was charged last night with begging. He was given suspension of judgment.

David Alter, 15 Perry street, charged with violation of the state law in passing an automatic danger signal, was given a nolle. Alter was arrested last Monday night on Truman street by Patrolman Henry Sylvia.

None of the drivers appeared in court so their respective bonds of $2 were declared forfeited.

Skull Not Fractured

The condition of Joseph Salega, Logger Hill, Waterford schoolboy, who was struck by an automobile driven by Murray Hill, Niantic, yesterday, when the youth, after alighting from a bus at Mossbroker's corner, ran in front of the pleasure auto, is reported today as being considerably improved at Lawrence-Memorial hospital. The boy has not sustained a fractured skull, but is suffering from concussion of the brain.

Community Memorial Service

For years Oneco M. E. church and the I. O. O. F. of Sterling township planned memorial services for the town of Sterling. These services consisted of a Christian Memorial service in Oneco M. E. church and a parade and decoration service at the cemetery, these being held formerly on the Sunday preceding May 30th. It was decided last year that these organizations discontinue planning the parade and service at the cemetery and that this responsibility be given to the American Legion post, located at Moosup, the nearest post to Sterling. The memorial service was to be continued at the discretion of the Oneco M. E. church. The church therefore has invited all churches, fraternal organizations and citizens of the town of Sterling to join in a community memorial service planned for May 30th at 10.15 a. m. in the Oneco M. E. church. An out-of-town speaker has been secured.

C. H. Ricketts. The Bright Jewels sang their opening hymn and the circles answering the roll call were: Charitable, Comfort, Euphemian, Ever Ready, Home chapter, Grace, Loyal and Bright Jewels. There was an attendance of 55.

Miss Charlotte Fowler and Mrs. Leonard C. Prentice sang, their numbers being "Voices of Spring" and "Forget Me Not," with Mrs. Frank Waters playing the piano accompaniments. Miss Dawson and Miss Wattles gave splendid reports of the county conference held at New London.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Leader, Mrs. John Kukla; vice leader, Mrs. Maude A. Wheeler; secretary, Mrs. Arthur R. Blackledge; treasurer, Miss Hattie Carter; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Henry Cole.

NORWICH TOWN

The forty hours' devotion was brought to an impressive close at the 7:30 o'clock high mass Tuesday morning at the Sacred Heart church. The procession of boys and girls at the opening of the devotion Sunday morning was repeated Tuesday, as the choir sang Pange Lingua, "Sing, O My Tongue, the Glorious Message Telling." The long procession preceded the Sacred Host, borne by Father Quinn, the pastor. Mrs. William A. Murphy was at the organ. The decorations on the altar and in the sanctuary were especially beautiful, particularly so in the evening amid the lighted candles. This was under the arrangement of the Altar society. During this period of special grace, many communions were received by the parishioners, as confessions were heard during the afternoons and evenings of the devotion. Rev. Father Quinn was assisted by a number of visiting priests, some from parishes out-of-town. At all masses during the devotion there were large congregations. Benediction of the most blessed sacrament brought the services to a close.

There is to be a patriotic service at the First Congregational church, Sunday morning, which also will include the presentation to the church of a United States flag by the Woman's Relief corps, Mrs. Iola Bjurstrom, president; Mrs. Grace Fowler, patriotic instructor of the corps, to make the presentation speech. Sedgwick post, G. A. R., members will be included in the attendance, as well as the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, of which Mrs. William Bogue is president. During the service, Mrs. Bogue, in behalf of the D. of U. V., is to present a flag to the Congregational Young People's C. E. society.

The president of Norwich Rural association, Willard Haugh, has called a meeting of the association at the Congregational chapel, Monday evening, May 26.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Harkness (Dorothy Harvey) moved recently to their new home on Julian terrace, erected for them during the winter of 1929-1930. Since their marriage last fall, Mr. and Mrs. Harkness have resided at Sunny Side, Yantic, with Mrs. Harkness' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harvey.

A former Norwich Town resident, Charles L. Strong, of Colchester, was a visitor here Tuesday, calling on friends and former neighbors on Town street.

Frank Buckley, of Mystic, accompanied by a friend from Kentucky, was a caller on Dr. Charles H. Lamb Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Buckley and Dr. Lamb were schoolmates at Mystic high school.

DUWELL ROAD RACE OFFICIALS

POLICE OFFICIALS GIVE TESTIMONY IN HUBER TRIAL ON ARSON CHARGE

Testimony about the finding of a bottle said to have contained kerosene in the Turner-Stanton company mill on Broad street, and as to the alleged suggestion of a confession by William S. Huber, bookkeeper for the company, were interesting developments in the superior court here Wednesday on the second day of the trial of Huber on arson charge for the fire in the mill on the night of Saturday, Jan. 25, last.

There have been about 20 exhibits, covering a variety of articles, brought into the case so far, and the kerosene bottle went into the case as an exhibit when it was produced by William H. Sanger of 13 Baltic street, who testified that he found it when he was cleaning up the braider room on the Tuesday following the fire. Sanger said he was working with John Rogers on the clean-up job and the bottle was found in the braider room about 10 or 15 feet from the stairway leading into the basement. Sanger said the bottle contained a small quantity of liquid that smelled like kerosene, when he found it. He was sure the bottle was not there Friday.

Police Officers Testify

Testimony of members of the Norwich police department made up the bulk of the evidence produced in the morning session of court before Judge Allyn L. Brown and a jury, with State Attorney Arthur M. Brown prosecuting the case and Attorney Shapiro of Bridgeport defending Huber.

The trial will be continued today (Thursday). The seats for spectators in the court room hold an interested crowd that follows the testimony closely, many of those in attendance being women.

Sergeant Matthew Delaney of the Norwich police force testified that he learned the books of the concern were missing, when he reached the mill after the fire, and Huber showed him how to open the safe. Huber also gave him a list of the books, which included cash book, sales book, sales classification, general ledger, accounts receivable, journal, financial stock book, minutes of corporation meeting and inventory book.

Huber told him, the sergeant said, that he had seen a light in the lower floor of the mill, while coming along Boswell avenue, and had gone into the building to put it out.

The sergeant told of searching Huber's garage, but finding nothing, while Huber had been sent to the Chelsea lunch with Officer William Burns on an excuse to get some keys. When Huber and Burns got back Huber's car was searched and a book was found under the seat. This book was given to Captain Thomas Murphy at police headquarters.

Officer Edward L. Burns gave testimony as to searching the Huber machine which was parked about 60 to 80 feet from the Turner-Stanton plant. He told of finding the book in the automobile and the book was placed in as an exhibit.

Capt. Thomas Murphy of the local police force testified to going to the Turner-Stanton company after the fire and of sending Sergeant Delaney there. Huber had told him, he said that he had been working on an inventory and books, getting ready for the income tax returns. Huber told him, Captain Murphy said, that he had been over to Kurt Seifert's on Fox Hill where he had played cards and had taken Mr. Smith home with him. Huber said that on his way home he had noticed a light in the mill. Huber took his wife home, put the car in the garage and put out the light. Huber said that there was no evidence of a fire at that time.

When the book was brought in, Captain Murphy said that Huber said: "Where did you get that?" After looking at the book, Huber said: "Oh, that's an old book that's been discarded." Huber said that he presumed it was there in the safe in the afternoon. The captain said that he questioned Huber why this book had been discarded, inasmuch as there was not much writing in it and it looked like a good book. Huber told him that it wasn't the right kind of a book and was not the proper form.

On cross-examination, Captain Murphy said that Huber admitted meeting Officer Farrell in front of the factory that night, and of passing Sergeant Casey and Officer Farrell.

State Attorney Brown questioned Captain Murphy in regard to how Huber had acted when being questioned. It was dark, the captain said, and he could not see his face, but every time he asked a question Huber was jumpy at first and then calmed down.

Sergeant John T. Casey testified that he passed the Turner-Stanton company mill with Officer Farrell about ten minutes to 12. They met Huber directly in front of his house, on Broad street, and Officer Farrell spoke to him. Huber was going toward the factory at the time. No lights were burning in the factory and there were no signs of a fire or smoke coming from the plant.

Within a few minutes afterward, while standing on the street corner a short distance from the factory, the sergeant said that a young fellow hollered from an auto that there was smoke coming from the Turner-Stanton company. Sergeant Casey told of running to the fire alarm box at the corner of Boswell avenue and Broad street and pulling in the alarm.

Officer Joseph Farrell corroborated the testimony of Sergeant Casey. The last witness before recess time was Alexander Chmielewski, of 31 Grant court, a call man of the fire department, who was the one who discovered smoke coming from the factory, and he was the one who notified Sergeant Casey.

Afternoon Session

State Policeman Arthur Whitmarsh of the Groton barracks was the first witness when the afternoon session opened. He said he went to the Turner-Stanton mill on Sunday morning, Jan. 26, when assigned to make an investigation. He also visited the mill in the afternoon and on Jan. 28, he and Officer Hill, Michael Bowen, Ralph Hall and others made a search in the mill. At that time five or six large books were found in the case room.

State Attorney Brown showed the witness a lot of seven charred books, and also the charred remains of a stock certificate book and some minute books, all of which the state policeman identified as the books found in the case room at the mill. He also identified a petty cash book which he said was found in Huber's desk.

The state policeman also identified the kerosene bottle and a book which he said he received from Ned Hall.

A written and signed statement which the state policeman said had been made by Huber at the Groton barracks was produced by Officer Whitmarsh. This made the 15th exhibit in the case.

Substance of Written Statement

State Attorney Brown read the statement to the court.

The statement gave particulars about the management of the concern and told of Huber buying from C. E. Carpenter 29 shares of stock for $2,500, to do which he borrowed $2,100 from a local bank. On the day of the fire, according to the statement, Huber left the factory at 12:10 p. m., and returned there about 4 p. m., working on the inventory until after 5. He was certain that the books were in the safe and the safe was locked when he left. As he drove past the factory on the night of the fire he observed a light in the basement and after he had gone home he went back to the factory and put out the light. This was about 11:50. At 11:58 Officer Farrell came to his house and told him the factory was on fire and when Huber went to the factory he observed the fire in the case room. In concluding the written statement, Huber said he was not in a position to tell where the books are.

When Huber made the statement on Monday, the officer said Huber appeared to be normal. Later when he saw Huber again, Huber didn't want to talk and seemed very much disturbed.

On cross-examination the state policeman said he learned two days after receiving this statement that Huber had made a practically identical statement to Police Captain Murphy of the Norwich department. The witness said he had been at Huber's house when Huber was sick on a couch, but he denied Huber ordered him out of the house.

Talk About Confession

"Didn't you say if he would confess, you would get him off?" Attorney Shapiro inquired.

"No, I didn't. He wanted to make a confession."

"What did Huber say to you?"

"He said," the officer replied, "you're a brother Mason. Supposing I should confess, what would happen? I told him Masonry didn't interfere with my work."

"Didn't you tell him that the Halls were against him and didn't he reply that he didn't believe a word of it but that the Halls had always been his friends and were yet?"

"No, sir."

In response to a question from State Attorney Brown, the state policeman said that the talk about confession was on the way back from New Haven on April 9, the day Huber was arrested there.

Chief Henry R. Taft of the Norwich fire department told of the dense smoke which enveloped the mill at the time of the fire and of measures taken to put out the fire.

Witnesses Recalled

Edward L. Hall was recalled to the stand and identified the kerosene bottle as one that had been given him in the braid room by Mr. Sanger. The witness said he turned the bottle over to Officer Whitmarsh.

Ralph Hall was also recalled and he testified that the book which was given him by Sergeant Delaney had been placed in Edward Hall's car and the sister-in-law of the witness had taken it home. The witness also identified a financial statement of Jan. 1, 1929, which he said had been prepared by Huber and given to the witness in April, 1929, on the condition of the Turner-Stanton company.

Asked about talk about having an audit by Mr. Powers after the fire, the witness testified Huber said it was all right, but they ought to have someone who was a Mason.

Florence R. Hall, wife of Edward L. Hall, testified that she took to her home the book which was found under the seat of Huber's automobile. She said the book was given her by Ralph Hall.

Accountant Gives Figures

Hibberd N. Alexander of New London, a certified public accountant, testified that he was employed by Sergeant Webber of the state police to go through the accounts of the Turner-Stanton company after the fire. This work was done in February.

The witness identified several groups of papers, which he said came from Huber's desk and contained income tax return papers for 1928, 1927 and 1926. Alexander said Huber told him these were his papers and in his handwriting.

The witness was also shown a journal, which he said Huber told him he had not seen for three years, and Alexander said that the figures in the book for 1927 agreed with the figures on the working papers and the income tax papers. The inventory figure for 1926 showed two sets of figures. The first, he said, was $30,791.75 and the second $39,413.25. The income tax return was $40,452.25. Alexander said he asked Huber about this discrepancy and Huber said he couldn't recall.

From the figures for 1928, the witness said the accounts receivable were $22,922.73. This is about $15,000 less than shown in the income tax return. Alexander said Huber answered that he couldn't recall when asked about this discrepancy.

Notes payable in 1928 statement were $8,800, but were $9,600 in the income tax returns.

ADVENTURERS' NIGHT FOR NORWICH-NEW YORK SOCIETY

The Norwich Society of New York, of which J. Olin Howe is president and John Randall Powelson secretary, is to have its annual spring dinner next Monday at the New York Athletic club.

The notice for the meeting says:

"This is to be Adventurers' night with the Norwich society. We shall have with us Harold MacCracken, Arctic explorer and author, whose recent book, "Iglaome," is attracting attention. His fascinating experiences north of the Arctic circle are well worth hearing. We are hoping that he will be able to bring with him the "greatest seafaring man who ever went into the Arctic," who is also author as well as explorer.

"A guest you will especially wish to see and hear is Augustus Post, amateur balloon and airplane pilot, notable figure in the early days of American aeronautics, friend of the Wright brothers and Glenn Curtiss. Mr. Post once dropped 2,000 feet straight to earth after a balloon explosion a half mile up in the air—and lived to tell the tale. Again, when another balloonist and he were winning the Gordon Bennett cup by a thousand-mile flight from St. Louis which landed them far in the fastnesses of Canadian wilds, they were lost to the world for eight days while they made their way back to civilization, famished and footsore. In reality, Mr. Post is almost one of us, for he has relatives in Norwich and has spent much time there.

"Hon. J. Henry Roraback, for years chief of the republican party in Connecticut and leading figure in its national councils, has accepted our invitation to be present and speak for the "Old Home State."

MOLINARO MAKES ESCAPE FROM STATE HOSPITAL

Fortunato Molinaro, 45, made his escape Wednesday afternoon from the Norwich state hospital to which he was committed about a year ago on an indefinite sentence from the superior court when he was before the court on a charge of criminal libel for utterances he made against Judge Allyn L. Brown and court officials.

Molinaro has been a tractable patient at the hospital and occasionally has been allowed to visit his wife who also was committed to the hospital at the same time as he was. Wednesday afternoon he was allowed to see his wife in the company of an attendant and as they were returning through the grounds toward the ward where he is confined, Molinaro took to his heels, outran the attendant and escaped into the woods.

The hospital authorities at once notified police authorities to be on the lookout for Molinaro, who was wearing a suit of blue serge coat and black trousers.

ON NON-SUPPORT CHARGE AFTER JAIL SENTENCE

Completing a jail sentence for a liquor law violation, Paul LaBarre, 35, of Taftville, was taken from the jail Wednesday morning to the city court where he was presented on a charge of non-support. Judge Arthur F. Libby ordered LaBarre to pay his wife $16 weekly or go to jail for three months.

LaBarre's place in Taftville was raided last February but he disappeared at the time. April 21 he was arrested while visiting a sister in Jewett City and was sent up for 30 days.

PLANS TWILIGHT MEETING FOR FARMERS' BENEFIT

County Agent Walter T. Clark of the farm bureau has arranged for a twilight meeting for farmers to be held at the farm of Pisarko brothers, Taftville, Friday evening, at 7:30 o'clock (S. T.) The Pisarko farm, known as the Old Ponemah mill farm, is located near the Taftville reservoir, half way between Harland road and Canterbury turnpike. On the place are 14 acres of exceptionally fine alfalfa, some of it having been sown two years ago and some last year. In addition to this the Pisarko brothers plan to sow seven or eight acres this year. They have been liberal users of lime and super phosphate, which accounts in a large degree for the success in the growth of this crop. They have also done considerable work in pasture improvement which is also showing splendid results. This includes treating permanent pastures with super phosphate and lime and also with sowing of sweet clover. Any dairy farmers interested in good hay crops and good pastures will get much valuable information by attending this twilight meeting.

TO COMPROMISE THE TARIFF BILL FLEXIBLE PROVISION

New Proposal Would Sharply Curtail Presidential Authority—Would Authorize the Tariff Commission to Recommend Rate Increases and Decreases to the President—Calls For His Approval Or Disapproval Within Period of Thirty Days—The Plan Is Said to Have the Approval of President Hoover—Conferees Hope to Reach An Agreement On the Proposal Today.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—(AP)—Adoption by the tariff bill conferees tomorrow of a compromise flexible provision sharply curtailing presidential authority to make emergency rate changes and broadening the powers of the tariff commission was predicted today by republican leaders of the senate and house after another session of the conferees.

The new plan, said to have the approval of President Hoover, would authorise the tariff commission to recommend rate increases or decreases to the president who would be required to approve or disapprove the changes within a period of thirty days. If no action were taken by the executive, the commission's findings automatically would go into effect.

The compromise, all that remains to be settled before a conference report is made to the senate, represents a concession to the senate coalition of democrats and republican independents who favor complete withdrawal of flexible power from the president. But some opposition to it has developed on the ground that it would give the tariff commission legislative power.

Representative Garner, of Texas, the democratic leader and one of the conferees, said he approved of the new plan if the coalition amendment could not be had.

Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, another democratic conferee, withheld approval, however, asserting the tariff commission would be given too much power.

Under existing law the commission merely reports its findings on differences in cost of production to the president and the latter is given the discretion of proclaiming increases or decreases within a limit of 50 per cent of the existing rate to equalize those differences, or of taking no action at all.

The 50 per cent limitation would be placed on the commission in the new plan but if the president took no action within 30 days the commission rate would become immediately operative. This feature would prevent a recurrence of such cases as that of 1924 when President Coolidge ignored a 3 to 2 report of the commission for a reduction in the sugar duty.

Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, chairman of the senate conference committees, hopes to reach an agreement on the proposal tomorrow and report the measure to the senate. Consideration on the floor, however, will go over until next Monday, he said, to permit senators to study the report.

TO PUSH NAVAL TREATY TO VOTE AT THIS SESSION

WASHINGTON, May 22—(AP)—Senate advocates of the London naval treaty determined today to bring it to a vote this session in the face of a move by the opposition to continue the committee hearings indefinitely.

These maneuvers went on as naval experts reported sharply conflicting views to the senate foreign relations and naval committees on the merits of the pact. Rear Admirals William A. Moffett, and A. J. Hepburn supported the treaty provisions as adequate for the navy. Admiral C. F. Hughes and Rear Admirals Frank H. Schofield, and J. M. Reeves took opposing views.

Senator Johnson, republican, California, a critic of the treaty, upset plans for an early report when he announced upon the conclusion of today's hearings that he wished to hear about 14 more witnesses.

Chairman Borah, of the foreign relations committee, who has said he has heard sufficient testimony, said he was willing to hear Senator Johnson's 14 additional witnesses but he also gave notice that "we will have the treaty ready by the time the senate concludes the tariff bill."

CHANGES IN POLICIES OF CONN. SCHOOL FOR BOYS

MERIDEN, May 22—(AP)—Several changes in the present policies of the Connecticut school for boys, were noted in the plans outlined by John A. Tinsley, superintendent-elect, at a meeting of the board of trustees at the school this afternoon. Mr. Tinsley will take over his executive duties on July 1.

Physical and mental examinations of the inmates is the first step to be taken in the work of the new administration. A clinic will also be established to determine the particular needs of the different types, and vocational work will be stressed, according to the program outlined by Mr. Tinsley.

"Uniforms will be gradually discarded," said Mr. Tinsley, "and the boys will be garbed as civilians, in brief, the institution will take on the atmosphere of a boarding school rather than a criminal institution. Uniforms make the inmates feel like criminals and that is the thing I will try to eradicate."

CHAMBERLAIN BUILDING PLANE OF UNIQUE DESIGN

NEW YORK, May 22—(AP)—The Daily News, in a copyrighted article, says Clarence Chamberlin is building a huge airplane of unique design in which he will attempt a record-breaking transocean flight this summer with Ruth Nichols, of Rye, N. Y., "society aviatrix."

Chamberlin is constructing the plane at his factory in Jersey City, N. J., and the engines are being built at Paterson, N. J. The craft, details of which are kept secret, is expected to embody several unique features, included a specially geared propellor.

The noted airman is said to be planning to give the plane sufficient range to span the Pacific non-stop, and the newspaper declares his close acquaintances "would not be surprised if he had in mind a round-the-world flight in less time than that set by the Graf Zeppelin."

$30,000 TO FINANCE RECALL OF THE MAYOR OF DETROIT

DETROIT, May 22—(AP)—A fund of $30,000 had been raised tonight to finance the move to recall Mayor Charles Bowles, according to reports from the citizens' committee aligned against the mayor.

The recall petition, slightly altered but stating the original charges of "tolerating lawlessness by law enforcement agencies," and discharging Police Commissioner Harold H. Emmons "for ordering enforcement of law while Bowles was out of town," were being circulated. Workers claimed signatures were "easy to get."

PINCHOT REP. NOMINEE FOR GOVERNOR OF PENN.

PHILADELPHIA, May 22—(AP)—Gifford Pinchot, on the basis of unofficial returns, tonight stands as the regular republican nominee for governor of Pennsylvania. But in the November election he may face, besides his democratic opponent, a third candidate supported by the wet and possibly liberal forces of the state.

On the face of early complete unofficial returns from the republican primary of Tuesday, Pinchot had a lead of more than 12,000 votes over Francis Shunk Brown of Philadelphia. Success in the republican primary has been equivalent to election to this office for years.

The unofficial totals, with only 21 districts missing out of 8,701 gave Pinchot 631,030 and Brown 613,225. Thomas W. Phillips, who ran on a slate advocating repeal of the 18th amendment and of the state enforcement act, polled 264,462. Some districts did not report the complete vote for Phillips as he was far behind the leaders.

Additional returns in the senatorial contest increased the huge plurality of Secretary of Labor James J. Davis over Senator Joseph R. Grundy to 234,504. A total of 8,406 districts gave Davis 720,608; Grundy 486,104 and Francis J. Bohlen, wet, 238,549.

LIQUOR CRAFT CAPTURED BY COAST GUARDSMEN

NEW YORK, May 22—(AP)—The coast guard won two skirmishes with harbor liquor craft today, arresting seven men and capturing one boat. The other was set afire by its crew and sank.

The first encounter occurred when a coast guard cutter saw a launch skirting the Staten Island shore without lights before dawn. In the ensuing chase shots were fired and the fugitive three-man crew, seeing that escape was impossible, set their craft afire. They were picked up by the cutter but the boat sank off Perth Amboy, N. J.

At almost the same time another cutter gave chase to the launch Annabelle finally ramming it near Robbins Reef and arresting the four members of the crew. Most of the cargo had been jettisoned during the chase but 100 sacks of liquor were seized.

MISS. TAX COMMISSIONER WAS FOUND NOT GUILTY

JACKSON, Miss., May 22—(AP)—Lester C. Franklin, chairman of the state tax commission, was found not guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors late today when the Mississippi senate, sitting as a high court of impeachment, sustained by more than one-third vote a motion for preemptory instructions.

As a result of the outcome a prior agreement, the senate then without a dissenting vote adopted an order formally dismissing the six articles of impeachment voted by the house.

Impeachment of Franklin was based on six charges which crew out of a house commission investigation of an alleged clandestine settlement of a proposed $10,000,000 anti-trust suit by the state against Warren Brothers company of Boston, Mass.

MACDONALD SUSTAINED BY PARLIAMENTARY LABOR PARTY

LONDON, May 22—(AP)—Prime Minister MacDonald won an overwhelming victory at a meeting of the parliamentary labor party tonight to discuss the government's unemployment policy. Sir Oswald Mosley's motion of censure was defeated 210 to 29.

If the motion had been carried, it was understood that the prime minister would have asked King George to dissolve parliament and hold an immediate general election.

Sir Oswald, in protest against the party's official unemployment policy as directed by J. H. Thomas, lord privy seal and minister in charge of unemployment, resigned the chancellorship of the Duchy of Lancashire on Tuesday. He was the first minister of the present MacDonald cabinet to withdraw.

Sir Oswald, a brilliant young debater, proposed in concert with two other cabinet members a new and radical scheme for reducing unemployment. When this was rejected by a special cabinet commitee, he decided to resign. The resignation caused a sensation in labor party circles.

"K" OF NEW HAVEN READY FOR LONG NON-STOP FLIGHT

HARTFORD, May 22—(AP)—Tomorrow may see the "K of New Haven" off on its long projected non-stop refueling flight to Buenos Aires, 7,500 miles away.

Mechanics tonight were giving the huge white monoplane its final tests and adjustments. If they pronounce it in readiness, Captain Herbert Partridge said he and his two companions would take off from Brainard field here between noon and three o'clock tomorow afternoon.

Saturday was set as a dead-line by the commander of the flight which has been postponed many times since it was first projected last January.

Fuel will be taken on from the air over the New Haven harbor. Then the "K" will be turned southward for other refuelings at Havana, Cuba; Cristobal, Panama; Lima, Peru, and Mendoza, Argentine. The flight is expected to consume 90 hours. If a start is made tomorrow, Captain Partridge hopes to reach the South American goal and establish a new long distance flight record early Monday evening.

TROOPS IN CONTROL OF SALT ZONES IN INDIA

BOMBAY, India, May 22—(AP)—British and Indian troops were so firmly established in control of the several salt raid zones tonight that further attempts at civil disobedience demonstrations by the natives became out of the question.

Dharasana was in a state of martial law. Troops were bivouacked on the scene of yesterday's serious encounters in which about 600 Hindu demonstrators were injured. If the followers of Mahatma Gandhi expected to execute further raids upon government salt pans they made no sign tonight.

It was the evident intention of the government to put an end to the Dharasana disturbances, for all time if possible.

Revolt In Congress Against Dial Phon[illegible]

Senate Has Demand[illegible]t 450 Dial Telep[illegible] Be Replaced—Rev[illegible]reads to House.

WASHINGTON, M[illegible]22.—(AP)—The local telephone company was speechless tonight in the face of a congressional outburst against the machine age as typified by dial telephones.

A senatorial ukase demanding that 450 dial telephones be replaced in the senate side of the capitol was regarded so favorably by some members of the house that Representative Abernethy, of North Carolina, introduced a resolution to instruct the house sergeant at arms to have the recently dial instruments removed from house offices, also.

Officials of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone company declined to comment tonight.

Senator Glass of Virginia led the revolt in the senate, complaining against being made "an employe of the telephone company without compensation."

The senate adopted his resolution directing the sergeant at arms to order the telephone company to remove the dials "whereas dial telephones are more difficult to operate," and require senators "to perform the duties of telephone operators in order to enjoy the benefits of telephone service."

In the house, Abernethy added to the Virgianian's plaint the assertion that "telephone companies are putting in dials for the purpose of doing away with operators, tending thereby to increase unemployment."

Telephone company officials expressed hope while the revolt was confined to the senate that things could be arranged. But when the excitement spread to the house, and when it was recalled that President Hoover had refused to have dials installed at the white house, they announced they had "nothing to say."

Senator Ashurst of Arizona, complimented Glass on the "moderation" of his language, adding that the congressional record might not go throuh the mails if it contained "what senators think about the dial telephones."

M'BRIDE PLEASED WITH PRESENT DRY ENFORCEMENT

WASHINGTON, May 22—(AP)—Approval of the Hoover administration's stand on prohibition was voiced today before the senate lobby committee by F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league.

At the same time, the dry leader outlined plans of his organization for an intensive campaign for the 18th amendment similar to that which preceded the adoption of prohibition. He expressed belief that it was "probably a good thing" that the prohibition issue has been revived and said he thought it would have to be "fought out and settled for all time."

McBride said he was "very much pleased" with most of the things done by the present administration for prohibition enforcement but that it was too early yet to determine whether the league would support Mr. Hoover for re-election.

Taking issue with the witness, Chairman Caraway of the lobby committee, demanded that he name the prohibition accomplishments of the administration.

"They are so many that it would burden the record," McBride replied.

LIGHTER WAS DESTROYED FOLLOWING AN EXPLOSION

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., May 22—(AP)—Fire that started on a gasoline loaded lighter at the docks of the Shell Ether Products company at Sewaren, three miles from here, tonight was quickly brought under control. Prompt action prevented the spread of flames to a nearby tanker and to gasoline storage tanks.

The lighter, Riley and Kindall, was destroyed by the fire, which followed an explosion.

First reports said the fire was threatening the entire plant, and officials of the company, recalling the recent fire which did $3,000,000 damage at the Gulf Oil company refinery in Bayonne, summoned apparatus from Sewaren, Woodbridge and Perth Amboy.

NO CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY FOR SCAFFOLDING COLLAPSE

NEW HAVEN, May 22—(AP)—In a finding issued today, Coroner James J. Corrigan finds no criminal responsibilty in connection with the death of John M. O'Dea, Howard B. Miller and Ernest R. Hunt, who were fatally injured April 30, when a scaffolding collapsed at the Atlantic Refining company's plant. The men at the time were putting the roof on a large storage tank.

The coroner finds that "all of the usual precautions were taken in erecting the scaffolding" on which the men were working, and that "even if it had been closely inspected just before it crashed, it would have been impossible to detect any flaw on it."

NEWARK, N. J., May 22.—(AP)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh returned to the Newark airport this afternoon after a pleasure jaunt of several hours in the flier's speedy plane.

After a chat with Mayor Jerome T. Congleton, they left for the home of Mrs. Lindbergh's parents, Ambassador and Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, in Englewood.

Mr. and Mrs. Lindbergh flew over New York city and Long Island and landed at the Long Island Aviation Country club, at Hicksville.

HELD IN CONNECTION WITH DEATH OF A RUM RUNNER

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 22—(AP)—Two men were being held tonight by police for questioning in connection wit hthe death of Roman Pridomerski, 18, of this city, who drowned while bringing a boat load of Canadian ale across the Niagara river under cover of darkness early today.

The men, Arthur "Duke" Latham, 30, and Frank Levey, 28, both of Buffalo, were reported to have told police they saw the boy drown.

"We went away because there wasn't anything to do," they said.

2,726 Padlockings In Chicago Since 1925

Another Raid Was Made Yesterday On Bottles and Caps—$20,000 Worth Confiscated.

CHICAGO, May 22—(AP)—A second attack on bottles and caps was made today following a decision of the United States supreme court that sale of accessories used for making liquors was illegal.

On evidence that federal agents had been sold "enough supplies to make five gallons of beer," a dry squad led by E. C. Yellowly, district prohibition administrator, today raided the People's Supply company, confiscating $20,000 worth of apparatus and ingredients for beer-making and arresting Max Newman and his wife as the owners.

The first raid after the recent ruling of the supreme court was made on the store of Grein and Pabis, ten days ago, but that firm re-stocked and retained Clarence Darrow, to defend its owners against the government charges. It also placed signs to advise customers the goods offered were not for use in making alcoholic drinks.

Mr. and Mrs Newman were held for a hearing before the United States commissioner. Their stock was valued at $20,000. Their plans for defense were not announced.

The department of justice here made public today a list of places, totaling 2,726 which have been padlocked by federal courts since 1925, the roster contained a variety of establishments, including apartment homes, boarding houses, hotels, barns, gymnasiums, tailor shops, shoe repair shops, pool rooms, printing offices, filling stations, bungalows, hardware stores, sporting goods stores and drug stores, not to mention numerous cabarets, night clubs and road houses.

FLOOD IN RED RIVER BASIN IN LOUISIANA

NEW ORLEANS, May 22.—(AP)—With swollen streams receding in Arkansas, Texas, and Mississippi, the Red river basin in Louisiana became the focal point of high-water trouble today as tributaries dumped great volumes of water into the Red.

This normally sleepy stream stretching from northwest Louisiana to the Mississippi river near the Mississippi state line has become a raging torrent in its headwaters and is moving its load of water southward.

Already its tributaries have sent tons of water over farm lands around Shreveport and threaten to inundate thousands of acres more. Fortunately the swells in the tributaries find the Mississippi river at an abnormally low stage and levee officials have no concern over its capacity to carry off the added water.

Along the Red river hundreds of men were working to strengthen levees and protect property. Planters and tenants have moved out their families and livestock and relief centers have been established. The weather bureau warned that the Red river would reach the 1927 crest that caused heavy damage in the basin.

DEMOCRATS TO PUNISH THE 1928 BACKSLIDERS

CLEVELAND, Miss., May 22—(AP)—Democratic leaders in several Mississippi delta counties have decided to call to task party recalcitrants who failed to support the presidential ticket in the 1928 election.

Grenada county democratic executive committee at a recent meeting adopted a resolution charging the judges to challenge the vote of any person who failed to support the nominee of the 1928 election when he electors go to the polls on June 10 to vote for state highway commissioners.

Humphreys county democratic executive committee, at a meeting at Belzoni yesterday adopted a resolution barring "Hooverites" and three or four counties in this part of the state will shortly take action.

Under the Mississippi law those who voted other than the democratic ticket in the national election of two years ago may be barred.

The same challenge is expected to be made when these hundred or more delta voters prepare to cast their votes for congressmen and United State senator in the August primary.

Amid a Bedlam of Horns and Sirens the Ropes of the German Dirigible Were Seized By a Ground Crew of Brazilian Soldiers and Fastened to a Specially Built Mooring Mast—The Streets of Pernambuco Were Choked With Shouting, Gesticulating People As the Graf Settled Down—This Evening the Zeppelin Will Head Southhward to Rio Janeiro — Flight From Seville to Pernambuco, 3,750 Miles, Was Made In Just 61 Hours.

PERNAMBUCO, Brazil, May 22—(AP)—Flying over the route of the Spanish conquistadores, the dirigible Graf Zeppelin for the first time crossed the equator and made her bow to the southern hemisphere tonight.

Garnished with new trans-Atlantic laurels, the world-circling airship reached the southern side of the new world just before the tropic twilight set in.

At 7:10 p. m. (5:10 p. m., E. S. T.), her rope astruck the ground, where they were seized by Brazilian soldiers forming the ground crew. Amid a furious din from thousands of spectators and a bedlam of horns and sirens, she was snugly tied up to her specially built mooring mast.

Northern Brazil was delirious with excitement over the Graf's newest achievement tonight.

Pernambuco hailed her arrival with furious blasts of sirens and whistles from factories and ships. People swarmed out of their houses to point at the strange shining shape in the tropic skies. The streets were choked wit hshouting, gesticulating people.

Over the city and the harbor, about 1,000 feet aloft, the majestic silver bullet gracefully sailed. At 6:30 p. m., (4:30 p. m., E. S. T.) she circled over Campo Giquia, the landing field, and then made off southwards for a cruise of half an hour.

Presently she returned over the field, with her lights winking down through the dusk, and glided down toward the mooring mast from an altitude of 600 feet.

Once at the mooring mast, the dirigible was given over to a crew of mechanics and stevedores, who swarmed about her while the soldiers fought off the excited crowd.

During the night the Graf will be [illegible] gas and a new [illegible]. At daybreak, [illegible]te the fatigue [illegible] flight from [illegible] southward to [illegible] her arrival to-[illegible] Brazilian cav-[illegible] infantrymen, 350 civil and military police and two fire engines manned by eighty firemen.

When the first vague reports that the Graf had been sighted along the coast were circulated in the city, hundreds of automobiles started for Campo Giquia. Roads in the vicinity of the field were jammed with cars, carts and pedestrians. Thousands who did not want to pay for a close sight of the Zeppelin from the grandstands went out none the les for a free if limited view.

The Graf completed her tropical trans-Atlantic trip from Sevilla, Spain, to Pernambuco in just 61 hours. This represented a flight of about 3,750 miles. She left Seville at 8:30 a. m. Tuesday, Spanish time, (3:30 a. m. Tuesday, E. S. T.) and arrived over Pernambuco at 6:30 p. m. local time (4:30 p. m., E. S. T.)

It was 40 minutes later before her ropes were flung overboard for the mooring operation, and nearly an hour elaped before the airship herself was at last snugly fastened to the mooring mast.

CUBA PREPARING GALA RECEPTION FOR THE GRAF

HAVANA, May 22—(AP)—Although the Graf Zeppelin is not expected to make a long stop in Cuba when it winds up its Latin-American tour here early next week, pureparations are being made for a gala reception.

There is no mooring mast at the airport here but heavy trucks will be driven close under the airship to serve as anchors after it is pulled down.

The Graf will stop here on the way from Pernambuco to Lakehurst, N. J. It is understood that the airship will make a cruise from here to Miami, Fla., and return before going onto Lakehurst, and a number of Cubans are looking forward to taking that trip.

POSTPONED START FOR RIO JANEIRO TILL EVENING

PERNAMBUCO, Brazil, May 22—(AP)—Doctor Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, said tonight that the big dirigible would leave for Rio Janeiro tomorrow at 7 p. m. (5 p. m., E. S. T.) He decided to postpone the start from daybreak until evening.

"FLYING WING" PLANE FOR TRANS-ATLANTIC FLIGHTS

DAYTON, O., May 22.—(AP)—An actual test to determine whether the lighter-than-air dirigible is more suitable than airplanes for long distance ocean flight became a probability here today with announcement of plans of the Rumpler Motor company of Berlin for a "flying wing" plane for transoceanic flights, capable of carrying 120 passengers and having a cruising radius of 5,000 miles. It's pay load will be 42,000 pounds.

Detailed plans of the proposed seaplane which is designed upon two huge pontoons were made at the fourth annual convention of the Aeronautical division of the Society of Mechanical Engineers by H. V. Thaden, vice-president of the Pittsburgh Metal Airplane Co., in a paper prepared by Dr. E. Rumpler of the German plant, designer of the ship.

Ten Diesel engines of the pusher type, each developing 500 horsepower, will be utilized on the plane, the reduced space required for crude oil, with which the Diesel motors are powered, making for greater space for passengers and express.

Considerably larger in general dimensions than the Dornier DO X 100-passenger flying boat, recently placed in service in Germany, the Rumpler plane will be of radically different design.

TWO WORKMEN KILLED IN COLLAPSE OF BUILDING

NEW YORK, May 22.—(AP)—With a roar heard for blocks, the four-story steel skeleton of a bakery under construction at 51st street and 11th avenue, collapsed today and carried two workmen to their death. Nine were injured.

The dead were Otto Helves, 40, and Albert Schwanke, 30, carpenters. They fell together, clinging to a steel girder.

The cause of the collapse was not immediately determined, although there were unconfirmed reports that the crash of a derrick had preceded it.

The crash attracted a tremendous crowd and police reserves were called to preserve order.

A patrolman standing near saw a girder sway. Then another and before he could cry out the whole great steel skeleton of the building seemed to fold up on itself. He sprinted for a fire alarm box.

With a roar and crash girders buckled and fell, clashing against each other. One was thrown clear across 51st street into the side of a building where many girls were at work.

For over an hour police and firemen searched the ruins.

Officials connected with the building were detained by police for questioning.

MRS. SUSAN E. CULVER TO "GO ON THE AIR" OVER WTIC

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 22—Mrs. Susan Elizabeth Culver of 457 Main street, Willimantic's oldest resident, is to "go on the air" through an arrangement with Station WTIC, Hartford, it was stated today. The aged woman was to have broadcast Saturday afternoon but a postponement has been made. She is to give a short talk and possibly sing a song of her childhood days as well as give a selection on the accordion. For the broadcast a hookup will be made from Mrs. Culver's home.

A check today indicated that over 1,800 people were visitors at the Willimantic State Trade school during Open Night conducted Wednesday evening, the visitors being greeted by Director Otto R. Nyffeler and Miss Ruth M. Russ, secretary at the school.

Special electric displays flashed in both the interior and exterior of the building. Along the front of the building a string of 240 fifty-candle power lights were installed and on the south wall the names of each department flashed alternately, these features having been installed by the students of the school. In the various rooms a decorative scheme of purple and white was carried out.

Under direction of the various instructors interesting displays of unfinished and completed work were shown. The department instructors and the number of students in each follow: Carpentry, George H. Jay and Edward P. Miller, 309 students; masonry, Charles F. Taylor, 17 students; painting, Waldo Landry, eight students; plumbing, Richard Cosman, 16 students; drafting, William E. MacArthur, 16 students; electrical work, Wilbur S. Hill and Leroy Corish, 32 students. But a few of the 121 pupils were unable to attend the inspection. On the first floor the school band of 18 pieces, under direction of Instructor Wilbur S. Hill, gave a fine program of 18 numbers.

Among the visitors were Mayor Walter R. King and Superintendent Egbert A. Case of the public schools of the town and members of the faculty of the high and state normal schools; H. H. Ellis, director of the Putnam Trade school; William Roscoe, instructor of the carpentry department with Paul Volquardson, instructor of machine work and Mrs. Alice Volquardson, instructor of the textile department at the South Manchester State Trade school, and Lawrence A. Smith, co-ordinator at the Middletown Trade school.

In the many congratulations received by Director Nyffeler and his staff of instructors, emphasis was made on the tremendous improvement in the work since the first Open Night held a year ago. Before a student is given a diploma he must have put in 4,700 hours of satisfactory work, this requiring about two years and three months. To date more than 30 students are classified in that respect and will comprise the first class to graduate from the school about the first of next year.

With a cast of 50 players, the two act musical opera, My Spanish Sweetheart will be presented at the Windham high school, under direction of Mrs. Thomas Welles, musical instructress. The play is in charge of a committee comprising, Irene Babcock, Alice Connolly, Ethel Mathieu, Pauline Doyle, Hazel and Lois Gillette. The scene arrangements are in charge of James Timmins. Rehearsals have been held during the past four months. Music will be by the W. H. S. orchestra.

LUMBER RESEARCH BUREAU SEEN AS AID TO INDUSTRY

SAN FRANCISCO—(AP)—One hope for improvement of the financial position of the lumber industry is seen by B. A. Long, lumber executive, in the establishment of research activities. Arrangements to establish a research bureau have been undertaken.

An alignment of all lumber companies of the southern, central, western and northwestern states to finance the plan has been discussed.

Wastes in handling lumber products may be removed, Long said. New markets, new marketing methods, new uses for by-products and improved management will be promoted through the proposed movement, he declared.

DANIELSON

POPPY DAY TO BE OBSERVED AT DANIELSON SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, May 22—Activities leading up to the annual observance of Memorial day in Danielson and other parts of the town of Killingly will have their inception Saturday of this week when Poppy day will be observed here and when graves of the honored dead will be marked with flags and flowers by delegations representing the Spanish War Veterans, the American Legion and Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil war. These delegations will visit cemeteries in Killingly and in Brooklyn. Sixteen cemeteries will be visited in Killingly and 286 graves marked, while in Brooklyn 125 graves in five cemeteries will receive reverential attention.

Sunday afternoon the annual Memorial Sunday exercises will be held in South Killingly. Members of patriotic organizations in Danielson are to assemble at G. A. R. hall at 1:30 p. m. and proceed to South Killingly.

The service in the church there will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. Henry A. Coolidge. After the service the procession will proceed from the church to the two nearby cemeteries for prayer.

Dayville will also have its Memorial observance on Sunday. In the early afternoon a procession will be formed and will march through the Main street there to St. Joseph's cemetery, where the customary exercises will be held. The marchers will then go to the High street cemetery to carry out appropriate exercises. A delegation of members of Leo J. L'Homme post, American Legion, will take part in the exercises at Dayville.

Danielson, East Killingly and Brooklyn will conduct services in observance of Memorial day on Friday of next week.

FUNERAL

Owen McKenna

This morning the funeral of Owen McKenna of Attawaugan was held at St. Joseph's church in Dayville, with Rev. Ignatius Kost as celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Mr. McKenna died of injuries sustained several weeks ago when he fell from near the roof of the Catholic church at Ballouville, while at work. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery. The bearers were Edward Tierney, Michael Reolpelle, Martin Flaherty, Leon Chatelle, Charles Berthiaume and Aime Bourque. L. E. Kennedy had charge of the arrangements.

Members of Killingly grange have accepted an invitation to attend service at the Goodyear Congregational church on Sunday, June 22. The service will be conducted by Rev. Charles A. Downs, the pastor, chaplain of the Connecticut state grange and treasurer of Killingly grange, in which he is much interested.

This week's meeting of Killingly grange was an interesting one. The pleasing program included a sketch by Francis Ingraham, Joseph Walker and Clark Wood. Walter G. Bruce, the lecturer, gave a talk entitled Pop's Old Plug. A special feature was the playing by a harmonica band of ten pieces made up of Killingly high school boys.

As for several spring seasons past, the wish is now being expressed ever so often that Danielson might have a swimming pool. The rivers here are too dangerous for the average person to enter. Quinebaug lake and Alexander's lake are closed to bathing, both being used as reservoirs, the former to supply Wauregan, the latter to supply Goodyear. So the hundreds who enjoy swimming during the summer season must go to East Killingly or to Moosup pond for their sport along this line. One hears suggestions relative to creating a pond, but no funds are available to finance such a proposition.

Charles Chapman of the Gamwell company gave an interesting talk before members of the Rotary club tonight at their weekly meeting at Baco lodge. His coming here at this time was especially interesting for there is considerable agitation in favor of purchasing an additional pumper for the fire department, and Mr. Chapman, representing a firm that manufactures fire alarm apparatus, had much of value to say.

Tax Collector James R. Walsh said this afternoon that he is very well pleased with the manner in which taxes have come in during the past month, and that his collections to date are fully as much as they were last year, notwithstanding depressed business conditions. The collections up to Wednesday afternoon, the end of the period for paying without being assessed interest, ran close to $160,000 out of the $190,000, or thereabouts, that the rate book calls for this year. Collector Walsh said that all the heviest taxpayers have discharged their obligations to the town. Much of the outstanding tax money will be received within the next 30 days in all probability.

The third annual award of the Killingly Woman's club scholarship to a member of the senior class of Killingly high school will be made at the commencement exercises in June, and presumably the identity of the fortunate student will not be made known until the night of graduation. This has been the practice the past two years. This fund now amounts to $1,600, and is being gradually built up for the very worthy purpose for which it was created. A concert is to be given the coming week at the high school in the interest of this fund.

Crap games in town are said to have flown from the open to cover. The big raid at Goodyear by state officers the past week end has put a crimp into open air shooting, at least for the present. It is not admitted that there is shooting still going on, nor is it denied. But there are no more field days for the sport in this town for the time being.

Chief John MacFarland was investigating and conducting negotiations today for damages done by a squad of boys who have been making targets out of the old borough hall building, now the property of the Danielson Bottling Works, but no longer used for soda manufacturing purposes. The windows of the building have come in for the most punishment for the stone-throwing boys, and now, after Chief McFarland's checkup parents of the boys are going to have some bills to pay for buying new window panes and putting them in. Stoning windows seems to be a habit over in that section. The idle plant of the Westfield Textile company was bombarded until the windows were boarded up.

Another line of vandalism also was the subject of comment today. The reprehensible practice of stealing flowers from graves in cemeteries hereabouts is again being practiced by persons who apparently have no shame or degree of decency about them. Instances recently have been reported where funeral parties had barely left the cemetery when floral pieces they brought were being attacked and blooms pulled from baskets or other bouquets. The responsible parties are, of course, subject to arrest.

September dates for the Brooklyn fair, annual exhibition of the Windham County Agricultural society, oldest in the United States, already have been selected. Only two old-time fairs will be held in eastern Connecticut this year, with horse racing, exhibits of cattle, etc. One will be at Brooklyn, the other at Woodstock.

A band of workers from Danielson will go to East Killingly Sunday to assist at a service at the Union Baptist church.

Brooklyn people long familiar with its affairs are frankly puzzled over the fact that the recent census shows it to have made such an increase in population—393—to a total of 2,248 during the past ten years. The recent census was very carefully taken, and its accuracy is not in doubt, but it is quite impossible for many to account for the increase of 400 people, nearly, in a decade, unless many were not enumerated in 1920, or at least many of the extra ones.

After Friday only three more weeks of school in Killingly before graduation and the end of the present school year. Plans are now going forward for the commencement exercises at Killingly high school.

For the past three days numbers of the residents of Danielson and surrounding towns have improved the opportunity to have an aeroplane ride over this territory, many of them for the first time, as patrons of a flying service.

Next week the Windham County Y. M. C. A. baseball league will finish its season in all divisions and in the following week will come the playoff games to decide the championship.

As the end of May approaches it is apparent that numbers of dog owners have not registered them with Town Clerk Frank T. Preston as yet. Extra charges by way of a penalty will be imposed after June 1.

Members of military organizations stationed at the state armory here will take part in the Memorial day procession.

This morning at the kindergarten at the Baptist church there was a birthday party in honor of David Dowe, son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Dowe, observing the fourth anniversary. Games were played, there was singing and a birthday cake and ice cream. In addition to the members of the kindergarten little guests were Josephine Gaylord, Joyce and Jeanne Roberts, Betty Davis and Adriann Herklotts.

SEATTLE-ALASKA AIR LINE SAVES ALMOST TWO DAYS

SEATTLE —(P)— Averaging slightly more than 126 miles an hour with six passengers and a load of luggage, an Alaska-Washington Airways plane landed in Ketchikan five hours and 10 minutes after leaving Seattle on her maiden flight in a regular semi-weekly round trip service between the points.

The boat time between the two cities is approximately two days for the 685 nautical miles. The passenger service was started for the summer months ot operate between Seattle, Ketchikan and Juneau.

SEEK TO REFOREST AREA WHERE GAS KILLED TREES

DUCKTOWN, Tenn.—(P)— People of this section have lived so long without seeing trees, they find it hard to believe they ever will.

Yet a professor from the University of Tennessee has brought 3,000 blight resistant chestnut trees from China and Japan and transplanted them in the 10,000-acre area swept of all vegetation by gas fumes from copper plants.

G. B. Shivery, extension forester of the university, believes the trees will grow in the eroded area, since the copper refineries have installed equipment for cutting down the escaping gases.

PUTNAM

DAYVILLE MAN FINED FOR DRUNKEN DRIVING

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 22.—Two Dayville men, John A. Smalley and Henry Russell, were before Judge M. H. Geissler in police court this morning and were fined when found guilty of motor vehicle and liquor law violations. Smalley, the operator of a motor vehicle which narrowly missed striking a woman on South Main street near the arch bridge, Wednesday noon time, was found guilty of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor and paid a fine of $100 and costs. Russell, a passenger in the car and intoxicated at the time, was fined $5 and costs. Narrowly clearing the path of the zig-zagging automobile, the woman complained of the incident to the police. Smalley, who sensed the police were on his trail, led Captain A. J. Dubreuil on a wild chase through the Manhansett village, to be finally caught when found hiding behind a house on the lower end of South Meadow street.

LEON A. TRUDEAU ENTERS PLEA OF NOT GUILTY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, May 22.—"Not guilty" was the plea of Leon A. Trudeau, 28, of Webster, entered yesterday in the superior court of Worcester county, when he was arraigned there on a charge of murder in the first degree. An attempt to have the indictment quashed was made by his counsel on the grounds that the true bill of murder was not served upon him within 24 hours after it was returned by the grand jury sitting on the case. The motion was denied by the court and brought forth from District Attorney Edwin G. Norman of Worcester, a statement that Trudeau will in all probability go to trial this term. The date has not been set, however.

Trudeau is charged with the murder of his wife, Mrs. Cecilia Manski Trudeau, whose strangled body was found on the Thompson road between Putnam and Webster on the night of Feb. 23.

Saturday will be Poppy day in Putnam. The artificial blooms of the World war veterans will be sold by members of Anslem Mayotte post, American Legion, and the Albert J. Breault post, Veterans of Foreign Wars. The poppy sale proceeds of which are devoted to welfare work of the posts, has received the endorsement of Mayor Charles A. Richard. There is a growing interest in the appeal of the ex-soldiers and the poppy drives of both organizations are expected to be warmly supported by local people.

A death in Putnam today was that of Dorothy Laparle, 9-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Laparle of South Meadow street, who died this morning following a brief illness.

There are no indications at the present to show that the gap in Main street's skyline at the Seder property will be filled this season or next. Before the Central block was razed last year, the entire corner was covered by this large structure. When original plans for the Montgomery Ward building were drafted, the entire site was to have been covered. Plans were revised before construction began and only one-half of the corner was used. The immense cellar hole is protected by a high board fence, which detracts much of the new beauty of that spot.

The roster of the headquarters company of the 43rd Div., C. N. G., has reached its peace-time quota, Captain John J. McGarry, commanding officer, announced today. With the rolls filled, Captain McGarry has made a number of promotions in the non-commissioned ranks, which have been recommended to Major E. L. Darbie of Danielson, commander of 43rd Div. special troops. The enlisted men to be recommended for promotion are: Corporal Wilfred J. Cartier to sergeant; in receiving the promotion, Sergeant Cartier has been detailed to the position of company supply sergeant. Private Seconda Rovero to rank of corporal. Private Arthur Pominville to corporal and detailed to the position of company clerk. Sergeant J. J. Charron, whose enlistment has expired, has re-enlisted for another year.

It appeared today that the city's new one and a quarter million gallon reservoir now being erected on Oak hill would be complete by June 1. The giant cylinder is only one-half as high as the present 240,000-gallon tank, but before many days are past, the new tank will be twice as high as the old one and will be almost once again as large in circumference. The steel bands which are being riveted into position by experts are being added at the rate of two each day.

The recently enacted two-hour parking ordinance of the common council has not as yet concerned motorists accustomed to parking their automobiles in the streets of the business section. When the ordinance was ratified by the board of aldermen, the police committee was instructed to purchage street signs to be placed at intervals along the thoroughfares where the time limitation parking act was to have been effective. The signs are yet to be purchased and until that time Police Commissioner Dean will not issue enforcement orders to the police. Many motorists are ardently hoping the signs never arrive.

Interior construction on the new Main street banking house of the Cargill Trust Co., which has been delayed for several weeks because of the failure of materials to arrive on time, is now going forward rapidly since the delivery from quarries of marble blocks.

State Association of Savings Bank Women held a session today in Stafford Springs. Miss Anna C. Levitt, Miss Edith J. Dingwall of the Putnam Savings bank and Mrs. Arthur F. Hughes, formerly of the accounting staff of the Brooklyn Savings bank of Danielson, were in attendance.

At 6:30 Thursday evening members of the fire department and city officials including Mayor Charles A. Richard and the board of fire commissioners, gathered in the banquet room at the Elks home on Main street, where they were served a turkey supper. Following the supper the fire-fighters and their guests retired to the Bradley theatre for an evening's entertainment.

Memorial day programmes are being arranged in all of the suburban towns and villages hereabouts. The observances in most places will be simple. Graves of the soldier dead will be decorated and services will be held.

A well baby conference will be held at the Putnam high school auditorium Tuesday afternoon, May 27. The Visiting Nurses' association is again cooperating with the state department of health to make this event a success.

Mary and Albert Capino of Park street are preparing to embark for Willimantic, in order to avoid commitment to the county jail in Brooklyn. Both were found guilty of charges of intoxication, in the city court Monday morning, and were ordered by Judge Geissler to depart from the city or stand the consequences. Mary and Albert agreed to abide by the order of the court, provided they were given a week to prepare for their leave-taking. The week will be up Monday morning, and Mary told the court that she would be on her way to the Thread City before then.

County Detective Rowe H. Wheeler of Willimantic was in this city today, in connection with the investigation of criminal cases now pending before the superior court.

MAJOR LEAGUE ENTHUSIASM AMONG FANS IN BOROUGH

Within the memory of the oldest fans, no interest in local baseball has equalled that of right now. The two games to be played next week are of especial interest. Monday evening the Fisk and Campers will meet, each having won one game. Wednesday, the K. of C. and Accos will play. Neither of these teams, so far, has finished on the right side of the tally sheet. Three new players have been signed up for the K. of C. with promise also from Manager Chase that he will put the Accos in the winning frame. Thomas L. Barnett has figured the following percentages.

Leading batting averages for Twilight league:

S. Liberty, Campers, 1,000; George Beaulieu, Campers, 1,000; A. Gilbert, Ashland, 1,000; George Jarvis, Campers, 667; John Derda, Fisk, 667; Jack Takmon, Campers, 500; Dick Dudkowski, K. of C., 500; M. Solenski, Campers, 500.

Ashland is a rayon mill and the Fisk Rubber Co. does no weaving.

"I Was Generally Run-down and Tired Before I Took Bon-Tone," Says Mrs. Locke

Mrs. G. W. Locke of 87 Button street is another who is glad to recommend this great remedy. Mrs. Locke states: "I guess I was in a general rundown condition and felt tired all the time. I would sleep well but still in the morning would feel unrefreshed and it was a difficult matter for me to get my housework done. My appetite was poor and I would have to force myself to eat. My back troubled me quite a bit and every time I would stoop over I would get a stitching pain. Headaches too added to my discomfort. My sister is giving her little girl Bon-Tone and she recommended it to me and it has certainly proved to be just the thing I needed as it has banished my troubles and given me more strength and ambition than I have had in a long time and I am glad to recommend it highly."

Bon-Tone is a tonic made to make good—all it asks is a chance. Call on the Bon-Tone Man today, at Smith's Pharmacy, in Norwich, and let him tell you what countless sufferers say about this great remedy.

In an actress it's Personality

in a cigarette it's Taste

IT TAKES SOMETHING MORE than good looks to hold the center of the stage—and something more than mere mildness in a cigarette to win the popularity that Chesterfield enjoys.

IT'S THE TASTE, of course—and there's a lot of difference between mildness alone and mildness with taste . . . between ordinary tobaccos and quality tobaccos . . . between ordinary blending and the Chesterfield blend.

TASTE A CHESTERFIELD!—Mildness is there, of course, but much more . . . delicate richness, fragrant aroma, and—"TASTE above everything".

We state it as our honest belief that the tobaccos used in Chesterfield cigarettes are of finer quality and hence of better taste than in any other cigarette at the price.

EARLY TREATY ACTION

It seems a bit strange to have Senator Borah lined up with and working for what the president favors, but that seems to be the case in regard to early action on the London treaty.

When the president submitted the treaty at this time it was apparent that he was desirous of having it acted upon by the senate at this time. That not being considered as a definite expression of attitude, there can be no dodging the statement which Senator Watson made before the foreign relations committee when, following a conference with the president, he said that the chief executive wanted action on the pact with a minimum of delay.

That tells the story beyond question. It may not have any influence upon those who have been working for and urging delay, since some of them are not in sympathy with the president and have been following an opposition course, but for those who are in charge of the measure and working for action now, there has been received all the stimulation they should need. This is particularly true if, as claimed, there are more than enough votes in the senate favorable to the treaty to insure its adoption.

Here seems to be an instance where the president stands in the way of getting some assistance from those who have been opposing him in other things. There is a desire on the part of many senators to get away from Washington. That will help. There is much sympathy expressed for the treaty and that will aid early action. Both parties have had representation in the negotiations and harmony prevails in the delegation. There isn't any cause for political antagonism to work for delay or defeat of the treaty. It is a case of giving majority sentiment a chance to express itself instead of having it blocked by the minority, which constitutes the never-satisfied and the big-navy supporters. The desire is to have the tail wag the dog instead of vice versa and it is realized that the only hope of so doing lies in delay and the building up of fears and suspicions about some things which aren't so and probably never will be.

If the senate is suffering from mental fatigue it will have to be admitted that it has charted its own course and persistently gone contrary to desires and expectations. Early action on the treaty will help to relieve it.

SWINDLING NEW ENGLAND

Once more New England, Connecticut included, has been the field of operation of security salesmen who have succeeded in getting $3,000,000 from the people for securities which are of little value, if not worthless.

It seems to have been the old story of having an alluring tale to tell, a chance to get in on a big proposition and become wealthy on a small investment and the assurance that large profits were just around the corner. From the fact that millions were gathered in, there must have been plenty who were willing to dispose of their cash on the say so of the salesmen. It seems improbable that many of them could have sought advice from those who knew conditions or who might be expected to give sound information concerning such an investment.

Often it is the case that those who make initial investments and experience a fulfillment of promises for a short time become ardent salesmen for those with the securities. They spread the glad tidings and, because they are getting results, it is reasonable for others to believe that they will do likewise. It is the failure to look beyond the surface that causes so many regrets later on.

When the representation is made that 23 per cent is being paid, as is claimed in connection with this proposition, it does offer an inducement, especially if someone is getting such a return, but there have been so many swindles based on similar promises that the very offer of such a return is enough for the inexperienced to run for assistance before yielding hard-earned cash.

New England hasn't forgotten Ponzi, or most of it hasn't, but it would appear that there are still many who never heard of him or who still have faith in just such propositions, even though they are repeatedly shown to be fraudulent and disastrous for those who participate. New England seems to be fertile ground for the swindlers.

GEORGE WASHINGTON TREES

The American Tree association under the presidency of Charles Lathrop Pack has been a constant advocate of tree planting. It has had a wholesome and inspiring effect upon individuals and organizations in all parts of the country, and it is still conducting a most valuable and endless campaign in behalf of trees, trees and more trees.

In connection with this work, President Pack directs attention to the fact that in 1932 we will celebrate the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington. There will be special programmes and memorials of various kinds to feature such celebrations, but Mr. Pack sees good reason for including trees in connection with the celebration for, as he points out, "George Washington was a woodsman and a tree planter. His diary contains repeated references to the value of trees and their care. Great programmes are being put under way by the bicentennial committee and one of the best that can be adopted is the planting of at least 10,000,000 memorial trees by American individuals in honor of the event."

The placing of trees along the memorial highway that is being built to Mt. Vernon can be expected but it will be surprising if there is not a general participation in the suggestion that has been advanced by Mr. Pack. Here is a chance for Washington trees, elms, maples, pines and all the other kinds, to be planted on this double centenary. For such trees particular attention and an interesting place in local history could be expected. Future generations could and would point to the Washington memorial trees as objects of special interest.

In this connection the idea could easily be extended to have memorial trees set out along new highways on that occasion or groves could be planted and Washington forests established as the beginning of valuable crops of timber.

Mr. Pack has succeeded in getting people tree minded in all parts of the country. When he points out the desirability of having that combined with the celebration of the Washington bicentennial he is simply advancing an idea which is certain to be endorsed and adopted in all directions.

REACTION TO BRIAND'S PLAN

When Premier Briand put forth his plan for the United States of Europe he knew he would encounter opposition. He thus called for expressions of approval or disapproval, so that it is not to be supposed that he will be disappointed because he has been getting adverse criticisms. Inasmuch as he didn't lay claim to the plan being perfect and really called for criticisms, he seems to be getting what he asked.

Evidently the purpose of Briand was to get Europe thinking about such a thing. In that respect he has succeeded. He doesn't appear to have secured much backing but if those who are finding fault help to provide the means of perfecting a better plan it will apparently be to the satisfaction of Briand.

It appears to be a case of bringing to life an old idea with the hope that, under changed conditions and a willingness to look at matters in a different light, there may be a chance of making some headway toward the goal.

There are political, economic and social problems in Europe in which European countries have a common interest. The first task seems to be to get them to realize it and then display a willingness to consider them together. It hasn't been the custom of those countries. They are being asked to take a revolutionary step. They are going to be careful how they yield anything to a neighbor or how extensively they join hands in something which they have never done before. They are going to look very carefully to see if there isn't some ulterior purpose in the whole thing, if someone isn't looking for an advantage, if some country isn't trying to dictate to the rest. The Briand scheme is bound to be considered in the same light as all other problems have been handled in the years that have gone.

There is good reason for believing that Briand is sincere in his effort. He knew better than to expect an immediate endorsement and adoption, but if he can get constructive criticism and can keep Europe talking about the idea long enough and seriously enough it is possible that he may be able to make some headway. He will be disappointed if he thinks such a radical change is going to be established in Europe over night.

MINISTER MACNIDER

This country has not maintained a minister to Canada very long but it is recognized as being a post of much importance. These two countries do much business with each other and are so situated that only the best of relationships should exist. Even before a minister was sent to Ottawa we had no difficulty in maintaining satisfactory relations, but the direct handling of matters concerning the dominion between Washington and Ottawa makes it necessary that we should have a man of the proper qualifications and high standing as our representative.

It was a most favorable service that was initiated by Minister Phillips, one that pleased Canada as well as this country. Thus it called for an equally efficient and satisfactory successor and in the naming of Hanford MacNider of Iowa it is believed that President Hoover has properly filled the post.

Through the service he rendered in the war, during his administration as commander of the American Legion, in his work as an assistant secretary of war during the Coolidge administration, as well as in previous and subsequent activities in private enterprises, Colonel MacNider has made a most favorable impression. That he is well and favorably known and competent to administer the duties of the important office is unquestioned at home. That he is acceptable to Canada has been ascertained. Such being the case, there are good reasons for looking forward to satisfactory accomplishments on his part and the continuance of satisfactory relations with our neighbor to the north. Though our relationships are always peaceful there are always plenty of important problems arising.

TRUTHFUL GERALD

"Don't ask me in that tone of voice how Gerald is," frowned the young married woman who had just dealt herself a frightful hand at bridge. "To think that I have always felt such pride in his absolute honesty, his uncompromising truthfulness, his efforts to deal rightly by others! Since our evening with the most recent bride and groom I have wished that he were double-faced and suave, able to negotiate unpleasant triumphantly.

"After you have been married five years as we have you sort of forget the first thrill of displaying your very own things in your very own house. I know how proud I was of a trick potato parer. Of course, we know Arline and George as we know ourselves, but I don't think you know any one on earth sufficiently to be absolutely truthful with them, do you? Because, when another girl asks you anxiously to tell her whether or not a dress is becoming you are quite sure that she is going to be heartbroken if you admit it makes her look thick in the middle and is a hideous color for her to wear.

"So, when Arline proudly displayed their new $150 chair sent out on approval I knew instantly how she worshiped it. It was a wonderful French brocade and real hand-carved walnut and I had opened my lips to ooh and aah when Gerald, hands in pockets, cut in. 'If you want my opinion,' he said, nobody at all having asked him, 'I wouldn't give it house room. Chair's lovely—but it ought to be in a big formal drawing room. What you want here is something comfortable that a fellow can lounge in. Nobody could do a thing in that chair but sit pretty and sip tea.'

"At once I knew the boy had voiced the truth, but Arline was stricken to the heart. Then he considered George's special chair that he had selected himself, admitted that it was pretty good, but there was none of the enthusiasm in his voice rightfully expected of a guest. After which he mistakenly sat down on the couch. Couches today are made much lower than when we were shopping and he sank so far down that he sprang to his feet like a startled fawn. 'Goly!' he gasped. 'I thought I was falling through! What the hek!'

"'Dearie,' quoth Arline, who was beginning to develop spirit from all these wounds and jabs, 'it's on approval too, but is going back and the one we have finally selected is still lower than that! Add that up.'

"Then Gerald wanted to know why she didn't have people sit on the floor and be done with it and buy stocks with the money she saved. Saying which he marched over to a corner and dragged out a poor, cheap little chair Arline intends for the maid's room, when she has one, sat down, sighed and said well, here was a chair. Beats the others all to pieces. Arline, who is a bear for punishment, asked how we liked her new floor lamp and again my husband distinguished himself. He squinted an eye and gave voice that the base was rather hot, but that she ought to can the shade. It was a shade she had made to order at one of these inspirational shops where they go into a trance over an order and match it to the curve of your eyebrow or something like that. That broke Arline's heart and she took back the shade, too, especially since George added that whenever he looked at that shade he felt like a bunch of carpenter's planes going up in a geyser. It was that kind of shade, you see.

"Arline had made the most gorgeous walnut ice cream in her electric refrigerator for dessert and she served what was left again later in the evening. Both times Gerald absolutely polished his plate. On the way home he sighed that, golly, that walnut cream was the best stuff he had eaten in many years! Then I inquired, in quite awful tones, why he had failed to mention the fact to Arline along with the other juicy bits of information he had passed out? Why not tell her something nice? He turned on me utterly surprised. Why, said he, he had never thought of it. It just hadn't occurred to him. All this he accomplished in one evening and now you ask me politely how he is, as though I cared!"

"Well," the lady who had inquired remarked as she shook her head commiseratingly, "I should say that Gerald was doing very well, indeed, as husbands go. I bid three spades!"—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, May 22 — Ten years in the house has brought Ross Collins of Mississippi to a place of importance as ranking democratic member of the army sub-committee on appropriations. That is his only committee assignment. And he gets plenty of action out of it, too.

Army folks feel that he gets too much action. Representative Collins is sharply critical at times of army ways and army expenditures. There is nothing whatever of the militarist about him, far from it. Guns and trappings of war are not his hobby by a long shot.

Looking up his other activities you find that intellectual preparedness is what he favors most. Clearly, Mr. Collins takes the view that if men's minds were adequately developed, there would be no need for all this mass of war machinery since there would be no war.

Wants "Cradle Books"

The Mississippian has taken up legislative cudgels for purchase by congress of the Vollbehr collection of fifteenth century books, the so-called "cradle books" of the art of printing which includes the Gutenburg bible to which bibliophiles have given the name "incunabulum incunabulorum," which means the absolute last word in old books. There are some 3,000 volumes all told in the Vollbehr collection, and they have been offered to the library of congress for $1,500,000, or about half the value placed upon it by scholars. Collins has a bill pending to make the purchase.

Addressing the house in that connection, the Mississippian displayed a breadth of "book learnin'" that brought him quick approval from Representative O'Connell of New York, half a century in the publishing business with a dozen years in congress on the side, so to speak.

"I want to congratulate the gentleman on his masterly and scholarly presentation," O'Connell said. "His speech shows a classical and sympathetic knowledge which I am sure will stand out as one of the epoch speeches on this historic floor."

Paid Campaign Expense

Perhaps Collins felt that way about it himself. At any rate, he caused the speech to be printed and circulated it widely by mail in an effort to build up sentiment for acquisition of the "cradle books." He did it largely at his personal expense. The extract from the Congressional Record bears the notation: "Not printed at government expense."

"As our country is willing to compete with other nations in the building of battleships, we should certainly compete with the world in intellectual and cultural development," Collins said. "If national defense is imperative, the only proper way to provide it is by raising the intellectual standards and the general educational upbuilding of our entire people."

Which is, certainly, not a militaristic notion.

YOUR HEALTH

Use The Scales

By Lewellyn T. Barker, M. D., Baltimore, Md.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

In reducing one's weight when one is too heavy it is necessary neither to starve one's self nor to be miserable. Everyone should eat the amount of food and the kinds of food that are suited to him in order to remain well and to enjoy life abundantly. Each of us needs a certain amount of tissue building foods, and of energy prducing foods every day, and each of us should care enough about having good health to find out the amount and the variety that he requires.

The maintenance diet of the average person corresponds in calories to about 15 or 20 times his calculated normal weight. If he should weigh, normally, 140 pounds, a diet containing from 2,000 to 3,000 calories will be right for him. But if he weighs 20 to 40 pounds too much, he will have to cut down the caloric value of his diet to nearer 1,200 calories in order steadily to lose weight.

In my experience, however, the majority of obese people, though they may desire to lose weight, will not bother to learn about calories or to weigh their food. This is a handicap in several ways. But if they will not weigh their food, they should at least weigh themselves once each week and keep a record of the weight as it gradually decreases.

A great trouble is that many who are fat seek some short cut to reduction. They take advertised medicines, eat advertised foods, or beg their doctors to give them tablets or hypodermic injections that will take the weight off rapidly. Advertised fat reducers are usually fakes; some of them are harmless; some are dangerous. Doctors who do conscientious work rely chiefly on diet and exercise for the reduction of weight; it is only in certain pathological cases that endocrine treatment is required.

When a person is well except for his obesity he can reduce his weight a pound or two a week by diet alone, and without harm. If one who is too stout will be satisfied with a glass of orange juice, one slice of toast, and a cup of coffee or tea (without sugar but sweetened with saccharine if desired) for his breakfast; if he will eat at his principal meal a thin soup, one moderate helping of meat, chicken or fish, one potato and a large helping of some fresh nonstarchy vegetables (like string beans, carrots, spinach, cabbage, cold slaw, toamtoes, lettuce or beets(, ending up with a little stewed fruit; and if he will take for his third meal an egg or two, a slice of bread or toast with one pat of butter, a glass of milk or buttermilk, and a little cottage cheese or curds with a couple of saltine crackers, he will lose weight.

If he does not lose weight on such a diet, he should be examined carefully by his family physician for conditions that require a still more rigid diet or that indicate the need of endocrine treatment. In every case of obesity, even if one is apparently healthy otherwise, one cannot do better than to have his family doctor supervise the reducing process.

Busy Days In Erin

KILLARNEY, Ireland — Killarney is spring house-cleaning, pruning and clipping in her sweet gardens in preparation for the advent of the thousands of American tourists.

Travelers will come in swarms to see the beautiful lakes, about which perhaps more songs have been written than about any other spot save Dixie.

The silver sheets of water lie just outside the picturesque town and nestle under the shadow of the mauve colored mountains that sometimes lose their peaks in swirling banks of white, and again stand out like engravings in a steel-blue atmosphere.

Indeed, the invasion already is under way, and one hears the American accent mingling with the fascinating brogue of the natives. More than one visitor is trying his luck with the trout and salmon which abound in this region.

The jaunting-car drivers, who take the tourists about on their bobbing carts and also act as guides, are going to the railway station in increasing numbers, their faces shining with hope after the long, difficult winter when there has been little work to bring in the pennies with which to buy the essential potatoes for the kiddies.

And if you start to walk into the town from the station, a driver is sure to offer naively to take you for nothing. So, of course, you clamber up on the two-wheeled conveyance, and he earns a fare.

These jaunting-car drives are story-book characters. Their wit is keen and droll. They know the history of their town clear back to the ancient Irish kings, and are proud of their knowledge. To them "Killarney is the loveliest spot in the whole world," and their claims are put very convincingly.

I rode out to the lakes with one of them, and he kept up a running fire of comment and stories. I asked him what the Americans thought about Killarney.

"Shure, sorr," he replied, "they arl thank God that they lived to see Killarney before before they died."

Where do the Yankees get all their money?

Macgillycuddy's Reeks loomed up in the distance. I asked him how high the biggest peak was.

"Three thousand, foor hundred and fourteen feet, elivin and a quarther inches, sorr," he answered. "And if you sthand on the peak on a clear day, you can see the sthreet cars in New York with a sthrong glass. But it has to be a sthrong glass."

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

The Sungari River

The Sungari river, which Russians seek to navigate under an arrangement similar to that which grants privileges to foreigners on the Yangtze, is one of the busiest water routes in Manchuria," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"For two decades new railroads have stifled traffic on some Manchurian rivers, but the greater part of the Sungari flows through a portion of the Chinese state to which the sound of a railway locomotive's whistle has never penetrated.

"For 1130 miles, the Sungari winds from the heights of the Changpai Mountains, Manchuria's eastern wall, to the mighty Amur, which separates Siberia and Manchurian. In its course, the Sungari rushes through forested canyons. Only 60 miles of its upper reaches are not navigable for the shallow draft native boats and steamers. Here, however, lumber rafts successfully negotiate the swift current. At Kirin, the first city encountered as one goes down stream, the importance of the Sungari as a commercial artery of a fast developing region is revealed.

"The river is shallow: between 2 and 9 feet deep for the greater part of its length below Kirin. But traffic is heavy and the small harbors here and there along the river bank are a forest of naked masts rising above junks and other native commercial craft. The stream flows northwestward from its highland source for about a fourth of its course. Then it absorbs the Nonni river which drains most of northwest Manchuria, and sharply veers northeastward past Harbin and finally empties into the Amur.

"The Sungari Valley is like Manchuria as a whole: a fastgrowing infant in commerce and agriculture. Broad grazing lands well stocked with herds of sheep and cattle and Kansaslike grain fields line many miles of its banks, but there are yet many portions of the valley that are innocent of the farmer's plow. In a recent year nearly 7,000,000 tons of agricultural products were produced in the Sungari Valley, most of which were transported to market on the river boats.

"Portions of the river, particularly above Harbin, are so hazardous that navigation at night is not attempted by even the most skilled pilots, but by the day the channel is alive with traffic. There are junks gayly painted and unpainted, and smaller sampanlike craft, loaded to the gunwales with agriculture products, oriental families, their poultry and pets; and palatial steamers of shallow draft that are becoming so numerous that they no longer seem out of place on this oriental stream.

"Travelers observe that Harbin is just as fortunate to lie on the banks of the Sungari as the Sungari is to flow past Harbin. The grain fields of the Sungari Valley have been an important factor in making Harbin the so-called Minneapolis of Manchuria and the great Manchurian mart that it is. The traveler has but to visit the river banks to learn what the Sungari Valley contributes to the city's commercial prosperity. Coolies, bearing huge sacks of wheat and soy beans, bundles of Chinese cabbage and other products, literally swarm over the boats and form an endless parade to the river bank.

"In 1658 the Chinese government built 40 fighting boats on the Sungari to meet the Russian invasion. This was the first attempt of the Chinese extensively to navigate the stream. The shipbuilding yards were at Chuangchang (meaning shipbuilding yard). The site now is occupied by the city of Kirin. The Chinese Eastern Railroad built many boats to operate on the river."

The Tanna tunnel, most difficult engineering feat ever attempted by Japanese railway engineers, will cost $9,970,000 and pierce volcanic mountains.

CHILD TRAINING

When The Child Creates His World

Edith L. Reid

"The minute Lonny comes home from school he wants to run right over to Roy's house," complained Mrs. Palmer.

"That's exactly the way Dick acts," sympathized Mrs. Martin. "He stays at home barely long enough to eat his meals."

Mrs. Palmer shook her head dolefully. "I fixed Lonny's room all up beautifully when he was away last vacation and had it all ready to surprise him when he came home. We got him a new desk and painted his bed, and daddy even built him a bookcase. But he is not satisfied to stay at home if he can get over to Roy's."

Mrs. Martin nodded in agreement. "I spent a lot of time on Dick's room, too, last winter. I made him a darling bedspread to match the drapes and knit a rug to make it look homey. I just adored it and wanted to sit up there myself. And then one day—what do you suppose! I found three of the boys sitting on that lovely spread calmly playing with their marbles, and Dick cried because I scolded him before the others."

And so the conversation continued between these two perplexed mothers who were doing so much for their children yet failing to make home the most desired place on earth.

Their deploring voices reached me at intervals for half an hour as they talked from their back porches and I weeded my flower-bed behind the hedge. And I thought how little one can tell of a home from the outside. I knew Roy's home and his parents. They were able to give Roy no more advantages than Lonny and Dick had, but there was this distinction: Lonny and Dick were presented with possessions; Roy was given the opportunity to create his own environment.

Roy's room is exactly as he wants it. His bed is a comfortable cot with a durable Indian blanket as a cover. Not dainty, to be sure, but something that six boys could sit on without making a wrinkle. Roy made his own bookcase from an apple crate by putting in two rather wobbly shelves. It is not a work of art, but represents a happy week of hammering and creative work in the basement. Its upper shelf possibly holds a jar of live polliwogs.

When Roy's mother found his chemistry set in his closet she omitted any scolding about his putting those old bottles of acid near his best suit. Instead she quietly removed the new suit to the spare closet away from harm.

Roy's friends actually went into the kitchen one rainy day and made a chocolate cake after mother's recipe. They washed the dishes afterwards, ate the cake and then roller-skated in the basement.

Lonny's mother would have said she couldn't have them baking a cake in her kitchen. Dick's mother would have reproved them for being too noisy at their skating. Yet both of these mothers bemoan the fact that their sons do not love the homes which they, the mothers, make and condition.

The home spirit which is truly valuable and appealing is the cooperative one where the child has a share at least in creating the environment out of which satisfaction and enthusiasm spring naturally.

Stories That Recall Others

Our Gang

Dee Junior is beginning to be quite chummy with his father. One evening daddy was helping him undress and his mother just stepped to the door of the nursery to see if she could be of any assistance, when the youngster looked up and said: "Go 'way, mamma, us fellows is talkin'."

Her Need

Little Betsy had been ill and, with the privileges of an invalid, demanded so much of her mother's time and attention that her older brother, Fred, was a trifle annoyed. One day when Betsy had kept her devoted parent reading aloud to her until she was almost hoarse, Fred remarked succinctly: "Well, mom, I think what Betsy needs is a 'talking picture of you.'"

An Ailing CHILD

Are you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing—immediately—though the emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it in emergencies, and nothing better for everyday use. For a sudden attack of colic, or the gentle relief of constipation; to allay a feverish condition, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is genuine Castoria. It is harmless to the smallest infant; doctors will tell you so.

You can tell from the recipe on the wrapper how mild it is, and how good for little systems. But continue with Castoria until a child is grown.

MEMORIAL DAY BULLETIN BY AMERICAN LEGION

The department executive committee, American Legion, will meet on Saturday at Litchfield at the invitation of the Connecticut Junior Republic. An inspection of the republic will be held at 4 p. m. and at 6 p. m. a dinner will be served to be followed by the regular monthly meeting of the committee.

Department Commander W. S. Alexander has issued the following Memorial day bulletin:

Three years after the close of the Civil war in the year 1868, General Logan, then commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic issued the now famous General Order No. 11, designating May 30th of that year as Decoration day and called upon all survivors of that great conflict to seek out the last resting places of those who had given their lives in defense of their country, and to strew upon their graves the choicest flowers of spring, as a tribute of love and affection and as evidence of remembrance for sacrifices made that had given us a united country and one flag. This custom has grown with the passing years, and the day has become in the hearts and minds of all patriotic Americans a holy festival day of remembrance known as Memorial day. The graves of the soldier dead of all the wars are hallowed spots where the citizens of a grateful republic can gather on Memorial day, bringing their offerings of love, and in the presence of the dead, rededicate themselves to a continuance of the principles gained and defended at the cost of so much blood and sacrifice.

This day is more than a holiday. It stirs the deepest and most patriotic sentiments. It arouses in the hearts of all a feeling of gratitude that in America every generation has furnished men and women who have been willing to die for an ideal. It is not a day for sports, pleasure and recreation.

OBITUARY

Elisha Waterman

Elisha Waterman, 54, member of the board of commissioners of New London county, representative from the town of Lebanon to the general assembly and a former state senator from that town, died Thursday evening at 10 o'clock at his home in Lebanon. Mr. Waterman had been ill but a short time. His illness first became generally known when he failed to appear at the last meeting of the board of county commissioners. At that time it was learned that he was suffering from a nervous break-down but, among his many friends, his illness was not considered serious. News of his death last night was as a distinct shock to his numerous friends throughout the county.

ELISHA WATERMAN

Mr. Waterman, bearing a name that earlier generations of his family carried in honorable participation in the stirring events of Colonial times and in the arduous labors of pioneer life, traced a long and distinguished ancestry in New England. The first American ancestor was Robert Waterman, who married December 9, 1638, Elizabeth Bourne of Marshfield. Thomas Waterman, their second son, was born in 1644 and probably came to Norwich with his uncle, John Bradford. He had three sons and five daughters.

Elisha Waterman was the son of Andrew and Julia (Stark) Waterman and was born on the homestead in Goshen, town of Lebanon, September 10, 1875. After attending the district schools he entered Bacon academy at Colchester and was later a student in Spencer's business college, Cleveland, Ohio, where he was graduated September 1, 1894. In young manhood he established a trucking business for the Bozrahville Cotton Co., also taking charge of the home farm when his father laid aside his responsibilities.

Upon the death of the elder Mr. Waterman, he came into possession of the homestead, where he had since made his home. To the original 300 acres he added 150 acres by purchase and with his agricultural operations raised and dealth extensively in cattle. Mr. Waterman specialized in Holstein stock and for some years he had one of the finest herds of cattle in this section.

For many years Mr. Waterman was chairman of the republican town committee of Lebanon and in 1909 he filled a seat in the state legislature. In 1919 he served in the state senate and in both lower and upper houses, ably and faithfully worked for the best interest of his district and the state.

He was a member of the Lebanon Congregational church and was affiliated with Wooster lodge, No. 110, F. and A. M. Mr. Waterman was identified with all progressive movements in his district and had a wide circle of friends in public and private life.

For years Mr. Waterman was prominently identified with the old New London County Agricultural society of which he was a director and life member. He was a familiar figure around the race track at the fairgrounds and served for years as a race official in the judges' stand.

Mr. Waterman married in Norwich, October 25, 1911, Ella Mercy Tucker. His wife survives him with two daughters, Natalie Catherine and Evelyn Tucker, both at home. There are also a brother, Clarence Waterman of Toledo, Ohio, and two sisters, Mrs. Harry E. Prentice of No. 191 Washington street, this city and Mrs. Frank R. Bartlett of Norwich Town.

Mr. Waterman was widely known throughout New London county and eastern Connecticut in general. He was highly respected by all and his sterling traits of character won him many life long friendships.

Frank S. DeWolfe.

Frank S. DeWolfe, 77, died Wednesday night at his home in the Hartford-New London turnpike in Salem, where he has been a lifelong resident. Mr. DeWolfe was a farmer and was well known throughout that vicinity.

He is survived by three nieces, Mrs. Harry Moore and Mrs. John Rathburn, both of Salem, and Mrs. Dale Bonewit of New York city. He is also survived by four nephews, Edward DeWolfe, John DeWolfe and Walter DeWolfe, all of Salem and Earl DeWolfe of Norwich.

There were a number of beautiful floral tributes. Undertakers Cummings and Ring had charge of the funeral arrangements.

BROAD ST. WOMAN SAYS SHE SAW LIGHT IN TURNER-STANTON MILL

A volunteer woman witness, a Broad street resident, who was the first on the stand when defense testimony was presented in the superior court here Thursday afternoon in the Huber trial, testified that she saw an electric light burning in the Turner-Stanton mill previous to the breaking out of the fire because of which William S. Huber, the company bookkeeper, is on trial on an arson charge.

In the course of further testimony it developed that she had been sitting in the court room Wednesday next to Rev. Joseph Cooper, pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, when she exclaimed that she had seen a light in the mill and the pastor had given this information to Attorney Shapiro, Huber's counsel.

Huber was on the stand when court adjourned for the day and the trial will be resumed next Tuesday morning as there will be no session of the criminal superior court today (Friday).

Accountant Testifies

In the morning session of court Hibberd N. Alexander of New London, public accountant, was on the stand most of the time, completing the testimony which he had begun Wednesday when called to the stand by State Attorney Arthur M. Brown.

Alexander read figures which he had obtained from the books of the Turner-Stanton company, from which he claimed that various discrepancies were shown in the accounts kept by Huber, the bookkeeper.

Alexander testified in particular as to the petty cash account, which he said showed receipts of $3,731.38 from Jan. 1, 1926 to Jan. 25, 1929, the date of the fire, but the expenditures shown were $1,227.15, making a shortage of $2,553.57.

In reply to a question from Huber's counsel, the witness said he wouldn't say that Huber actually pocketed the money, but it looked as if he embezzled it.

Alexander stated that he had worked about 200 hours in looking over books and records, but because some of the books were burned had not been able to make a complete check-up and get balances. He said he could not see how it was possible for the accounts receivable to be "as high as he has got it."

State Attorney Brown rested his case after he had recalled to the stand Miss Mildred Cass, an employe in the Turner-Stanton office, who testified that when Bushnell, the shipping clerk, took money from the office to pay off the shade-pull women workers it was in pay envelopes and did not come out of the petty cash.

The defense side of the case was begun when court came in after the noon recess.

Testimony For Defense

Miss Lillian O'Connor, who lives on Broad street, across the street from the main entrance to the Turner-Stanton mill, testified that between 10:30 and 11 o'clock on the night of the fire she was passing along Boswell avenue and she saw a light in the mill on the ground floor entrance from Broad street.

In response to a question from Attorney Shapiro, Miss O'Connor said that she had not told defense attorneys of this until after she had been in court Wednesday and had heard the testimony then.

On cross-examination by State Attorney Brown, Miss O'Connor said there was a woman with her at the time she saw the light but this woman was not in court now. She said she had often seen lights in the factory at night, often between 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning. She said the first time she had spoken to Mr. Huber was in the court after 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. She had come to court voluntarily without being subpoened and had come to court in the first place out of curiosity.

On re-direct examination she said she could remember the night of the fire because her niece was overcome by smoke and had to be taken out and rolled up in blankets. Miss O'Connor pointed out Rev. Joseph Cooper, pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, as the person she first told about the light in court on Wednesday, and she said she lived with her sister, Mrs. Thurston, who didn't want to come to court.

Cross-examined again by State Attorney Brown the witness said she had also told a Mr. Simcox about the light on the morning after the fire when he was at her sister's home. He was the first to whom she spoke about the light, outside of calling her sister's attention to it. She said she had also talked about the light to people in stores in the neighborhood and she had spoken about it in a place where Officer Farrell was present.

Harold T. Pratt of Stratford, connected with a firm of certified public accountants, testified to his examination of the burned books which are exhibits in the case and said it was impossible to make any audit from them. He said petty cash accounts were handled usually in a loose way in the smaller type of concerns, and he would not consider the absence of receipts for every item indicated a shortage in the account.

Mr. Pratt said that the fact that two sets of figures are found in Mr. Huber's accounts would not necessarily indicate a shortage or discrepancy.

As to Petty Cash Accounts

On cross-examination he said it would also not necessarily show a shortage if a petty cash account showed $5,000 receipts and $2,000 paid. The difference of $3,000 might be for items for which no receipts had been taken.

Both Attorney Shapiro and State Attorney Brown asked the witness questions about methods which might be used to cover up shortages.

Were at Seifert's House

Mrs. Arletta Baker of New Haven gave testimony that she was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Seifert on the evening when Mr. and Mrs. Huber were visiting there and said it was just 11:45 when they left. She knew because she looked at the clock. Mrs. Seifert gave corroborating testimony along the same line. She saw Mr. and Mrs. Huber drive off in the automobile. Kurt Seifert gave similar testimony and all these witnesses agreed that Huber did not leave the house from the time he came there early in the evening until he left around 11:30 or 11:45.

Character Witnesses

Rev. Joseph Cooper, pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal, where Huber has played the organ, testified that Huber's reputation is of the very highest. He said he was the one who called to Attorney Shapiro's attention that Miss O'Connor had spoken of seeing a light in the factory.

David H. Wilson, a Norwich undertaker, who has given the bond for Huber, J. Frank Corey, clerk of the common pleas court and Harry F. Powers, president of the Uncas-Merchants National bank, and Walter M. Buckingham, teller at the Thames Bank and Trust company, were other character witnesses.

Regarding Kerosene Can

Michael Bowen, fireman at the Turner-Stanton mill, testified that there was a 5-gallon can of kerosene in the mill and he saw it on Huber's lawn at 8 o'clock in the morning after the fire. He didn't know how it got there, but he took it back to the mill at the direction of Huber. The witness said there was about a gallon in the can, and the kerosene was used in ink for marking cases. He did not know of any being used in the braiding room.

Superintendent Alfred H. Beebe testified that there was always a 5-gallon can of kerosene kept in the boiler room. He didn't see it after the fire. The kerosene was used for marking and occasionally for cleaning braider parts in the lower part of the mill.

Officer Daniel J. O'Neil of the Norwich police department, who was summoned into court from his beat, was another character witness called and was followed on the stand by Hilda Huber, wife of the accused man.

Mrs. Huber Testifies

Mrs. Huber gave corroborating testimony as to Huber working at the mill during the morning, his return to the mill in the afternoon, their visit at the Seifert home during the evening.

Testimony by Mrs. Huber was temporarily suspended while Acting Chief Dennis J. Brennan of the Norwich fire department was called to the stand. He was asked about the can of kerosene and said he had not known about that before.

Mrs. Huber came back to the stand and told of driving home from the Seifert house, picking up Mr. Smith on the way, leaving him at Warren and Broad streets and then coming home after putting the car in the garage.

There were no books or papers in the garage at the time, Mrs. Huber said, and after they came to the house, Huber went to the mill, telling her he was to put a light out, and he came back in a very short time. She told of an officer coming to the door with word that there was a fire in the mill. She answered the door and told Huber, who was then in the bathroom. He immediately went to the mill.

State Attorney Brown asked her only one question on cross-examination. This whether she saw a light when they drove past the mill. She said she did not.

Accused Goes on Stand

William S. Huber, 53, the accused, was called to the stand. He said he is now employed in the office of an organ company in New Haven and lives in that city. He had been with the Turner-Stanton company since April, 1920, and he said that about a month after the fire he received a letter from the company saying that they regretted his services were no longer required.

When he left the factory at noon on the day of the fire he said he told Ralph Hall they could not go to Hartford Monday to look at some new machinery because an income tax agent was coming that day.

"My God, that's not so good," was Hall's response, according to the witness, who said he told Hall he didn't see anything to worry about.

Huber told of working at the factory during the afternoon and said he closed the safe. At that time the books were in the safe and on top of it. He put the income tax papers he had been working on into the safe. He said he was only in the office part of the factory that afternoon and he carried no books to any part of the factory, nor did he go down into the basement.

At this point the trial concluded for the day to be resumed next Tuesday morning.

SALVATION ARMY HEADS SHOW NEED IN CITY

With the Salvation Army appeal now being conducted through the mails, Captain Percy Day and Mrs. Day in charge of the service in Norwich said: "If the people of Norwich would know what the Salvation Army workers face almost daily, the raising of the $5,000, the minimum amount needed to conduct the work in Norwich, would be accomplished with but little effort. An example of some of the situations we have to face happened only last week. Mrs. Day came across a family of seven, with father working only two days a week and with the mother seriously ill, and with all house belongings almost gone to purchase food for the five starving little tots in the house. We immediately provided the family with food, some clothing and took care of immediate need of medical attention for the emaciated mother. Right through the winter the Salvation Army in Norwich has had to support from six to ten families who were in desperate straights of want. We had to give them clothing, food, personal service in the home, and in some cases provide them with medical care, and even help them to pay the rent. If our citizens would stop to figure out what it cost to maintain one family during the winter and then realize the drain upon the resources by the demand made upon the Salvation Army by the number of families that must somehow be tided over a distressed period, they would see how soon the $5,000 maintenance fund is depleted. The weekly transients who call on the Salvation Army for help easily number aboupt 25. These unfortunates come to the Salvation Army as a last resort and they don't know any other place to turn for succor. We must be ever prepared to do something for those who are sorely afflicted by the last extremes of poverty. The contacts which Mrs. Day and myself make during the year number into the thousands, and we put in about 18 to 25 hours weekly by regular visitations. The sights we encounter in our visits are sometimes terribly heart rending. In our work we have learned to forget our personal self and only to think of the condition of the unfortunates who put their trust in us. It is only by this personal effacement that we find it at all possible to face some of the misery which we witness without flinching in our duty. The Salvation Army work can be done by the Salvation Army only. No other organization is equipped with the personnel trained to do this work, and it is well known to all who are familiar with the service performed by our organization that we receive a bare subsistence for our arduous work. Our great reward which we receive from our untiring effort is the satisfaction that we can be of some assistance to suffering humanity.

"I sincerely hope that when the letters of appeal from the Salvation Army come into the hands of our citizens they will respond with Christian generosity and with fulness of heart. They may rest assured that their kind donation to the Salvation Army maintenance fund is the kindest and noblest charity within the sphere of human helpfulness. This year especially the Salvation Army is more urgent in its appeal and prays for the support which is urgently needed for the deserving and afflicted poor."

The appeal is carried on through the mails in order not to put too much strain upon the public spirited citizens who are forever helping in every religious, civic and charitable cause in the city.

NO POLICE GUARD FOR JUDGE BROWN'S RESIDENCE

Reports that state policemen maintained a guard Wednesday night at the home of Judge Allyn L. Brown on Broadway, because of the escape of Fortunato Molinara from Norwich state hospital, on Wednesday afternoon were declared to be unfounded by Capt. Thomas Murphy in response to an inquiry Thursday night.

Capt. Murphy stated that the local officer on the Broadway beat had seen no signs of any state policemen around the judge's house during the night, but that the Norwich patrolman kept the house under surveillance without being specifically posted there on guard duty.

Molinara and his wife a year or so ago were involved in much litigation and they got the idea that Judge Brown and most of the superior court officials were in league against them. Mrs. Molinara circulated hand bills in New London in which Judge Brown, Attorney Arthur T. Keefe of that city and others were severely criticized. She was taken into custody on a charge of criminal libel by New London police who interrupted her distribution of the pamphlets and was bound over in the police court to the superior court.

During her trial in the lower tribunal it was brought out that the hand bills had been brought to New London from this city in an automobile driven by Molinara and a warrant for his arrest was issued. When officers went to his home here they found he had fled, taking two shot guns with him. County Detective Lewis and Norwich police officers placed a watch over the house and trailed a man they saw enter and leave the place to a small house in a remote section of the town of Colchester. The officers rushed the house and arrested Molinara who was found hiding inside and seized two fully loaded shot guns.

Before his capture and following the arrest of his wife, Molinera, according to the authorities had threatened to "get even" with Judge Brown and others and the authorities, following his capture took no chances of having him escape. He was closely guarded until the superior court came in and after being tried in that tribunal both he and his wife were committed for an indefinite term to the insane asylum.

WATERMAN'S DEATH LEAVES ONE COUNTY COMMISSIONER

The death of Elisha Waterman, 54, of Lebanon, Thursday night, leaves but one member of the board of commissioners of New London county. George H. Bradford of Montville, recently resigned as a member of the board. He submitted his resignation shortly after he was appointed high sheriff of New London county as successor to the late Sidney A. Brown of New London, the appointment being made by Governor John H. Trumbull.

No successor to Mr. Bradford has yet been named by Governor Trumbull, who now has two appointments to make to the board, through the death of Mr. Waterman. One woman and three men have been endorsed for appointment to the board as successor to Mr. Bradford. The four mentioned are: George M. Charbonneau, chairman of the republican town committee of Norwich; Mrs. Edwin W. Higgins, of this city, of the Connecticut Child Welfare association; E. Frank Morgan, former mayor of New London, and Fred A. Beckwith of East Lyme.

The remaining member of the board of county commissioners is Charles H. Smith of Noank. A peculiar situation developed this week when the date for the regular business meeting of the county commissioners arrived. Mr. Smith was the only member of the board present and it was learned at that time that Mr. Waterman was confined to his home in Lebanon because of a nervous breakdown. As Mr. Smith was the only member of the board present, no county business could be transacted at that time.

"HOSPITAL WEEK" PARTIES REALIZED SUM OF $1,186.50

According to a report by Mrs. Rollin C. Jones, chairman of the finance committee of the Women's auxiliary of the W. W. Backus hospital, the proceeds of "hospital week" were $1,186.50. This was the result of the many subscription bridge parties and teas which enlivened those days in March, not only in Norwich, but in Jewett City, Lisbon, Hanover, Taftville and Bozrah. The women of these towns helped to make possible the securing of this splendid amount of money which has now been expended for equipment sorely needed by the hospital. The committee is deeply grateful to all who contributed to make "hospital week" so successful.

After consultation with the hospital authorities, the following apparatus was purchased: Two bed pan sterilizers, at $250 each; an X-ray table—an adjustable table which obviates a painful experience for an injured patient—at $500; two easy chairs—also adjustable—for A Top, at a cost of $50 each and a dressing carriage for the Children's ward, at $83.35.

These various pieces of equipment are of permanent value to the hospital and it has been a real pleasure to the Women's auxiliary to place them there, as their gift. The committee members who are to be congratulated at the outcome of their efforts at "hospital week" are as follows: Mrs. Rollin C. Jones and Mrs. Bruce F. Rogers, co-chairmen, Mrs. Harry Prentice, Mrs. Fred Crowell, Mrs. Harold T. Robinson, Mrs. A. J. Bailey, Mrs. Roderick F. Sullivan, Mrs. Arthur M. Thompson, Mrs. Henry A. Tirrell, Mrs. F. Russell Smith, Mrs. Joseph P. Cummings. Mrs. Archibald Mitchell, Jr., as president of the auxiliary, was also a member of the committee.

MANY PARENTS PLAN TO ATTEND SCOUT JAMBOREE

According to the local Boy Scout headquarters indications are that the attendance of parents at the Boy Scout Jamboree to be held Saturday night at 7:45 at the armory will be quite large. Every troop is on its "toes" determined to win some recognition in the demonstration.

The program includes exhibits from all troops of Norwich of things which Scouts make, a fancy drill by the drum and bugle corps of Troop 5, a review, an inspection, a dressing race, fire by friction, tree felling, knot tying, cub yell, first aid, games, activities, signalling, bugling, airplane flying, merit badge parade and awarding of prizes.

The chief prize for the evening is a silk banner given by the Norwich Rotary club. This banner will remain in the possession of the winning troop for one year, and the troop winning the banner a second year will keep it always.

Both the Rotary, the Lions, and the Red Arrow club have been invited to attend the Jamboree and it is hoped that the Girl Scouts and many other organizations will be present in numbers to see the boys perform.

According to the local headquarters, the Jamboree is not a show which the Scouts have spent months and months to prepare. The Scouts have been quite busy with civic service and with regular tests, and court of honor work. The Jamboree is merely the bringing together of the different troops in friendly competition and cooperation to show their parents some of the things Boy Scouts do. Though it is not a big show and has only occupied the attention of the Scouts during the past three meetings, it will be intensely interesting to witness.

CROSS
MAYBE IT'S WORMS

If your little one is irritable and restless—there's a reason: Often it's worms. They are much more common than most mothers think.

Look also for the following symptoms: picking the nose, grinding the teeth, crying in sleep, offensive breath, loss of appetite or weight, nausea or general restlessness. Any one of these signs may be your warning that worms are present.

Wise mothers take no chances with these dangerous and disgusting childhood pests. Even if worms are only suspected they give the child

No More Piles

Quick Relief—No Cutting

External treatments cannot permanently end Piles. Nor does cutting remove the cause.

The cause is internal—bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel. The veins are flabby—the bowel walls weak—the parts almost dead. To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles an internal medicine should be used to heal and strengthen the affected parts.

J. S. Leonhardt, M. D., a specialist, after years of study discovered a real internal Pile remedy. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and prescribed it for 1000 patients with the marvelous record of success in 960 cases, and then decided every Pile sufferer should be able to get HEM-ROID from their own druggist with a rigid money-back guarantee.

Before thinking of the pain and expense of an operation, get a package of HEM-ROID from Lee and Osgood with their guarantee of money-back if it does not end all Pile misery.

FIVE PHILADELPHIA RUNNERS TO COMPETE IN NATIONAL DUWELL RACE

Five entries from Philadelphia, three from the Shanahan A. C. and two from the Nativity Catholic club, were included in the batch of mail received Thursday by the committee in charge of the National A. A. U. 10-mile championship run, to be conducted at the fairgrounds on the afternoon of Memorial day by the Duwell A. A. The Shanahan men are William McK. Meyer, Paul Wallace and Merl K. Malmer, and those from the Nativity club are the Mundy brothers, Joseph and Paul. Little is known here of the latter, but all of the Shanahan entrants are comers in the distance running business, having performed with credit at a number of the recent runs held in the metropolitan district.

Included in the Thursday mail were also the entries of two athletes from Buffalo, Arnold L. McCullough of the Western Union A. A., and Frank Depara, unattached. The entry list for the coming title run will be brought to a close Monday and it is expected that at the closing date the classiest field ever drawn together for a title run will be shown. Duwell officials have not as yet announced the number of men who have officially filed entry to date, but it is understood that the number is close to 75 and that by Monday it will be close to the hundred mark.

As recently announced the list includes three of the five men who represented the United States at the recent Olympic games and four present national champs.

Arrangements for the program to be conducted in connection with the big run are rapidly nearing completion and it is predicted that, weather permitting, the largest crowd ever to gather here at one time will be on hand Memorial day. In addition to the championship run there will be several horse races, band concert and other features. The program will start at 1 o'clock and wind up at 3:30 so that the crowd may take in the Academy-Warren Harding ball game, which is slated to start at 4. Prospective entrants for the horse races are requested to get in touch with either Jack Kelly at the Trading Cove riding academy or Jackie Wilson at Jack's Sport Shop.

Included in the large crowd expected here for the festivities will be a number of the public and sport figures of this and surrounding states. Acceptance notices have been received from a number of those invited and it is expected that the gathering on Memorial day will be colorful as well as large.

YANKS TRIM A'S TWICE, RUTH HITS THREE HOMERS

PHILADELPHIA, May 22—(AP)—The New York Yankees turned the tables on the Athletics today and won both games of their second successive double header in a pair of amazing slugging matches. The scores were 10 to 1 and 20 to 13.

One record was broken and two were tied in the second game and Babe Ruth set a mark of his own by hitting two home runs in the first game and one in the second to make it six in two days and 12 for the season. His total put him in a tie with Hack Wilson for major league leadership. Lou Gehrig hit three homers in the second game and equalled the American league record by batting in eight runs. Ten homers in this contest, divided by the two teams, tied the record for the major leagues. The former American league mark was eight.

George Pipgras had no trouble winning the first game for the Yankees, holding the world's champions to six hits. The Athletics used six pitchers and the Yankees four in the second game. The score:

BROWNS BUNCH HITS IN SEVENTH TO TRIM INDIANS

CLEVELAND, May 22—(AP)—The Browns bunched five hits in the seventh inning today to overcome a Cleveland lead and defeated the Indians three to two.

Except in that one inning, Clint Brown was master of the St. Louis club while Rip Collins, veteran right hander, pitched deceptively for the visitors. Collins and Holshauser held the Indians to six hits, three of which came in the fourth inning to give the tribe its two runs.

Heine Manush returned to the Brown lineup after a day's suspension from an argument with Umpire Van Graflan, and batted in the Browns' winning run. The score:

WASHINGTON, May 22—(AP)—For the second time in two days the Washington Nationals made a clean sweep of a double header at the expense of the Boston Red Sox, scoring 3 to 2 and 13 to 1.

In the night cap Burke held the Sox to six scattered hits while his team mates bunched 18 off Morris and Shields. The Nationals acquired a two run lead in the first and scored in all but two succeeding innings, twice with home runs.

Sam Rice's sensational batting continued with a single in the first game and three safeties in three times up in the final. The score:

CARDS MOVE INTO FIRST PLACE BY TOPPING REDS

ST. LOUIS, May 22—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals today reached the top in the National league, defeating the Cincinnati Reds, 4 to 2, while Brooklyn was losing to the Boston Braves. Today's victory was the thirteenth for the Cardinals in fourteen games.

Harry Heilmann hit a home run for Cincinnati in the fourth inning. The score:

SEIBOLD PULLS ROBINS OUT OF FIRST POSITION

BOSTON, Mass., May 22—(AP)—Harry "Socks" Seibold, who has finished every game he has started for the Braves this season, sent the Brooklyn Robins out of first place in the National league standing, when he made a hit in the ninth inning to give Boston a 6 to 5 victory.

Seibold had two bad innings, the seventh and eighth, which gave Brooklyn a 5 to 2 lead. The Braves scored twice in the eighth and in the ninth, pushed over another to tie the score with one out. Johnny Morrison, who had relieved Jim Elliott, passed Rollings putting two on base, and after an infield out had advanced them, Seibold scratched an infield hit past the pitcher and drove in the winning run. The same officials as last year will handle the meet. Courtland Whitney will be clerk of course and Matthew J. Sheridan will be starter, and they, with members of the senior leader corps of the Y. M. This will be a great help to those who are in charge when it comes time to find the contestants for the various events.

FIVE PIRATE PITCHERS TO HALT CHICAGO CUBS

PITTSBURGH, May 22—(AP)—Chicago and Pittsburgh each made 13 hits today but the champions batted timely while the play of the locals was loose and the Cubs evened the series by taking the game 12 to 5.

Steve Swetonic was slated to start the game for Pittsburgh but was taken to a hospital in the morning suffering from acute appendicitis. Petty went to the mound but he could not hold the invaders and Spencer, Chagon, Jones and Erickson followed him to the slab. In the seventh and eighth innings the relief hurlers gave Chicago seven bases on balls.

Hornsby and Hartnett hit home runs for the Cubs and Suhr for the Pirates. The score:

UNITED STATES RACQUET MEN LEAD MEXICO, 2 TO 0

WASHINGTON, May 22.—(AP)—More than three hours of slashing tennis were required today to give the United States Davis cup team a 2-0 lead over Mexico in the second round of American zone competition, virtually assuring a European invasion by the Americans.

A lithe, 20-year-old Mexican, Ricardo Tapia, fighting tooth and nail, carried blond Wilmer Allison of Austin, Texas, through five torrid sets before succumbing 6-3, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2, 7-5.

On Saturday Lott will tackle young Tapia, while Allison is scheduled to play Borbolla. With the doubles tomorrow in the hands of Allison and Johnny Van Ryn of East Orange, New Jersey, experts argued tonight that there was little chance that American team plans of sailing for Europe on June 3 in quest of the Davis cup would be upset.

Both Tapia and Allison today played brilliant tennis. Hardly a rally of their closely contested match passed without applause from a gallery of 2,000 gathered in the improvised arena at the Chevy Chase club.

The story of Lott's overwhelming victory over Borbolla is told in the score sheet. The Chicago youth scored 22 placements against three for the Mexican, and committed only 39 errors while forcing Borbolla into 60 faults.

In an inter-team exhibition doubles game following the Davis cup matches, Lott and John Doeg paired together to defeat J. Berkeley Bell and Gregory Mangin, 6-3, 3-6.

BULKELEY GOES INTO LEAD IN SCHOLASTIC STANDING

Bulkeley went back into first place in the Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island Interscholastic league chase Thursday at New London when Art Dayton blanked Windham high, 5 to 0. Bulkeley scored two each in the first and fifth and one in the third.

Bulkeley now has won five games and lost two, a percentage of .714, and is followed by the Academy and Chapman Tech in a tie for second with four wins and two losses, a mark of .667. By winning Saturday's game with Bulkeley, the Academy could change places with the Whalers.

The standing:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Bulkeley	5	2	.714
N. F. A.	4	2	.667
Chapman Tech	4	2	.667
Stonington	3	5	.375
Westerly	2	4	.333
Windham	2	5	.287

SCHMELING TALKS WITH MOTHER ON RADIO PHONE

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., May 22.—(AP)—Max Schmeling, German contender for the world's heavyweight championship, abandoned the routine of training today long enough to motor to Schenectady for a trans-oceanic radio phone conversation with his mother at Berlin.

The radio phone facilities were placed at Schmeling's disposal by the General Electric company's broadcasting officials. The conversation was broadcast generally in the United States by WGY in this city, and in Germany by the Deutschland-Sender, at Koenigswusterhausen, a suburb of Berlin.

SPRAGUE CLUB TO HAVE PRIZE SKEET SHOOT SUN.

The Sprague Rod and Gun club will conduct a prize skeet shoot Sunday from 11 a. m. to 3 p. m. at their grounds at Versailles. Following the shoot, chowder and hot dogs will be served those participating. Harry Sargent is field captain.

Shikat Throws O'Shocker

BALTIMORE, May 22.—(AP)—Dick Shikat, recognized in many states as the world's champion heavyweight wrestler, tonight threw Pat O'Shocker of Baltimore in 43 minutes. The champion used a body slam to end the match, which had been exceptionally close.

Academy Confident of Beating Bulkeley Sat.

The entire school is pointing toward the second game of the annual series Saturday at New London in a serious frame of mind and confident that their team is the better nine days out of ten.

The Wildcats had a long practice session Wednesday, their first real workout in a week. The rainy weather has handicapped the team somewhat since last Wednesday but Coach Brigham expects that with the help of Old Sol for a few days the boys will be able to regain their batting eyes and be ready to give Mr. Callahan or anybody Bulkeley has to offer an unpleasant afternoon.

Bulkeley plays Windham today at New London and by winning can break the triple tie that exists in the league and go a half game ahead of N. F. A. and Chapman Tech. Tech and the Academy both moved up to a tie with Bulkeley Tuesday by winning their games, the Wildcats from Westerly and the Conwaymen from Stonington.

The Bulkeley needs Saturday's game to stay in both the league and state title class and they are going out after it.

Adding to the incentive for a victory today is the fact that the Academy has beaten Bulkeley only once this school year in any sport. That came in football. Bulkeley won over the Wildcats in a cross-country dual run, finished ahead in the league run, won in a dual swimming meet, in a dual track meet, finished ahead in the league meet and then the baseball victory last Saturday, 7 to 1.

AMERICA'S CHANCES IN FRENCH TENNIS INCREASED

AUTEUIL, France, May 22.—(AP)—America's chances in the French hard court doubles championships increased today with the straight-set advance of Helen Wills Moody and Elizabeth Ryan to the women's semi-finals and of Bill Tilden and Wilbur Coen to the men's quarter-final round.

At the same time the United States forces suffered their first casualty through the defeat of Helen Jacobs and her Belgian partner, Jeanne Sigart, by the English combination of Joan Fry and Ermyntrude Harvey. British teamwork prevailed at 6-3, 6-3, in the quarter-final tilt.

Mrs. Moody and Miss Ryan were victorious over Mme. Bordes and Mme. Henrotin of France, at 6-2, 6-4, and thus qualified to encounter Miss Fry and Miss Harvey next.

Tilden's cannonball service was doing terrific execution as he and Coen downed Antoine Gentien and Georges Glasser of France at 6-1, 14-12, 6-2, the American champion rolling up a total of 17 aces.

The semi-finals now will find Mme. Simon Mathieu and Mlle. Yvette Barbier of France opposing Mrs. Phoebe Watson and Miss De Round of England in one match while Mrs. Moody and Miss Ryan meet Miss Fry and Miss Harvey in the other.

The quarter-finals now will pit Tilden and Coen vs. Jean Borotra and Rene De Buzelet, France; Gregory and Collins vs. Harry Hopman and Jim Willard, Australia; H. G. N. Lee and G. P. Hughes, England, vs. E. F. Moon and Jack Crawford, Australia, and Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon, France, vs. Takeichi and Harada and Tamio Abe, Japan.

SINGER 2 TO 1 FAVORITE TO DEFEAT FERNANDEZ

NEW YORK, May 22.—(AP)—Al Singer will find out tomorrow night whether his dream of a title tilt with Sammy Mandell, the lightweight champion, is about to come true.

Singer tackles Ignacio Fernandez, clouting Filipino, in a ten-round main bout in Madison Square Garden. Fernandez knocked Al out in three rounds a year ago and Singer must wipe out that defeat in order to win a chance at Mandell's title in one of the open-air ball park shows this summer.

Singer, with an advantage in weight and an added year of polish and experience, is rated a two to one favorite over the game Filipino, whose chief assets are ability to "take" it and a right hand that is always dangerous. Singer has paid Fernandez' board and room bills here for the past month in order to keep the Filipino on deck for the return engagement. The match was postponed a month ago due to Singer's bad hands.

Nel Tarleton, British featherweight, meets Joe Scalfaro, of New York, in the ten-round semi-final and Lew Massey, of Philadelphia, tackles Johnny McMillan, of Glasgow, in the opening ten.

NAT HOLMAN RETIRES FROM BASKETBALL GAME

NEW YORK, May 22.—(AP)—Nat Holman, famed as one of the greatest professional basketball players in history, announced today his retirement from the game to accept the position of director of physical education at the 92nd Street Young Men's Hebrew association, here.

A member of 12 different teams in the last 13 years, Holman is known most widely for his playing as forward of the Celtics during the eight seasons following 1920. Later Holman organized his own Hakoah five and last season he played successively with the New York, Syracuse and Chicago clubs of the American league. He also found time to coach the City College of New York five and will continue in this capacity.

MARTIN TEAM HAS STRONG OPPOSITION IN FALL RIVER

The Fall River A. C. nine will furnish the opposition against the J. B. Martin team Sunday afternoon at the ball park in Taftville, bringing with them some of the fastest players in that city. The Martin boys lost the first game of the season, but are confident they will enter the win column in Sunday's game behind the pitching of Walter Lindner from Deep River. Manager Eccleston will use his strongest lineup.

GUS SONNENBERG BEATS DIGLANE IN TWO FALLS

BOSTON, May 22.—(AP)—Gus Sonnenberg successfully defended his claim to the world's heavyweight wrestling title here tonight against Henri DiGlane of France. "Sonny" won the first fall in 17 minutes and the third in 13 minutes, both with flying tackles. DiGlane won a sensational second fall in 17 minutes with an inside crotch hold and body slam.

OPPOSITION TO FEMININE COMPETITION AT OLYMPIC

BERLIN, May 22—(AP)—Battling for retention of women's track and field events in the Olympic games, the International Amateur Athletic federation indicated today that it would go so far as to declare a walkout of all male athletes if its demands are not met.

The federation, at its closing session this afternoon, adopted a resolution proposed by the American delegate Gustavus T. Kirby of New York, providing that the I. A. A. F. shall remain in Berlin in recess ready to be re-convened in case the international Olympic congress next week turns thumbs down on feminine competition.

Abandonment of the feminine track and field events which were inaugurated in the Amsterdam Olympics of 1928 would be accepted by the federation only on condition that all other women's competition such as fencing and swimming should be eliminated. Absence then would be given with keen regret.

That such drastic measures probably will not be necessary, however, was indicated by Murray Hulbert, former president of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States, who joined Kirby in leading the fight.

Hulbert pointed out to the Associated Press that the Olympic committee's policy is to defer to the wishes of the country that plays host to the next Olympic games, in this case the United States, which is strongly in favor of allowing the girls to compete at Los Angeles in 1932. He added that France, England, Italy and Hungary appear to be the only nations opposed to women's participation.

Most of the opposition to feminine competition arose after the 800 meter event at Amsterdam where several of the girls collapsed.

A heave of 52 feet, 7 1-4 inches made by Emil Hirshfeld of the German Olympic team, August 26, 1928, in Bochum, Germany, was recognized as a new world's record for the 16-pound shot put.

Collegians Win, 8 to 5

The Gas House Collegians took a loose game from the White Street All Stars Wednesday evening at Mohegan park by an 8 to 5 score. The fielding features were furnished by Casey. The winner's lineup: Murphy, c; Casey, p; Bamber, 1b; Savage, 2b; Shrimp Starr, 3b; Joe, ss; Walter, rf; Ray K., lf; Capt. Smitty, Jr., cf. Jarvis, Pigeon and Snyder pitched for the losers.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY MEETS AT EPISCOPAL CHURCH

The Rhode Island branch of the Woman's auxiliary of the Episcopal church, with nearly 200 delegates from all over the state, attending was held Thursday at Christ church, with sessions at 10:15 and 11 a. m. and 2 p. m. Among the speakers were Bishop Creighton of Mexico and Rev. Dr. Patton. Very Rev. Bishop James DeWulf Perry of Providence presided at the meetings.

Bishop Creighton told of the church conditions in Mexico, describing the Hooker school for girls in Mexico City, which has an enrollment of over 500, and St. Andrew's schol for boys there, where many of the students are preparing for the ministry. Bishop Patton, who is head of the American Church Institute for Negroes, which has a greater enrollment than Tuskegee and Hampton together, told of the work being accomplished. He pointed out that St. Paul's school at Lawrenceville, Va., has a larger enrollment than any Episcopal school in the world. He said that the southern New England states were interested in the slave traffic during the early history of the country and the residents of this section now should help the Negroes whose ancestors were brought here against their will in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. At noon, the delegates had lunch in the vestry, women of the parish preparing and serving the meal.

Thursday afternoon, the business session was held and reports from the various departments were received. Mrs. Charles C. Binney, president of the branch, presided.

JUSTICE POUILOT OPENS COURT TERM THURSDAY

Associate Justice Leonidas Pouilot, Jr., of Central Falls, Thursday in superior court for Washington county, announced to the members of the bar that while in Westerly he would adopt a system to have five cases marked ready for the following day as each case on the docket was completed.

State Jury Commissioner Arthur Sherman was in court to check up on the qualifications of the accepted jurymen. When Talesman Charles D. Miner, gardener, of Westerly, questioned his fitness to serve by reason of his not having registered, Commissioner Sherman informed the court that he had registered Nov. 28, 1928, and as that was since June, 1928, was an acceptable juryman.

Robert G. Thackeray, manager, of South Kingstown, was excused as was also James J. Casey, foreman, and Everett D. Cottrell, farmer, both of Westerly, for business reasons and Arnold H. Burdick, machinist, of Westerly, by reason of illness. The names of George J. Beaudreau, superintendent, of Richmond and Edward W. Ryan, chauffeur of Narragansett, were not called. At the completion of the reading of the Westerly docket it developed that there were no cases ready for trial as Attorney John Ferguson, by reason of his being engaged in trial of a criminal case in the second district court in Wickford, representing the attorney-general's department, was not available to go on with the first trial case. A recess was declared at 12:20. Mr. Ferguson in the meantime unable to be reached, appeared in court and agreement was made to empanel a jury and take up trial of a case Friday. Judge Pouliot informed the respondent counsel that he had received a letter from Mr. Ferguson in which it was stated that he would be ready with all his cases Friday. Jurors were excused to report at 2 p. m. In the afternoon jurymen not on the empaneled jury were excused further, to report in court Monday morning next at 10:45

At 2 o'clock the trespass case of Annunziato Vuono vs. Frank Capalbo and Joseph Grillo, all of Bradford, was taken up, with Turano and Flynn for plaintiff and Ferguson for respondent. The case was outlined to the court as taking place at Bradford on land deeded by John Catto to the plaintiff. The fact that a Westerly juryman, Attillo Fraquelli was related to grantor was brought to the court's attention.

With Ronald G. Hinchliffe, of South Kingstown, the 15th talesman examined and accepted, named as foreman the jury was empanelled as follows: Walter W. Sherman, North Kingstown; Martin V. B. Irons, South Kingston; Elisha W. Taylor, South Kingstown; Abvery I. Crandall, Hopkinton; Wells W. Fowler, Westerly, excused; Daniel H. Spink, North Kingstown; Alexander Greig, Westerly, excused; Edwin Fisher, Charlestown; Herman A. Garlick, North Kingstown; Frank Hammond, North Kingstown; Elisha P. Crandall, Charlestown; William Duguid, Westerly, excused; Harry G. Parkis, North Kingstown; Attillio Fraquelli, Westerly.

AN ANTIQUE JAP TABLE GIVEN AWAY BY OWNER

William Frank came across a queer antique, a square table, made about 362 years ago in Japan. It is put together with little squares. A letter found in the top drawer explained that it was made by a jackknife and a hammer and it took 12 months to make it. The finest work can be seen on this table. On the top is pictured a cow, dogs, a cat, all made with wooden squares. Even the milk-bag is on the cow. In the center is a big elephant, done the same way with squares; the trunk has a piece of wood shaped like a peanut. The picture of the cat is a wonderful piece of work. She is drinking milk from a bowl. The table is 10 feet long and 8 feet wide. It has round legs with a picture of a snake on each leg. Mr. Frank says he has been in every city in the world and has seen some relics, but this table is the best one yet, "Not because I own it myself, but because of the hand work with only a jackknife. The elephant picture alone took 2500 small squares and that is something to do with a knife. In the cow are 1000 squares, the cat had 500 squares, the dog 800 squares. The table is made from Japan chestnut pine with a red streak down the center. Owner Frank came across the relic while he was traveling along in his Franklin car, to a part of the world where a letter with a 2 cent stamp takes six days to reach. It was in Deveau. He was passing a large farm house with old-fashioned glass bottles in front for sale. In the junk pile was this queer table looking as if it was hit by a hurricane.

"I went and knocked on the door; a good looking lady came and said 'no ice today!' Thought I was the iceman. But she found out her mistake and excused herself. Well, lady, how much do you want for that old table that looks like a western hurricane had hit it? She told me to take it away—it was no good—only in the way. So putting it in the auto, I was bound back to the fishing village and it took me working nights, seven months to put it in shape. But now you can see the old relic looks good, but where you pick up an antique and fix it up it sure takes time. But it is great work and interesting. I could sit for hours and fix up old furniture.

"One night my uncle, Max Long, came from Canada. It was the first time I had seen him in 22 years. He walked into the house as I was working on an old English pipe with a stem about 82 inches long. The bowl had a picture of a fox on it. It would hold a can of Edgeworth tobacco. "Well, William, what are you doing? I almost dropped the pipe when his voice let loose. We hugged each other for ten minutes, so glad to see each other again. Uncle Max looked the pipe over and wanted to know the history of it. Well, that pipe is 175 years old—made by an English fisherman. One day as he was out on the water and did not expect to see land for three years, he started to make this pipe to pass the time for a life of a fisherman is from sun to sun—his day's work is never done. He made the pipe while on the salt water, but I don't know how long it took him.

"Well, William, how about that Japan table you have in the house? I heard all about it in Canada." Well, come upstairs where all the relics are, talk about a old antique place! The table was in the center. Well, uncle, here it is! That sure is old—over 300 years. That is wonderful. Gee, I would like to have that table as a gift from you!

William scratched the few hairs on his left side of his head to think whether he would part with a table so old that it can almost tell the story itself. His uncle was waiting for an answer; pretty soon it came, "Well, Uncle Max, we have not met in over 20 years, and have always been good pals since we were at school together, in the red school on the hill and when you go back home I may never see you again in Noank. So I think that you will be the lucky one to take back to Canada the old Japan pine table! But it makes tears come to my eyes to part with it, for I've had it over 50 years!" "Well, I will always remember you by the table!" He saw lots of other things but the table looked the best.

"It is time for my wife to have supper and you've got to close your eyes and guess what we will have for supper." So the lady rang the bell, meaning supper was ready. The soup was on. Uncle Max closed his blue eyes and said, "Well, that smells like a North Dock cod fish with H. H. Parks' onions in it! So he opened his eyes and sure enough it was the North Dock cod fish. Gee! it is funny you can tell a Noank cod fish from the rest by smelling!" And the man from Canada eat until he could not see, the first cod supper he had in over 20 years.

After supper, sitting in the parlor puffing away on a cigar, he said, "I like Noank—think no place is like it in this North America; and when I go back, I will have in my home town an old fashion Japan pine table that came from Noank!"

BEAUTY and Health

If you have ever been a convalescent and enjoyed a delightfully arranged tray of dainty food, you have had a practical and unforgetable lesson in the importance of eye-appeal in the satisfying of appetite and the stimulation of digestion

And truly it may be said that the visual enjoyment of food and drink is a delightful experience for everyone—sick or well. For this reason publications devote much space to the showing of proper table settings; cook books suggest delightful arrangements of foods of eye-pleasing harmony and color contrast.

Crisp, spotless linen, fine china or porcelain, gleaming silver, sparkling glass, radiant and odorous flowers—what are these table accessories but attempts to surround the serving of foods with an aura of delight that pleases the eye and gladdens the heart.

We of Berry Springs who know the food content, the digestive value, the vitamin importance of Berry Spring Ginger Ales—who think mostly in terms of its usefulness in balancing the American diet—Even we must recognize that eye-appeal has much to do with the popularity of these health beverages.

The bottle itself—with its clean, fresh label has a beauty appeal. But the real revelation of true beauty comes when you snap off the cap and pour the bubbling liquid into the glass. Here, truly is an arousing beauty suggesting refreshment of body and mind—the crystal clarity, the sparkling effervescence expressing in a visual way the innate purity of the beverage. And this beauty of appearance carries over into the drinking where it becomes known as "deliciousness." What is that but beauty expressed in terms of taste!

Still deeper goes the thought of beauty. For is not beauty a kind of harmony and does not Berry Spring Ginger Ale harmonize the digestion of other foods—yielding to the body a delightful refreshment that creates a sense of well-being, of "happiness"—a word for beauty in terms of feeling!

There Are Two Kinds of Berry Spring Ginger Ales, the Golden and Pale Dry. Golden Ginger Ale is of fuller body and slightly sweeter; Pale Dry has a higher fruit acid content and less sweetening. Both are good and good for you. Order your favorite kind in full quart (32 oz.) or full pint (16 oz.) bottles at any of the thousands of good stores which carry Berry Spring Beverages

The Valuable Vitamins "B" and "C" Are Found in Berry Spring Ginger Ales —

Vitamin "B" is regarded as essential to normal appetite and growth—lack of it accounts very often for cases of dyspepsia, constipation and other intestinal troubles.

Vitamin "C" is an important factor in the diet. Lack of it causes loss of vigor, vitality, stamina. It is especially valuable for the expectant or nursing mother.

Expenditures—Food for needy families, $17.13; clothing for needy families, $25.42; visiting nurses for same, $10; Christmas checks, $15; Christmas baskets and toys, $9.50; total, $77.07, leaving a balance of $9.43. The money derived from the sale will be used in welfare work. The poppy committee is Mrs. Haroldene Campbell, chairman, Miss Eva Edwards and Miss Minnie Flynn.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

CARE AND RAISING OF INFANT PLANTS

It is not a matter of difficulty to induce the commoner garden seed to come up but it is some trick to make a majority of the seeds which germinate reach maturity. Infant mortality among plants is unusually and deplorably high. This is due to lack of proper care on the infants of the plant world.

There are two extreme conditions that account for a great loss of tiny seedlings and even to a large percentage after they have gotten well into growth. These are an oversupply of moisture and permitting them to dry up. The greatest care needed is to obtain an even and uniform degree of moisture without water logging the seed bed or seed box.

The soil should be made light enough at the start in indoor planting to permit water to permeate it and drain off readily. There should be holes in the bottom of the seed box covered with broken pieces of flower pot, stone, or crockery to prevent the soil from leaking out but to prevent surplus moisture to pass through and out of the seed box.

In the open ground this condition takes care of itself except in heavy or clay soils and these soils should have special preparation to provide drainage before being used as outdoor seedbeds.

Damping off, a fungus pest caused by over moisture, takes a big toll of seedlings, the plant rotting off at the surface of the soil even while the top remains healthy in appearance. Soil disinfectants are now on the market which remedy this condition by destroying the fungus spores to a large extent. Peat moss is a sterile medium and used in seed box soil helps to keep this pest in abeyance but sharp drainage is the surest method.

Another cause of much loss of infant plant life is overcrowding through sowing the seed too thickly. Many plants will be crowded out of existence. Sow thinly and thin when the little plants are too thick in the rows. Do not expose tiny seedlings to the full strength of midday sun if it happens to be a hot day. Shade them from the full force of the sun but give them the benefit of the morning and later afternoon.

TIMBER GROWING PAYS

Full protection from fire, reforestation of denuded areas, and improved cutting practices are the minimum requirements necessary for successful timber growing in the northeastern states, says the forest service, U. S. department of agriculture.

In the attempt to meet the demand for information as to practical methods of growing timber profitably, the forest service is presenting the results of experience and investigation into timber growing and logging practice in the New England states, New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. This investigation is one of a series of studies dealing with minimum requirements for successful timber growing in the 12 principal forest regions of the United States.

The northeast is the most densely populated and also one of the most extensively forested regions in the United States. The region has five distinct forest types, each of which consists of a characteristic combination of species.

The real forest problem of this section is one of building up large areas of run-down forests, says the forest service. Even where fire has been kept out, cutting and subsequent neglect have resulted rather generally in a progressive deterioration which is revealed by poorly stocked stands and by an increased proportion of the less desirable species. Today comparatively little forest land in the region is producing the yield of which it is capable.

Fire control is nearly the only requirement absolutely necessary to insure at least partial production on most land already forested, the forest service finds. Essential features of adequate fire control include centralization and organization of control activities, maintenance of agencies for prompt detection, a suppression organization that can quickly get a properly equipped crew to every fire, and penalties for carelessness with fire in any form.

Planting is declared necessary to restore forest productivity on lands which have been so severely burned as to prevent natural reproduction, on occasional unburned cut-over areas which have not reproduced naturally, and on abandoned farm lands which are not reverting to forest.

The next step beyond keeping the land productive through protection and reforestation is to so manage a forest as to obtain a regular income from it. This involves such measures as improvement cuttings, regulation of grazing, and harvesting in such a way as to insure perpetuation of the stand.

The production of full timber crops often requires an outlay that could be avoided by letting nature take its course; but it is probable that this outlay will be repaid many fold by the increased value of the final product, the forest service's studies indicate. This is particularly true in the northeast, where favorable climate and soil conditions, desirable trees, and excellent markets combine to make timber growing a profitable business.

PASTURE FIELD DAY AT STORRS, JUNE 28

The Storrs experiment station is conducting a pasture experiment which is attracting many visitors. To better accomodate farmers who would like to inspect the fields, a third annual pasture day is being planned for June 28. On previous seasons, the day has been about a month earlier. The later date will permit inspection toward the end of the period of greatest growth of the grasses.

There are nine four-acre plots in the pasture experiment, all of which have been grazed since 1921. In the spring of 1924 various fertilizer treatments were sown upon the existing turf without cultivation or reseeding. Nitrogen treatments have been repeated since then on a few plots. The inital treatments of lime and mineral fertilizers were also repeated a year ago or at the beginning of the sixth year after the first fertilization.

The results secured during the first five-year period after fertilization were so significant that the experiment has attracted not only local but national and international attention. No other pasture grazing experiment in this country has been so extensive or conducted for so long a period.

Inspection trips will start at 10 o'clock in the morning. Basket lunch will be served in the field near the experiment. Following lunch, a program, lasting about an hour, is being planned for discussing pasture as feed for dairy animals.

SWEET CLOVER FOR POOR PASTURES LAND

There are sweet clover pastures in this state which carry five cows per acre during July and August the first season, and for four months in the second. In the third year sweet clover is started again easily or an excellent permanent pasture develops without further attention.

The Ohio agriculture experiment station has shown that the first year crop may approximate five tons of green forage per acre and the second year, thirteen tons. A large number of analyses showned a protein content from eighteen to twenty-five per cent of the dry matter.

It is now clear that sweet clover will (1) produce more pasture on a given area than any other crop, (2) supplement other pasture in either early or later pasture season, (3) grow on soils too "poor" and dry for permanent pasture.

Most of the sweet clover now grown in Connecticut is on soils which are so low in organic matter, sandy and dry, that other crops cannot be grown. However, sweet clover may produce a more valuable crop than any other on the best field on the farm. Any land which is tillable and not wet can be fitted for sweet clover.

Where lime is present in abundance sweet clover is a volunteer plant, a weed. On most of our soils not only must lime be applied liberally, but it must be mixed with the soil to plow depth. As a rule three tons of lime are needed on land not limed recently.

Sweet clover seed germinates best in a moist soil. Land plowed in the fall and barely leveled in the spring to cover the seed is ideal. Early spring plowing and firming with a roller may also be satisfactory.

Sweet clover seldom fails when its modest requirements are satisfied. However, three pounds each of alsike clover and orchard grass with fifteen pounds sweet clover per acre make a good pasture certain. Alsike clover persists in the wet spots and with orchard grass, whether wet or dry, and throughout the growing season. Blue grass and white clover soon appear without seeding. A bushel of oats will make feed before the sweet clover but must be grazed enough to keep from heading and yet not enough to injure the sweet clover.

Sweet clover grows so vigorously that it has seldom been included in fertilizer experiments. Since it is a legume and easy to inoculate, it needs no nitrogen unless for a small amount for starting on the poorest soils. It is able to extract more phosphorus and potassium from the soil than most plants.

In spite of the foregoing statements moderate treatments with a complete fertilizer high in phosphoric acid or manure and superphosphate (acid phosphate) may be required to produce large yields on poor soils.—J. S. Owen in C. A. C. Review.

HOW THE GROWERS RAISE THEIR ONIONS

Records show that the onion flourished in the fertile Nile valley before the building of the pyramids and doubtless slaves worked more willingly, placing block on block of stone, with the realization that an appetizing dish of onions awaited each at the end of the day's labors.

Watered by the same Nile river, swayed by the sea breezes in the South Sea Islands, favored in many regions of America, today the onion grows successfully throughout the world, according to Farmers' Bulletin 354-F, "Onion Culture," by W. R. Beattie, of the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. department of agriculture.

The onion develops best where the climate is cool and moist when the plant is making its growth and warm and dry at maturity, and where soil is of high fertility, good mechanical condition, well drained and free from weeds. The onion requires intensive cultivation and concentrated fertilization. Texas growers often apply 20 tons of rich manure every three years in addition to yearly applications of one-half to one ton of cottonseed meal or commercial fertilizer per acre. They also apply top-dressings of nitrate of soda. High analysis fertilizers with 4 or 6 per cent of nitrogen, 8 or 10 per cent of phosphoric acid and 8 or 10 per cent of potash are best suited to the plant and are applied at the rate of about a half ton an acre.

Under intensive cultivation, onions ordinarily yield five or six tons to the acre, although surprising yields of 16 or 17 tons an acre are on record. Taking one year with another the onion crop has proved profitable.

An insect, the thrip, causes considerable trouble to onion growers in most parts of the country but can be controlled by a nicotine spray, says the bulletin. The onion maggot, often destructive in the north may be controlled by treating the soil with a Bordeaux-oil emulsion.

THE FARMER'S TALK TO FARMERS

SUCCESS IN ANY DIRECTION

(Written Specially For The Bulletin)

What's the difference between a "home" and a "house?"

Very much the difference between a butternut and a butternut shuck.

Very much the difference between an ear of corn and a corn-cob.

Very much the difference between an unlit "gas-log" in the make-believe grate of a modern flat and the radiant cheerfulness of blazing hickory on the andirons of an old-fashioned fireplace.

Very much the difference between a priceless diamond and the empty jewel-case in which it might be kept, —but isn't.

All of which may or may not serve to explain why the country is full of houses but unfortunately short of homes.

There are houses enough, Lord knows; houses big and houses little, houses low and houses like towers, houses of wood and of brick and of cement and of slabs, and they're mushrooming up every day, more and more of them.

But homes,—how about them? Are they growing more plentiful and more attractive, or are they going "out of style?"

Recently a New York city father gave his daughter $25,000 for a wedding present. When interviewed as to what she planned to do with the money, she admitted that she hadn't thought much about it. Whereupon some one suggested that she buy a home. "Twenty-five thousand dollars for a home?" she ejaculated scornfully. "I was born in a hospital, I was brought up in a nursery, I was educated in a college, I'm going to be married in a church, I shall live in a hotel, and when I die I shall probably be buried from a 'funeral parlor.' Why put $25,000 into a 'home'?"

Why, indeed? That money would buy her a smart town car, a season ticket to a beauty parlor, a month's discomfort in a Florida hotel during the winter or a seashore barrack during the summer, and perhaps leave something over for a new dress or, at least, a new pair of dancing slippers.

Put money into a home? The very idea is preposterously unfashionable and out-dated.

To women of her sort home means as little as it does to some men who regard it solely as a place to eat and sleep in. "Wha' do I mean by comin' home this time o' night?" thickly repeated the ultra modern husband to the query flung at him over the bannisters; "Why, m'dear, all th'other places 's shut up!"

The old idea of home as a refuge, as a happy retreat in which to forget the asperities of business or toil, as a foretaste of Eden, that's all hooey to the real modernist, regardless of sex. It's a superstition relegated to the limbo of worn-out fairy tales. The preacher in a fashionable church would win few converts by pointing the way to even a heavenly home.

An unending Easter parade up and down a gold-paved avenue might be attractive to some; or a cushioned seat in the front row from which to watch an eternal baseball game might draw others. But the idea of home as a desideratum in itself is fast disappearing from the minds of too many.

This is a real misfortune and a far from hopeful omen. All that is dearest and best in humanity's past has centered in and has been based upon the idea of home. There are still those who cherish it and aspire to be worthy of it. Perhaps the present tendency to minimize or even sneer at the idea of a home is just one of those passing fads to which shallow-brained human nature seems peculiarly susceptible. Let us hope so.

A western editor of thoughtful mind recently took the completion of a "better homes" show as occasion to remark that "we should, in some way, make a clearer distinction between the house and the home." He admitted the possibility of a home being made in an apartment tower, despite its obvious limitations, but added that "the house is the ideal place for the making of the home."

Just as an illustration of how little importance size or architectural beauty have in real home-making, listen to the saga of Carey's Store, a tiny hamlet in the Missouri Ozarks. It consists of about a dozen houses, not one bigger than ten feet by twelve, and looking, from a distance, like nothing so much as a group of big boxes. Each house has one door, two windows and a chimney, yet, when the "wimmen folks" are asked how they manage in such narrow quarters they laugh and respond that they have "room a-plenty," even for a visitor or perhaps a boarder. True to Missouri habit, every house has a dog and some add a chicken-coop.

Every house is exactly like every other. Consequently, there are no social castes, and no municipal zoning. There is no incentive to show off, and no occasion for jealousies. Humble folk, you'll see, and yet the visiting reporter noted that they are rather prosperous, highly satisfied with themselves and their homes and really helpful neighbors. There is plenty of work for the men-folks, what with the big orchards and berry fields, the tobacco and tomato gardens, the canning factory and, in winter, the lumber camps. The reporter concludes his tale thus:

"Never at a loss for employment, not much overhead; is it any wonder that every family owns a car of more or less pretense? Well, they do, those happy folks that live in bird-boxes at Carey's Store."

Now listen to the tale of an equally humble and equally upstanding farmer-man of Ulster county, N. Y. When he bought his small farm of five acres, eight years ago, according to the inventory taken by a neighbor, "he had a wife, $85 in cash, an old horse, a wagon, a few dishes, an old table, three chairs, a clock, an old bed, a rented shack and a will to live as the prosperous do."

The first four years he spent in improving his five acres, putting them into berries and fruit, and adding two acres to his holding. The fifth year found him with everything paid for, including a Buick sedan. The seventh year he had, at times, 15 persons working for him, had invested some savings in gilt-edged mortgages, and was paying an income tax.

He has had no income aside from that which came from his small farm. But that has been made to bring in progressive dividends, because he took care of everything, into the last fence-corner, and made his soil produce its best, so far as nature would let him. Says the neighbor who tells his story; "He now has seven acres of Ulster county farm land under splendid cultivation, and lives on Easy street."

Both these stories are submitted for the thoughtful consideration of those who wonder how it is possible to have a home on less than ten thousand a year, and those others who are forever asking "Does farming pay?"

Seems to me that anyone who really puts his mind to it might find answers to both questions. When a dozen Ozark families can make cosy homes out of ten by twelve boxes and incomes reckoned only in days' wages, it is hard to see why those with bigger incomes and roomier houses can't do as well. When a common farmer man can lift himself in seven years on a seven-acre farm from a capital of $85 and a mortgage to a residence on Easy street and the status of an income tax payer, it would look as if farming sometimes paid.

It isn't architectural stateliness which makes a home. Nor is it paint and paper and furniture. It is something in the hearts and souls of the indwellers. "Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home." Neither humility nor grandeur have anything whatever to do with the home-spirit. It is independent of both. It may exist in a Carey's Store box-house, or in the historic halls of Windsor castle. The fact that one is a "shanty" and the other a palace has nothing to do with the outcome.

And so with the problem of how to make farming pay. It can be done on a seven acre New York state fruit farm. It can be done, if the manager's reports are correct, on an 80,000 acre wheat ranch in Montana. It isn't the acreage or the kind of crop which is important, in either case, but the gumption and grit which go into the working of both.

There's no advantage in minimizing the amount of effort which must be put into either the making of a home or the making a farm pay.

It's a crazy sort of optimism which assumes that everything is going to come out all right,—"and what's the use worrying or breaking one's back?"

It's quite as absurd to pretend that this is the best of all possible worlds as it is to make out that it is so bad as to be hopeless. It is neither.

Those who essay to make it over into their ideals of perfection in a minute or a century are doomed to disappointment. Those who decry all work upon it as wasted are themselves wastrels.

Those who take it as it is, accept its evils but keep pluckily hunting for its blessings, who won't take "No" for an answer and won't stay prone when they're knocked down,—those are the chaps who sometimes make homes out of hovels and make seven-acre farms pay big dividends.

Success in any direction is less apt to come to those who carry their heads so high as to be always in the clouds than to those who keep their feet on the ground; less apt to come to those who give up in despair than to those who keep on plugging away.

"Everything comes to those who work and wait," said the Old Man.

"Huh," said Young Smarty, "how long'd ye have to wait to carry water in a sieve?"

"Till it froze," quietly replied the ancient.

The WISE TIRE BUYER Won't Wait for LABOR DAY SALES

We've never been able to understand why so many people wait until just before Labor Day to buy their tires. We know they do because our records show us that we sell just twice as many tires the few days before Labor Day as we do on any other three days.

Why not get together on this for your benefit and ours? You might as well have your tires now so you can enjoy care free driving on your short summer jaunts or vacation trips.

We had just as soon give you a little lower price right now. We'll be glad to pass on to you in a lower price the amount we would have to spend around Labor Day to hire extra help and provide the necessary extra service.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

There's little we can say or do
But others are affected too.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

How long Reddy Fox would have remained trying to get Nanny Meadow Mouse out of that tin can in which she had found shelter, had not Farmer Brown's Boy suddenly appeared once more, no one knows. Reddy was so intent on what he was doing that he had forgotten all about Farmer Brown's Boy. It was the snapping of a twig that warned him that some one was coming. One hasty glance and Reddy was on his way. Reddy can run very swiftly when he wants to and now he wasted no time.

Farmer Brown's Boy caught a glimpse of Reddy as he raced away. He didn't see where Reddy had come from and he hardly gave him a thought. Presently he came to that tin oilcan that he had thrown in the bushes. A bit of grass was sticking out of the round hole which Nanny Meadow Mouse used as a doorway. Farmer Brown's boy noticed this. It gave him an idea. He picked up the old can.

"I believe," said he, "that I'll put this old can up in a tree. Jenny Wren might take it into that funny little head of hers to build a nest in here, should she happen over this way. I believe I'll fasten it up in a tree. I've known of birds building in just such places. If a pair of birds should nest here, the old can would be of some use after all."

So Farmer Brown's Boy once more picked up the old can. He peeped within, but all he could see was a little grass. He couldn't see Nanny Meadow Mouse. Close at hand was a young cherry tree. Farmer Brown's Boy then reached up as high as he could and wedged the can between two branches. Then he fished a piece of string from his pocket and securely lashed the can in place. The round opening, which was Nanny's doorway, was facing toward the south. "There!" said he. "I guess this will do. Here's hoping that some one will find this and decide that it will make a good home." With this Farmer Brown's Boy went whistling away across the Green Meadows toward his own home.

For a long time Nanny Meadow Mouse remained still. So many things had happened that day that Nanny had quite lost heart. No sooner did everything seem to be all right than she discovered that it was all wrong. So she remained quiet for a long time. She wasn't at all sure that Reddy Fox was not waiting to jump on her the instant she poked her head out of that little round doorway.

By and by Nanny noticed a little motion. Somehow her house didn't seem quite steady. She began to wonder what that meant. It rocked ever so little. Finally she got courage enough to go close to the little doorway so that she could look out. She didn't venture to put her nose out, but just stood looking out.

"This is queer," thought Nanny. "All I can see are green leaves and the sky. I ought to see grass, but I don't. How can I be seeing leaves?"

She sat a while and thought this over. Thinking it over didn't help a bit. The more she thought the more puzzled she became. Finally she decided that she would just put her head out. She did. She put her head out and took one good look around and then almost fell over backwards. She was up in the air! She really was! You know Nanny is a very small person and when she looked down the ground looked a frightfully long distance away. At first she didn't quite realize what it all meant, but after venturing to look out again, she understood that she was up in a tree. Once she had had her home in an old nest in a bush, so she understood just what it meant, though how she got there she didn't understand. Right away she made up her mind that she was going to get away from that old tin can as soon as ever she could.

Magic Oxygen Salts Bath Never Fails
No More Burning Aching Feet

No matter how many corns you have or how painful they are—soak your feet for 15 minutes in a delightfully soothing and revitalizing Radox foot-bath for 3 or 4 nights—then lift corns and callouses right out—roots and all and they won't come back either unless you wear shoes again which aggravate your feet.

No cutting or digging is required because Radox liberates oxygen which softens hard outer layers of corns, each night penetrating the pores further and further, carrying the salts right to roots of corns which are so loosened they can be lifted out bodily.

Your feet are made strong—healthy—vigorous—hard skin on heels and toe go also.

Lee & Osgood Co. and all good drugstores are stocked with Radox—if they aren't insist upon them ordering it if you want to experience great foot-joy and comfort.

THE JOHN P. SMITH CO.

New Haven.

In 1905 John P. Smith started in business for himself manufacturing wire work, under the trade name of John P. Smith and Co. At that time, he rented the third floor of the building at 493 State street, New Haven.

As the business increased, it was necessary to have more room and in 1910, the firm was occupying the entire building of four stories.

In 1921, the business was incorporated under the name of The John P. Smith company, of which Mr. Smith is still the active head.

In 1927, Mr. Smith purchased a modern factory building, at 419-443 Chapel street having a floor space of approximately 30,000 square feet. There are about 35 employed by the firm at the present time who manufacture all kinds of wire work, dipping baskes, wire cloth, rubbish burners, milk bottle carriers and fireplace screens. The building at 493 State street where the office and salesrooms are located, is still maintained with the upper floors given up entirely to stock for the wholesale and retail trade.

Mr. Smith has been awarded several patents, among them being one which is now used on the hinged fireplace screens. These fireplace screens are sold throughout the United States.

The firm is also distributor for the Page Steel and Wire company of Bridgeport and are erecting a considerable amount of the well known Page fence throughout the state. Mr. Smith is a member of the executive committee of the Page Fence association and chairman of the Standardization committee. This association is made up of all the Page fence distributors throughout the United States and Canada.

Spring

O'er the lip of the hill, down the cup of the hollow,
With garments a-swing, hand in hand with Apollo,
With rosy hands flinging full largesse of splendor,
Her breath flower-fragrant with living and laughter
And loves that delight first—and count the cost after,
Luting laughter, and pause, Prosperine and the Sun-god,
To grace with a transient glory each dun rod
Of peach in the orchard that leans to the hollow
Where, as she stands threading pink blossoms, a swallow—
The first of the season—in fear lest she miss him
Sweeps down—breast a-thrill when she lingers to kiss him.
Each pear-blossom shyly discards her brown cover,
And, smiling to note it, our Lady of Blisses
Turns, touching a daffodil-bed with her kisses,
Ere, breasting the creek like a green and gold billow,
She rises to deck the slim wands of the willow,
Now she flits, fairy-footed, where gold lights are dappling
The grass her tread greens 'neath a gum's slender sapling,
There lilts she of leafing in such darling fashion,
The sap trills a tremulous paean of passion,

Helen Burke, in Sydney Bulletin.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"Have you caught anything yet?"

"No, but I have tamed the fish so that they eat off the hook."—Hummel.

Buyer—Is this airplane absolutely safe?

Manufacturer—Yes—the safest on earth.

Doctor—"Not if you are careful."

"Your husband is a great inventor?"

"Yes, some of the excuses he invents for staying out late are known throughout the world."—Nagels Lustige Welt.

Scift—What kind of a runabout have you?

Bjones—Why, er, er, mine has two feet and has lately taken to wearing long dresses again.—The Pathfinder.

The Publicity Man—What's the matter with this line: "Tears and laughter follow each other"?

The Movie Manager—It won't catch the matinee crowd. No woman wants to laugh and grow fat and then wash out her complexion with tears.

"What did the gypsy prophesy for you?"

"A great loss."

"Has it come true?"

"Yes, as soon as she had gone I missed my watch and money."—Lustige Blaetter.

LEADING SHARES SHOW RESISTANCE IN DULL SESSION OF STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, May 22.—(AP)—Bear traders found their course increasingly difficult in today's stock market. Efforts to force leading shares below the resistance points represented by the lows reached on the reaction early this month, were unavailing, and volume not only shriveled on the further declines of the earlier hours, but quiet support was accorded to pivotal shares. The list was displaying considerable firmness at the close.

Although the market is paying far more attention to business conditions than to the credit situation, the Federal Reserve statement as of May 21, showed some interesting changes. The total of bills and securities for the 12 banks was $11,000,000 above the previous week's, with most of the gain made by the New York bank. Discounts were off very slightly, but reserve note circulation of the local institution increased $9,000,000, although this item for the entire system was off $12,000,000 from the week ended May 14.

In this connection, it was pointed out that whereas Federal Reserve note circulation has been declining steadily for more than two months, the circulation of the treasury's gold certificates has been increasing. This growth represents an important basis for credit expansion, since substitution of reserve notes, requiring only 40 per cent support in gold, for the treasury currency, which represents 100 per cent gold, would release an important amount of the precious metal.

The increase of $8,000,000 in brokers' loans to a total of $4,015,000,000 apparently reflected borrowings by pools, which have been moderately active, and by purchasers of stock on a scale-down. Distribution of new bond issues has also been going forward in the past week.

There was virtually no change in money. Rates on time loans were revised upward a quarter of one per cent in the longer maturities, which had been reduced by that amount on Wednesday. The Bank of England failed to cut its rediscount rate and the New York Federal Reserve directors likewise took no action.

Grain prices moved up. Wheat was strong, 2 3-4 to 3 cents higher on bullish Kansas estimates and reports of rust in Texas. Corn advanced 1 3-8 to 1 7-8 in sympathy with wheat and on forecasts of unfavorable weather. The commodities were quiet, with sugar and cotton both steady.

Stock prices softened in the morning, but by early afternoon the leadership of General Motors, Ludlum Steel, Corn Products, Grigsby Grunow and a few others had attracted a following and a miscellaneous assortment, including Fox, Radio-Keith-Orpheum, General Electric, Public Service of New Jersey and North American, displayed a much firmer tone. U. S. Steel, which had been down to 166 3-4, recovered nearly 3 points, closing at 169 1-4 for a small net gain. Most of the early leaders ruled moderately higher throughout the remainder of the day, and were joined by American Telephone, United Aircraft, Loew's, Vanadium, American Tobacco "B" and Johns-Manville.

Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron was strong, climbing 2 points to a new high to the accompaniment of reports of negotiations for an alignment with a prominent electric power company. International Salt's response to the increased dividend and the proposed three for one split-up, was a 4-point advance to a new peak price.

J. I. Case was again the plaything of the shorts, making several wide moves that ended in a net loss of 14 3-4 points. American Machine and Foundry, which is to be split five for one, surrendered a large part of yesterday's gain. New lows for the year were made by American Locomotive, U. S. Freight, Calumet and Arizona and Mohawk Carpet, the latter going down more than 2 points on omission of the 75-cent dividend. Inspiration Copper, whose directors cut the quarterly disbursement in two—the third copper dividend to be reduced this week—held steady on the news.

Foreign exchanges, especially the Europeans, were firm. The French franc was a shade higher

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, May 22.—(AP)—New life was fused into prime bonds in a late rally today. After dull trading most of the day, both the tone and volume improved near the close on substantial accumulations, particularly in railroad issues.

Although the spurt did not extend to the whole list, railroad issues appreciated to a greater extent than in some days and there were many gains of from half to one point.

Great Northern 4 1-2s, Burlington 4s, Central Pacific first 4s, and Chicago & Alton 3 1-2s, gained more than a point. A good demand for Rock Island 4s, Missouri Pacific 5s, Nickel Plate 4 1-2s, several Pennsylvania issues, St. Louis, San Francisco 4 1-2s, Union Pacific 4 1-2s, and Southern Railway General 4s, moved them up 1-4 to 3-4 of a point.

The other promising section of the list was foreign bonds, which were firm and active, with government issues most in demand. Japanese bonds advanced about 1-4 of a point; Danish 5 1-2s were up 1; the entire list of Belgians appreciated 1-4 of a point.

In sympathy with the stock for which it is exchangeable, Philadelphia Reading Coal and Iron 6s touched a new 1930 high at 107 7-8, up 2 3-8. American Telephone 4 1-2s were strong, up 2 points on the last day on which they may be converted at the present rate. Convertibles as a whole were irregular.

United States governments were inactive, there was some demand for Liberty issues and they gained slightly.

NEW YORK, May 22.—(AP)—Action on the quarterly dividend of the Greene-Cananea Copper company has been postponed until the June meeting, so that time of declaration and payment may conform to date of dividend action of Anaconda Copper company, of which it is a subsidiary.

American Telephone stock lost $20 of quoted value at the end of the trading today. The rights which have been quoted around $20 will be pared from the stock quotation at the opening tomorrow, when the stock will be traded ex-rights.

More than 230,000 shares of Wilcox Rich class B stock have been deposited in connection with the proposed merger with Eaton Axle and Spring company, thus assuring consummation of the consolidation.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, May 22.—(AP)—Reports of crop shrinkage southwest ranging from 20,000,000 to 32,000,000 bushels since May 1, led to a sharp jump in wheat values today. Unofficial estimates were current that Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas together promise now a yield of but 157,000,000 to 167,000,000 bushels, compared with the government May forecast of 189,000,000 bushels. Less favorable crop advices were also at hand from Nebraska.

Closing quotations on wheat were strong at practically the day's top level, 2 5-8a3c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed at 1 1-4a2 1-8c gain, oats 5-8a1 1-4c advanced, and provision 7c off to a shade up.

Commission house selling eased the provision market, despite an upward trend of hog values.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, May 22—(AP)—Curb market stocks again failed to establish a trend, today, and trading on this market, as on others, continued to dwindle, total sales falling below 600,000 shares.

Active features were the Electric Power and Natural Gas stocks. Such issues as United Gas, Missouri Kansas Pipe Line, Duquesne Gas and National Fuel Gas, were in fair demand, but only the last named moved up as much as a point. Electric Bond and Share fluctuated uncertainly, and closed up a fraction.

American Gas and Electric, American Commonwealth Power B, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, and North American Light and Power, gained 2 or 3 points. Standard Power and Light issues, and Northern States A lost about 3 points, and United Light A closed off a fraction.

Price movements were divergent and confusing in the industrial and specialty group. Technicolor, which broke sharply to new low ground yesterday, rebounded six points, coincident with announcement of the election to the board of John McHugh, chairman of the executive committee of the Chase National bank.

Deere tumbled 7 points, in response to reports from Chicago that the peak of the farm implement demand had passed. The artificial silk issues were weak. Celanese preferred issues dropped 4 and 5 points to new 1930 lows, and Tubize Chatillon lost 3 points. Columbia Pictures duplicated its low level of the year.

In the investment trust, Chatham Phenix Allied sold up about a point, in response to the declaration of an initial dividend of 50 cents. Mayflower Associates touched 69, its best level of the year. Goldman Sachs sagged fractionally.

Oils were dull and irregular. Gulf lost 2 points, and Cities Service, a fraction. South Penn mounted a point.

MOOSUP

The Legion auxiliary held a Memorial day planning meeting, Wednesday evening, in Foresters' hall. John Cote and Albert DeForge reported on the joint program in which the ladies of the G. A. R., the American Legion and auxiliary, cooperate. Rev. R. W. E. DeWolfe showed pictures from France.

A special communication of Rebecca chapter, No. 27, O. E. S., this week, will be visiting matrons' night. At this time the matrons from neighboring chapters will confer the degrees. A collection is to be taken for the Robert Morris fund, and the O. E. S. hospital.

Napoleon Harrell, Frank Carr and Velor Turcotte are working nights in the American Woolen company mill, Webster. They drive to and from by automobile.

Beatrice Young, who has been ill for several weeks at her home in Almyville, was taken Monday to the home of her sister, Mrs. Usyles Guelet in Glasgo.

Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Mathewson of Providence were at Mr. and Mrs. Roy Playdon's, Sunday.

Frank E. Tyler was home from New Haven, Sunday.

Leon Moulton is visiting in Providence.

Quinebaug Valley Circuit league of the M. E. church will be entertained Friday evening at the local M. E. church. The committee is Ruth Griffiths, Dorothy Salisbury, Madge Briggs, Rosamond Wilde, Lillie Howard.

Saturday will be Poppy day, under direction of the American Legion auxiliary. Mrs. Joseph Godchild and Mrs. Lena Carron constitute the auxiliary Memorial day committee. Members of the organization will be in uniform, selling poppies on the streets all day Saturday. The proceeds will be divided between the Legion and the auxiliary, to be used only for welfare work among needy veterans and their dependents.

Mrs. Grace C. Reuss, Mrs. Everett S. Ladd, Mrs. Warner Smith, Mrs. Frank Coagdon and Richard W. Daggett, their marshal for Memorial day, met with two members of the Legion auxiliary, Mrs. Joseph Godchild and Mrs. Lena Carron, also with the American Legion committee, Albert DeForge, Edward Henderson and Rev. R. W. E. DeWolfe, in discussing ways and means of co-operation in a joint Memorial day program. Richard Daggett was unanimously chosen chairman, presiding in an able and impartial way. Mr. Daggett called on Albert DeForge, who said he thought all elements in the town were desirous of having one union, co-operative, Memorial day program. Mr. DeForge pointed out that the Legion from its inception chose to join with other, older patriotic organizations to honor the nation's dead, on the traditional Memorial day, already established by the G. A. R. and accepted by the American people. Various items in a possible program of a united observance of the day were discussed freely and at length with the greatest of goodwill. It was decided that Mr. Daggett should represent the Ladies of the G. A. R., to confer with men of the Legion committee Tuesday evening as to the details of the Memorial day program.

Mrs. Arthur Holmes of St. Paul's Episcopal church, Plainfield, will have charge of the lunch for the G. A. R. section of the parade. The Legion auxiliary will serve lunch for the Legion section. It is impossible to have all lunch together this year. Next year, the joint committees as agreed Monday night will plan together from the start and endeavor to have the program end in each of the three villages in turn on successive years and to have lunch for all at that place. There will be two bands. Reveille will be sounded and salutes fired at 7 a. m. The Legion section will form at 7:30, arriving at the town honor roll, Central Village at 8:00. The order of other stopping places with those who have the prayer and the time of each stop is as follows: Evergreen, 8:15, Rev. George H. Reese; Union, Moosup, 9, Rev. E. Elwyn Tingley; All Hallows', monument, 9:30; All Hallows' cemetery, 10; Hammet, 10; Old Plainfield, 10:45, Rev. William C. Prentiss; Packer, 11:15, Rev. J. W. Higgins; St. John's, Plainfield, Rev. Father John H. Landry; Oneco, 1:15, Rev. D. E. Lafollett. Lunch will be at noon in both Plainfield and Moosup. Trucks have been offered by C. D. Salisbury's, Saad Brothers, Steinman Brothers, George Despathy, Moosup Wet Wash, E. J. Belleyance & Son, Maurice Foster and Andrew Pember. W. C. C. Hill and the Moosup Catholic Boy Scouts are securing the evergreen. Wreaths are being made by the women of the patriotic societies of the town. Richard Daggett will be marshal for the day.

WEDDING

Monday morning the marriage was solemnized, at All Hallows' church by Rev. Father Philip L. Massicot, of Yvonne Mary Bonnin and Elphaige Thetrault. The wedding was at 7 o'clock, just the two families being present. After the church ceremony the wedding party went to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Bonnin, River street, where a wedding breakfast was served. Mr. and Mrs. Thetrault left for a honeymoon in Woonsocket and New Bedford. The parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Thetrault, of Green Hollow road. The bridesmaid was Ida Jacques and the best man was the groom's brother, Joseph Thetrault. They have a host of friends who wish them happiness. The delicious wedding cake for the breakfast was made by the bride's sister-in-law, Mrs. Arthur Bonnin, and was frosted by Mrs. Lionel Bonnin in a design of pink and white.

THIEVES' BRIEF SUCCESS FOLLOWED BY STIFF FINES

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 22, — Fred and Bernice Ballanceau, husband and wife, residing on Brandegee avenue, Groton, and Louis Bellie, of Waterford, were in the police court this morning, charged with theft. The two men and woman were fined $50 and costs each, but execution of the sentence was suspended and the trio was placed on probation. The fact that the men and woman were not compelled to pay the penalty imposed was due to the fact that Ballanceau and his wife have several children, who would be the real sufferers if the parents were compelled to pay approximately $125 into the court treasury.

Ballanceau and his wife and Bellie were in New London yesterday in an automobile and Mrs. Ballanceau was doing the driving. They drove to Hamilton street at night and there the auto was parked. Ballanceau and Bellie alighted and went to Howard street where they scaled a fence in the rear of the Eastern Iron & Metal company. The men then forced entrance to a shed, removed about $300 worth of brass and copper, some of which was taken to the waiting automobile. Ballanceau and Bellie had been observed by a resident of Howard street to climb the fence and the observer reported that fact to police headquarters. Officers Carlos Stone and Lawrence Fardy were sent to the junk shop and there found the two thieves, who were arrested. Mrs. Ballanceau speeded away in the auto on the arrest of her husband and Bellie, but later she was arrested at her home by State Police Officer Peter Busch.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

Norma Shearer, who is starred in "The Divorcee," which will close tomorrow night at the Breed theatre, was born in Montreal, Canada, where she was educated before coming to the United States to seek a career in motion pictures. Her first Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer talkie was "The Trial of Mary Dugan" and she followed this triumph with "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" and "Their Own Desire." Robert Z. Leonard directed the dramatic feature, with Chester Morris playing opposite the star. Included in the supporting cast are Conrad Nagel, Robert Montgomery, Zelda Sears, Tyler Brooke, Florence Eldridge, Mary Doran, Helene Millard and Helen Johnson.

NORMA SHEARER

Broadway Theatre

That speedy, peppy, zippy drama of newspaper and modern sporting and society life, "Young Man of Manhattan," screened from the clever novel by Kathrine Brush, and starring Claudette Colbert, Norman Foster and Charlie Ruggles, is shown for the last times today at the cool Broadway, where the air is always seasonable and refreshing.

Tomorrow, that long-awaited riding, shooting hero of "The Virginian," lanky, lovable Gary Cooper, again rides to new honors in a heart-stirring drama of the great southwest, "The Texan," filmed from one of O. Henry's best known stories. Action, fast and furious, is rampant from the opening title, and as usual Gary achieves new screen laurels. Preeminently an outdoor star, because born and bred a part of the great cattle county, he portrays the western characters as no other screen star can. In this newest success, his travels take him from his beloved Texas to the limitless pampas of South America, where after fleeing Texas after a shooting brawl in which he was forced to kill a crooked gambler, he becomes involved in a plot to defraud a wealthy Spanish senora of her great wealth. It is a fast-moving absorbing story, filled with bristling action, gun-play, and a touch of romance, with lovely Fay Wray as the object of "The Kid's affections. The accompanying bill is equally brilliant with droll Charlie Murray in the featured comedy spot, doing a Jimmy Walker as "His Honor the Mayor," and other featurettes.

Palace Theatre

There are two big reasons for coming to the Palace theatre today, tomorrow and for the next few days. One of them is the splendid show and the other the big popularity contest which the Palace is now conducting. Come and vote for your favorite girl. Admission to the Palace entitles you to cast five ballots for your girl. The girl who gets the most votes will be given a vacation at Atlantic City and a wardrobe of fine merchandise contributed by the leading jewelry, millinery, shoe, clothing, sports, leather goods and other stores in Norwich, in addition to a bank deposit of twenty-five dollars by the Thames Bank and Trust company.

The other big reason for attending the Palace is the tuneful new modern romance, "In Gay Madrid" which opens at the Palace tomorrow, and will be continued through Tuesday of next week. You have seen Ramon Novarro before; you have listened to his matchless voice, but never before has he been presented in such a role as that of the mad Spanish cavalier Ricardo, of gay, wicked old Madrid.

Lovely songs written by world-famous geniuses, thrilling music under the mellow Castilian moon, fierce love and fiercer passion unite in this magnificent production. Here is no ordinary romance, but a plot vibrant with life and beauty. Other members of the cast are Dorothy Jordan, Claude King, William V. Mong, and Lottice Howell, to say nothing of Euginia Besserer and Beryl Mercer, the latter of whom will be remembered as the Cockney mother of the war romances, "Three Live Ghosts," and "Seven Days Leave."

Today for the last times, the Palace presents those two human hyenas, Winnie Lightner and Joe E. Brown in "Hold Everything" the comedy that has kept Norwich laughing for a week, and which will be remembered as one of the bright spots of the season for many months to come. Georges Carpentier and Sally O'Neil have leading roles in this drama. Bert Roach is there too, and a host of others. By all means come and see this rollicking, jolly crew.

Following the church ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the Wauregan hotel with a reception following at the home of the bride's parents. Comedy, Maidens All Forlorn, tonight, M. E. church. Adults 25c, children 15c.—adv.

When the Intermediate and Junior C. E. societies of the Congregational church held a union meeting in the chapel this week, Mrs. Harriet Hyde Zumbro, of Norwich, gave the children an interesting talk about India. Two young girls were in Indian costumes. Ruth Avery was the leader. Monday afternoon, May 26, these two societies will hold their meeting instead of Tuesday, as is the custom. After the opening exercises, each society will hold a separate meeting. The Intermediate society at this time will submit reports for the past year, and the boys of the society will conduct the devotional period. Observance will also be made of the birthdays of members since November last. During that month the birthdays of members since the preceding June, 1929, were noted and at the meeting Monday a similar program will be carried out for those that have occurred since November up to June of this year.

The Intermediate society is to meet Saturday afternoon at the home of Miss Jessie E. Hyde of Washington street for a social time with games and basket lunch. If the day proves stormy, they will assemble in the Congregational chapel.

FROM NEW HAVEN TO FACE CHARGES HERE

Released Thursday from the New Haven county jail, Charles B. W., and Peggy Diehl were immediately rearrested and turned over to the local police. Officers Patrick Murphy and Clifford Crary brought the couple to this city early Thursday evening and they were booked and locked up at police headquarters on charges of issuing fraudulent checks on Economy company grocery stores. They have been wanted in this city since November, 1928, when it is alleged they passed at least two worthless checks on local merchants.

After working Norwich the couple left a trail of bad checks between this state and New Hampshire where they were arrested and sentenced. After serving time in New Hampshire the couple were taken to Bristol where they were in jail, from there to Meriden where they were also sentenced. The New London police, it is understood, want the couple after their cases have been disposed of in Norwich.

NORWICH SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA GIVES SPECIALLY FINE PROGRAMME

A large and appreciative audience at Slater Memorial hall Thursday evening enjoyed one of the finest symphonic concerts ever heard in Norwich. The occasion was the second and last concert of this season rendered by the Norwich Symphony orchestra which was received with great favor and an ovation was given to Dr. Frank Drago and his splendid musicians. Henry La Fontaine popular and distinguished Norwich baritone, was the assisting artist. Mr. La Fontaine lived up to the highest expectations of his many friends and admirers. Gifted with a smooth voice of fine timbre and a lovely quality, coupled with a personality which is most charming and equipped with a sound musical background, Mr. La Fontaine surely is winning his way to high rank among American concert baritones.

The Norwich Symphony has made rapid strides since its first appearance a year ago, and on Thursday night every musician played with an assurance and poise which is the result of long and careful training. The programme opened with a brilliant rendition of the "Hungarian Lustspiel," by Kelar Bela, which met with a warm response from the audience. The applause was continuous and Dr. Drago had the symphony play "Mexican Dance," by Droeger as an encore.

The next offering was the "Romance de Wolfram," from Tannhauser, popularly known as "The Evening Star," for baritone solo with orchestra. Mr. LaFontaine gave to it a beautiful rendition, receiving splendid co-operation from the orchestra. Particularly charming was the repetition of the principal theme by Thomas Rondomanski, the orchestra first cellist.

The orchestra followed with a splendid presentation of a group of short compositions consisting of "Menuet," from aHydn's Military Symphony; "Waltz," by Brahms, arranged for strings by Dr. Frank Drago and dedicated to Charles J. Dyer, president of the Norwich Symphony society; "Turkish March," by Beethoven, and the tuneful "Dolores Waltz," by Waldteufel.

Mr. La Fontaine followed with a group of three songs:: "Care Selve," by Hadel; "Morning Song," by Hollander, and "The Two Grenadiers," by Shumann. The singing was done with splendid taste and was well received by the enthusiastic audience. Miss Ruth Dreschler accompanied Mr. La Fontaine on the piano with co-operative understanding and very fine taste. As Mr. La Fontaine finished singing "The Two Grenadiers" the audience received the number with tremendous applause and after several calls Mr. La Fontaine sang an encore entitled "Trees," by Kilmer, accompanying himself on the piano. The number was rendered with such beauty and feeling that it again met with a storm of applause.

The orchestra then presented its major number of the evening, "Ballet Egyptien," by Luigini, a work of exotic beauty and great power. In this work the orchestra reached its peak and showed great promise. The strings displayed a rich and sonorous quality, the woodwinds attained a tone of beautiful color and the brasses were brilliant and full. Dr. Drago's conducting displayed unusual good taste, having complete control of his organization at all times and producing a faithful interpretation of the composer's wishes. The audience gave the symphony a flattering reception at the conclusion of the programme, and the orchestra responded with "La Paloma," played with much sentiment.

The personnel of the orchestra is as follows: First violins — concert master, Walter W. Lang, C. Theodore Sterry, Lillian Hirsch, Miriam Gordon, Marjorie Miller, Alwin Kampffe, Tyler Gilbert, Dominick Pedace, Reginald C. Laubin; second violins—principal, Arthur J. McNamara, William F. Malone, Anna Stockdale, Marion Eberbach, Angelo Perrone, George Bell; cellos, principal, Thomas Rondomanski, Albert Clayton, Edgar Tanguay, Flood Reed; basses, Frank Monroe, George Heimboldt; flute, Ernest Byron; oboe, Frank Royce; clarinets, Frank Narducci, Richard Sanders, George Jenks; horns, Leon Callanquin, Gottfried Wachter; trumpets, John M. Swahn, Frank Decker; trombones, Hayden Janks, Guy Webb; tympani, George Barlow; percussion, Richard Kyle; Miss Ruth Dreschler at the piano.

Two new divorce actions have been filed with the clerk of the superior court in this city. Mabel Crandall Kenyon of Stonington is suing Alvin S. Kenyon for a divorce, custody of a child and alimony. The charge is intolerable cruelty. The couple was married May 31, 1905.

Charging a statutory offense, Albert Rodger, alias Albert Rogers, of Norwich, asks a divorce from Minnie A. Rodgers, formerly of this city, now of unknown address. The couple was married March 19, 1906.

Appeared In Grange Play

Ellis Bentley, Jr., made his first stage appearance as a cornet player in "Sally of the Music Store", presented at Grange hall, Norwich Town, last Tuesday evening when he played several popular songs to an appreciative audience. Screens were loaned by the Gilbert Furniture Co.

Husband Had to Do Her Work

"When my baby was a month old, I took a heavy cold and after that I felt miserable. Could not lift anything. My husband had to help me with the housework. I was so weak I could not do a washing. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the Kittaning paper and I gave it a good trial. Before I had taken half a bottle, I found the difference. I do all my own work now and I have told others how much this medicine helped me."—Mrs. Alice Bassett, Cadogan, Pennsylvania.

V. F. W. POPPIES HELP BUILD UNIQUE CHILD VILLAGES

During the week of Memorial day, for the past years, posts of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S. have been distributing V. F. W. buddy poppies from coast to coast. The proceeds of this nation-wide sale each year have been used to maintain welfare activities in behalf of disabled and unfortunate ex-service men and their dependents.

Since 1926, a certain portion of the funds gained in this manner has been diverted toward maintenance of the V. F. W. national home, established at Eaton Rapids, Michigan, in 1925, where the children of deceased veterans are given the love and care accorded to more fortunate youngsters. Groups of these children live in separate cottage units under the watchful eyes of "house mothers." They are provided with every need, educated and equipped with vocations that will eventually permit them to earn their own livelihoods. Cottage units have been erected at the V. F. W. national home by Michigan, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New York departments of the V. F. W. Plans are already drawn for an Illinois unit, while the states of Virginia, Connecticut, California and others have created building funds with the same purpose in view.

GAVE MUSIC ADDRESS BEFORE LIONS' CLUB

Dr. Drago spoke of the pleasures enjoyed by lovers of music. He said there are two principal ways in which to acquire a love for music; first by self-expression, through learning to play some instrument, and second by listening to good music. The speaker told of the enthusiastic interest of Norwich men and women in the Norwich Symphony orchestra.

John L. Sellman, local Boy Scout executive, extended an invitation to the Lions to attend the jamboree to be held by the Boy Scouts Saturday night at the armory. Mr. Sellman said that those who had not yet attended a Scout jamboree will receive a real thrill through the numerous versatile accomplishments of the Norwich scouts. The meeting closed with the Lions roar in honor of the guests.

LEGION AUXILIARY TO START POPPY SALES

Saturday the members of the auxiliary to the American Legion will start their annual sale of poppies. This sale will continue up to and on Memorial day. Every poppy sold is one that is made by a disabled veteran and no poppy not so made is ever sold by the women of this organization. It is absolutely against the rules of this organization to place on sale the so-called commercial poppy and any unit found doing so loses its charter.

This year, in particular, owing to the unemployment situation and general depression more than ever is the call being made on the welfare fund and as this is the only means taken during the year to replenish this fund it is hoped that the response will be a generous one. The poppy has won a place in the hearts of the people all over the world, and through the annual sale by the American Legion and the American Legion auxiliary, the American public is helping those for whom the war is not yet over.

THREE U.S. MARINES HELD IN CONNECTION WITH MURDER

Men Slain Were Two Former Sailors—The Sailors Were Shot and Beaten to Death May 15 In the Home of Mrs. Evans Near Toms River, N. J.—Widow of One of the Men Killed Is Being Held As a Material Witness—Search Is Being Made For a Fourth Marine, Absent Without Leave Since Before the Killings.

TOMS RIVER, N. J., May 23—(AP)—Three young United States marines were under arrest today in connection with the killing of two former sailors. Held as a material witness was a woman more than 20 years their senior, the widow of one of the dead men.

On May 15 Robert Evans, just discharged from the fleet, and Albert Duffy, a former shipmate, were shot and beaten to death in the Evans home near here. Mrs. Evans, who is 42, first said the men had killed each other in a drunken brawl but later laid the blame on Lester Ungerdown, 21, who had been a frequent visitor at her home in her husband's absence.

Today Madison Chappel, 19, was arrested at the home of a relative near Syracuse, N. Y., where he had gone on a leave of absence. He was quoted as saying he had been present at the killings but that the slayings had been actually done by Ungerdown and Claude E. Carmichael, 21, whose name had not until then appeared in the case. Carmichael was immediately arrested at the air station.

After today's developments, Ocean county authorities said the case had been solved. They immediately set legal machinery in motion to extradite Chappel.

Search was also continued for Jiles Bagwell, a fourth marine absent without leave since before the killings. Officials were in Rhode Island today to questions sailors on the cruiser from which Evans was discharged the day before he was killed, as to a report that Bagwell went aboard the cruiser in New York, looking for Evans, just after he had started home with Duffy.

STORY OF CRIME AS TOLD BY ACCUSED MARINE

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 23—(AP)—Madison Chappel, 19, a U. S. marine, was held in the jail here tonight after implicating two fellow service men in the killing of Robert Evans, 32, and Albert Duffy, 46, at Lakehurst on May 15 in what Chappel said was a love plot.

Chappel, taken into custody at the home of a sister in Clay, 15 miles from here, swore to a statement naming Lester J. Underdown, 26, of Texas and Claude Edgar Carmichael, 21, of New York, as the actual slayers, according to John A. G. Grant, detective of Ocean County, N. J., one of the arresting officers.

Chappel according to Grant, told this story:

Underdown was infatuated with Mrs. Hattie Evans, 42 wife of one of the slai nmen. He saw her frequently during Evans' absence in the navy. Underdown asked Chappel and Carmichael to help him "settle Evans for good and all" and on May 13 got leave, went to New York and boarded the U. S. S. Overton to tell Evans his wife was ill. The next day Evans got a discharge after 16 years service and went home, picking up Duffy, an old friend, in Brooklyn.

Chappel, Underdown and Carmichael, carrying service rifles, crossed the Toms river from their station to the Evans home the night of May 15. Denied admittance at the Evans home, Underdown and Carmichael fired through a window, killing or fatally wounding both Evans and Duffy. Chappell had no part in the shooting. Then, while Chappel watched Mrs. Evans, Underdown and Carmichael went in to finish the job by clubbing both victims with their guns. They later threw the weapons into a ravine near the river.

Cautioning Mrs. Evans not to say a word about their appearance at the house, the three walked back across the river to their barracks.

Evans was dead when Mrs. Evans called the police to the home, telling them that "three marines rushed in and started shooting." Duffy, still alive when found, died in a hospital next day.

MEXICAN HOMAGE TO THE ASHES OF COLONEL SIDAR

MEXICO CITY, May 23—(AP)—One hundred thousand persons today received with homage the ashes of Colonel Pablo Sidar, Mexican ace killed near Costa Rica on May 11 while attempting a non-stop flight to Buenos Aires.

Colonel Sidar's memory was honored by the greatest demonstration of public mourning since the body of Captain Emilio Carranza was brought back from the United States two years ago.

At Valbuena flying field, a throng estimated at more than 50,000 stood silent and bare headed while the urn containing Sidar's ashes and another symbolic of those of Captain Carlos Rovirosa, Sidar's companion, whose body has not been found, were formally received by Secretary of War Amaro.

Twenty thousand persons lined the streets between Valbuena field and the national palace for the passage of the two urns in Sidar's famous old army airplane "Ejercito Mexicano" in a mourning procession. About 30,000 more were massed outside the palace and crowded on balconies and stairways.

Colonel Sidar received the military honors due to a general. He was posthumously raised from the rank of colonel to that of brigadier-general.

His body will be buried tomorrow in the "Rotunda of the Illustrious Dead" beside that of Captain Carranza.

Tomorrow has been declared a day of mourning.

FLOOD AT ITS WORST NEAR SHREVEPORT, LA.

SHREVEPORT, La., May 23—(AP)—As columns of water moved with relentless flow down Red river, levee officials today were inclined to discount damage predictions while the weather bureau stood by its original forecast that it would reach a serious stage.

While the Shreveport section still bore the brunt of flood waters mainly from bayous and overflow, the Red spilled over today on both sides in Red River parish and was moving into Natchitoches parish with telling effect. The overflow in Red River parish was estimated by B. W. Marston, plantation owner, as being ten miles long and 15 miles wide affecting property of some fifty families.

"MA" FERGUSON IS TO BE CANDIDATE FOR GOV. OF TEX.

AUSTIN, Tex., May 23.— (AP) — Miriam A. Ferguson, only woman to serve as chief executive of Texas, today was thrust into another campaign for the governorship when the state supreme court ruled that her husband, former Governor James E. Ferguson, was ineligible to hold office.

The supreme court held that Ferguson's impeachment and removal as governor in 1917 disqualified him from again serving in office in the state.

VAGRANCY ORDINANCE CREATED AT MIAMI, FLA.

MIAMI, Fla., May 23—(AP)—A vagrancy ordinance calculated to further Miami's drive against gangsters and hijackers became law here today despite protests of organized labor and the attorney for "Scarface" Al Capone. It will go into effect in 30 days.

The ordinance was adopted as a weapon in the city's campaign to drive Capone and other racketeers and gangsters from the community. The Chicago gang lord so far has successfully defied attempts of Miami officials to oust him from his island home in Miami Beach, despite three arrests, two for investigation and one for vagrancy.

The ordinance provides a maximum fine of $500 or a maximum jail term of 60 days or both for conviction of vagrancy, and includes within the definition of the term "any person or persons having visible means of support acquired by unlawful or illegal means or methods, or any person who is dangerous to the peace or safety of the city of Miami, or any person or persons known or reputed to be crooks, gangsters or hijackers" who come within the city limits.

CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY TO IMPORT AND SELL LIQUOR

NEW YORK, May 23—(AP)—Edward Tatham, socially prominent and a director of the noted English distillery, Justterini and Brooks, Ltd., was arrested today on an indictment charging him and his concern with conspiracy to import liquor into the United States and to solicit orders here.

A sealed indictment was returned in the federal building yesterday and a bench warrant was issued by a federal judge who fixed bail at $20,000 in advance of arraignment.

Tatham's idea, Assistant Federal Attorney Watts said, was to import the finest European liquors and whiskeys into New York, distributing them at high prices among wealthy people.

"There are indications," Watts declared, "that a financially strong American syndicate was backing the scheme."

FINAL FIGURES OF LITERARY DIGEST'S PROHIBITION POLL

NEW YORK, May 23.—In an overwhelming victory for the critics of the existing prohibition laws the close of the Literary Digest's prohibition poll was announced yesterday, with final figures to be published in today's issue of that magazine indicating that the country is 31 per cent for enforcement of the dry law, 29 per cent for modification and 40 per cent for repeal of the 18th amendment.

The unprecedented total of 4,806,464 votes was cast in the poll out of 20,000,000 ballots distributed. The complete returns show that 1,943,052 persons favored repeal of the 18th amendment, 1,399,314 preferred a modification of the Volstead law to permit light wines and beers and 1,464,098 wanted the continuance and strict enforcement of the prohibition amendment and the Volstead law.

Five states went into the "dipping wet" column with absolute majorities for repeal of the constitutional amendment, but they were offset by five "bone dry" states which gave majorities to strict enforcement. Including the five wet extremists, 42 states and the District of Columbia cast combined modification and repeal votes exceeding generally by substantial totals the enforcement vote.

FALL NON-COMMITTAL ON INCOME TAX SUIT

EL PASO, Texas, May 23.—(AP)—Saying he had no comment to make on the suit instituted by the United States board of tax appeals to collect $236,326 in deficiency income tax and penalties from him, Albert B. Fall told newspaper men today that "any information on the matter must come from my attorney, Frank J. Hogan, in Washington."

Investigators of the internal revenue department worked five years in an effort to learn the amount which Fall is alleged to have received from transactions in connection with oil leases.

In filing his income tax report, Fall is said to have failed to include the amounts of bonds received from Harry F. Sinclair, as well as the $100,000 which he has been vonvicted of accepting as a bribe from Edward Dohenyw.

The omissions are alleged to have been occurred in 1921, 1922, 1923 and neither did Fall, says The Post, make note of cash payments from Sinclair in addition to the Continental Trading company bonds which totalled $700,000.

Vote Favorable For M.E. Women Ministers

DALLAS, Tex., May 23.— (AP) — Southern Methodist women de[illegible] of having the right to preach[illegible] received an expression in the[illegible] from the general conference [illegible]eir church but they were no nearer [illegible]eir goal than formerly.

The quadrennial conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, voted 174 to 159 to grant equal rights of clergy to women. However, the bishops held that the proposal was a suggested change in the constitution and that as such, it would require a two-thirds vote in the general conference and a three-fourths vote of the local conferences for adoption.

The result of the vote apparently came as a surprise to those who opposed the movement and they did not make the contention that the change was constitutional instead of legislative until after the balloting.

Women who had drafted the equal rights memorial planned to carry on the fight. They hoped to obtain the two-thirds vote necessary to submit the proposed amendment at the next quadrennial convention.

This was the first time the matter had ever been submitted to a general conference.

Opponents of the proposal contended that women ministers had no place in Christ's plan.

By a vote of 293 to 10, the conference voted to submit a proposed constitutional amendment to establish a judicial council, a supreme court for southern Methodism. Proponents of the court plan said it was unwise for any one body to have both the supreme executive and judicial authority, as the college of bishops has. The council would consist of five clerical and four lay members.

The conference voted to end its sessions tomorrow.

What Is Advertising?

It is the opinion of Charles C. Younggreen, president of the Advertising Federation of America, that advertising must keep pace with the continuous changes of the times.

He not only talks from experience but from a broad inside knowledge of the situation. He gives some further enlightenment on what advertising is, saying:

"Advertising is the oxygen of business.

"It is the open door leading to the higher standards of living.

"It is the elasticity in the joints of the commercial body.

"It is education; given instead of acquired.

"It is the force which makes men first THINK—then ACT.

"That—and more—is what advertising IS.

Knowing what it is, the next step is to take advantage of it. Its value lies in its use. Keep up with the times by making regular use of the advertising columns of The Bulletin.

E-RAY IS INCREASING THE CURES OF CANCER

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 23. —(AP)— Cancer of the bone that is at first mistaken for "charleyhorse" and other minor ailments was described to the New York state industrial surgeons meeting here tonight.

Statistics to show that by catching these minor indications early bone cancer cures have been raised from four per cent up to 36 per cent in about 10 years were also presented. The figures, announced for the first time, summarize records of 1,724 bone tumor and bone disease cases noted at Johns Hopkins hospital in the past 40 years. They were given by Dr. Joseph Colt Bloodgood of Johns Hopkins, who said:

"This study demonstrates the importance of broadcasting through the daily press, radio, magazines, primary schools, all athletic departments and by lectures the great value of the x-ray in prevention of crippling, and in increasing the cures of cancer of the bone. It is very important for every one to know that following an injury, especially one that does not produce a fracture, a bone disease may develop which if neglected may lead to crippling or death.

ALLEGED STOCK SWINDLING SCHEME REACHES COURT

NEW YORK, May 23—(AP)—A scheme whereby stock allegedly was boosted by one man so that his confederate could sell it brought Ernest L. Tufts of Stamford, Conn., and Washington, D. C. to trial in federal court today for using the mails to defraud.

Tufts is accused of having worked with Don Huston, of Baltimore, in selling $40,000 worth of Atlantic Utilities corporation stock. Huston, who was not placed on trial because he had contracted tuberculosis, was said by Assistant Federal Attorney Tompkins to have offered high prices for the Atlantic Utilities stock to prospective investors. Then, it was alleged, Tufts would call to sell the stock.

Among those who testified they were mulcted by the pair were Mrs. Mary F. Stilwell, a widow of Peekskill, N. Y., and John Curtis, attache of the British legation. H. P. Conner, of Philadelphia, assistant treasurer of the Pennsylvania railroad, testifying in regard to Huston's alleged representations that the railroad would pay high prices for the stock, said the line never had been interested in Atlantic Utilities.

Tariff Bill Ready For Senate Action

A[illegible]ent Reached By Con[illegible]ees Will Be Submitted to [illegible]he Senate Monday.

WASHINGTON, May 23—(AP)—Sixteen and a half months from the time it began to take form, the republican tariff bill carrying the highest farm duties in history and scores of industrial rate advances was molded into final shape by the congressional conferees today and made ready for senate action early next week.

A complete agreement was reached by adoption of a compromise flexible clause broadening the existing powers of the tariff commission and sharply curtailing those of the president.

Under the new plan, which is understood to have the approval of President Hoover, the tariff commission would be empowered to "recommend" to the presidents increases or decreases in rate to the extent of 50 per cent and the president would be given 30 days within which to approve or disapprove the recommendation. In the latter event, it would be returned to the commission for re-study.

The agreement will be submitted to the senate on Monday, but will lay over a day before it is taken up on the floor. At least a week of debate is expected by republican leaders with final action in the house set for early June.

It is probable that the measure will have to be returned to conference again before final congressional action however, as points of order are being prepared contending the conferees exceeded the bounds of the senate and house rates on rayon, cherries, cheese, and watches and clocks.

These rates are embodied in the partial conference report already approved by the house and now lying on the senate table.

The agreement reached today will be embodied in a supplemental report and will cover only the six major points of controversy which the conferees were asked to settle after the house had gone on record regarding them.

It will provide for the new flexible clause, elimination of the debenture amendment, free silver, a duty of one dollar a thousand feet of softwood lumber, elimination of the senate amendment exempting from duty cement intended for state and municipal public works, and for a bi-partisan tariff commission of six members as at present.

HOOVER THREATENS EXTRA SESSION FOR NAVAL TREATY

WASHINGTON, May 23.— (AP) — Prompt disposition of the London naval limitations agreement was assured today when President Hoover gave notice he would call a special session of the senate if the pact was not acted upon before adjournment.

The special session suggestion appealed strongly to some senate leaders and it was believed likely tonight that the senate would take up the pact under that procedure.

A report of the measure to the senate by next week was predicted by Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee and Senator Watson, of Indiana, the republican leader, called a party conference for Monday when the senate will determine definitely its plans of disposing of the treaty and the rivers and harbors legislation.

Six more naval leaders assailed the London limitations agreement at the hearings of the foreign relations and naval committees today and those conducting the examination believed the hearings could be completed by next Wednesday.

Senator Johnson, republican, California, reiterated his plea that the treaty be deferred until next session "to give the American people and the senate full opportunity to understand it but he said he was ready to conclude the calling of experts probably next week.

"It would seem now we would get through with the hearings by the middle of the coming week. There is no evidence of an attempt to kill time."

CAUTIONS DRIVE AGAINST THE MALT AND HOP STORES

Prohibition Commissioner Doran Warns Dry Agents That the Government Must Be Able to Prove That They Are Intended For Use In Violating the Prohibition Law—Instructs Agents That All Paraphenalia Could Be Seized Wherever Found With Unlawful Liquor.

WASHINGTON, May 23—(AP)—With drives against malt and hop stores in progress in several sections of the country, Prohibition Commissioner Doran cautioned administrators and agents today that the recent supreme court decision under which such action was being taken did not permit seizure merely because the various articles were offered for sale.

In seizing kegs, bottles, labels and other paraphernalia, the commissioner warned, the government must be able to prove that they are intended for use in violating the prohibition law.

G. A. Youngquist, assistant attorney general in charge of prohibition prosecutions, who will have executive direction of the prohibition bureau when it is transferred to the department of justice, concurred in Doran's instructions.

"Mere presence of bottles, corks, crocks, caps, and capping machines," Doran said, "does not, in our opinion, prove a design to use them for the manufacture of liquor intended for use in violating the prohibition act. Sometimes association with other articles will prove this design."

Since the decision in the Danovitz case, prohibition officials in various cities, including New York and Chicago, have started drives against stores handling malt, hops, kegs, bottles and other such paraphernalia.

Doran said that the court in that case concluded that bottling, labelling, etc., were part of the process of manufacture and that as a consequence the property involved might be usable in the manufacture of liquor.

"Secondly," he said, "the court held that property usable in the manufacture of liquor when designed or intended by the possessor for such illegal use is forfeitable, even though it be intended that the actual use be by other parties."

The commissioner told the agents that all paraphernalia used in manufacture of liquor could be seized wherever found with unlawful liquor.

Scott McBride, general superintendent of the organization, that Secretary Mellon had "gone just as far on prohibition enforcement as his superiors wanted him to go."

The dry leader emphasized that he was referring to the Coolidge administration and added that it was "different" from the present one. He testified yesterday that the Hoover administration was "making good" on prohibition enforcement.

The testimony resulted when Chairman Caraway produced a letter written by McBride last January to J. G. Brown, of Port Huron, Mich. Brown had written that McBride was "very much mistaken regarding the sincerity of Hoover." He added:

"If he is not a hypocrite on this question, why does he not immediately fire Mellon who, with Cal's help has made such a farce of prohibition?"

Replying, McBride wrote:

"I am convinced you are wrong in your attitude. There was a time when I had something of the same feeling but on thorough investigation I have reached the conclusion that Mellon has gone just as far on prohibition enforcement as superiors wanted him to go and I do not believe he is now standing in the way of effective prohibition enforcement."

"That doesn't say how far he went, but so far as his superiors wanted him to go," Caraway commented. "That is the president?"

"That referred particularly to the previous administration," McBride replied.

"Was the previous administration different from the present," demanded Caraway.

"I think so," McBride said.

Responding to another question by Caraway, the witness said:

"There was a time when a good many people thought that Secretary Mellon was in co-operation with the wet interests of the country and that he was not going as far as he should have gone in prohibition enforcement."

200,000 IN RESISTANCE PARADE IN BOMBAY, INDIA

BOMBAY, May 23—(AP)—Today was more exciting in Bombay than any time since the opening of the civil resistance campaign, that with news of the imprisonment of Mrs. Sarojini Naidu coupled with a giant procession of Indians.

A procession of persons numbering approximately 200,000 was organized by the leaders of various Indian commercial bodies and started marching from the bullion exchange.

The paraders went through the main portion of the Indian quarters and proceeded to Victoria terminus, the junction point of the five principal streets in Bombay, and attempted to enter the fort area.

Here they encountered a solid wall of policemen ranked four feet deep from curb to curb. Thereupon the demonstrators sat down, singing nationalist songs, and for nearly four hours this study in passivity continued, the nationalists sitting calmly and the police standing stolidly.

Finally the authorities announced that the demonstrators could enter the fort area provided they agreed to abstain from violence. This suited the demonstrators and with a great roar and the shouting of revolutionary slogans the mob auged down Hornby road, which runs through the center of the fort, filling the street from curb to curb for half a mile.

Rear Admiral Byrd's was the first foot upon the gangplank when the Eleanor Bolling touched the pier. NORTHERN CHINESE REBELS WERE SEVERELY DEFEATED

SHANGHAI, May 23.—(AP)—Nationalist government forces have severely defeated the northern alliance rebels with heavy casualties, said government dispatches today, and are driving them in general retreat toward Kaifeng, Honan province. The nationalists took 20,000 prisoners.

Defeated in a series of engagements which began May 8 in northern Kiangsu and Honan provinces, General Yen Hsi-Shan, governor of Shansi province and head of the revolt against the central government, is said in government dispatches to be planning flight to a foreign country in anticipation of the collapse of the insurrection. The nationals, advancing northward on the railway beyond Hankow are reported thrusting the rebel armies before them on another front to converge on Cheng Chow.

Thus the nationalists are engaged in a pinching movement, westward in northern Honan and northward in that province, to catch the rebel armies at Cheng Chow or Kaifeng, nearby. A decisive battle is expected in this area. The nationalist forces in eastern Honan alone were estimated by a missionary who returned here to number 70,000, while the opposing rebel troops had 100,000 men.

ATTEMPT TO ASSASSINATE PRIME MINISTER OF MALTA

VALETTA, Malta, May 23.—(AP) — An unsuccessful attempt was made today to assassinate Lord Strickland of Sizergh, prime minister of Malta as he was entering the court of appeals to hear a case against the nationalist party.

Three shots were fired, but all missed. The assailant, who gave his name as Miller and his age as 38, is a support of the nationalist party and is understood to be a native Englishman. He was arrested for rioting in 1919 and was accused of having torn the British flag. He has only one arm.

The prime minister was attending the court as plaintiff in a case wherein the nationalists are attempting to invalidate all laws passed by the government.

He was accompanied by a police sergeant and as they entered the court a revolver shot was fired from a range of six feet. Lord Strickland appeared momentarily dazed but the police acted immediately and seized Miller, whose other two shots went into the air.

C. OF C. DIRECTORS SUGGEST 10 MILL TAX RATE FOR CITY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 23 — In a lengthy statement pointing to the necessity of a sufficient tax levy to conduct the city normally, a report of the directors of the chamber of commerce was made today that a 10-mill tax was absolutely needed to carry on the functions of the city government for this year.

The report is based on facts found at a joint meeting of the chamber directors and Mayor Walter R. King, Aldermen W. E. Webber, Robert Hanna and Herbert I. Sanderson, of the common council finance committee.

A 10-mill tax rate will not wipe out a deficit of $44,000 carried over from the past administration, but will provide, however, the necessary expenses for the ordinary operation of the city and give at least the protection of life, property and general welfare needed and expected by the citizens.

As a result of this conference the chamber directors will take proper steps to have a special city meeting called at which time the voters will be asked to rescind the vote for an eight mill tax taken at the last special city meeting, and levy a rate of 10 mills. According to the report of the chamber of commerce the drastic curtailments affected throughout the city's various departments recently were found to be clean of any political "horseplay" and merely an honest and determined effort to have the city live within its income and avoid further incurring of indebtedness. The statement admonishes the citizens against the practice of voting special appropriations without making proper provision to pay off the amounts incurred by including them in the tax rate the following year.

The advancement of another Willimantic youth in the world of commerce and industry, comes with an announcement that Clarence Redman of 448 Pleasant street has accepted a position with the Chase National bank of New York city. Mrs. Caroline A. Howlett of 7474 School street, Burnside, appeared before Judge Carl Foster in superior court at Hartford Thursday in an action against her brother, Leander Wright of this city, executor of the estate of their father, the late Clifton H. Wright of Ashford. On a claim that her services as housekeeper for her father were worth at least $100 a month, Mrs. Howlett seeks to recover damages of $2,500.

The woman testified that her father, who weighed 500 pounds and conducted a cattle and lumber business by telephone, requested her to live with him as his housekeeper, for which he promised to pay her well for her services, improve the old family homestead in Ashford and buy her a new automobile. She left her home in Hartford May 1, 1922 and remained with her father until his death, February 8, 1930.

She said that her day was at least 12 hours long and that she had charge of all the household duties, besides acting as a practical nurse for her father, who required aid in getting about due to his great weight and the weakness of his legs. She said that she had no time off and received no pay for her services. When she made a claim against the estate for $2,200, she said, her brother allowed her only $400.

Leander Wright, the defendant, who is an automobile dealer here, stated that during his sister's life with their father, there were two other housekeepers at different times and that she did not actually have charge of the house, that his father did all the buying for the place and that he kept a man to attend to his physical needs. He said that his sister had at first asked for only $1,000 and that he had given her $400 as a gift because she and her husband were hard-pressed for money. Judge Foster reserved decision in the case. Mrs. Howlett was represented by Attorney George Cutler while Attorney Samuel B. Harvey of this city represented Mr. Wright.

The condition of Henry L. Kenfield, who was badly scalded on a tender of the U. S. S. Saratoga on January 2, in San Diego harbor and is now a patient in the U. S. Naval hospital in that city, continues serious, according to word of his condition received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Kenfield of 26 Mansfield avenue. The letter, written by Captain D. N. Trips that would require United States forest service crews several days to complete, would be made in several hours and heavy fire loss thus avoided.

SPEEDING MOTORISTS TO RECEIVE COURT SUMMONS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, May 23—A friendly warning to eastern Connecticut motorists who happen to contemplate week end trips into Providence, or at least over the trunk line highway between Danielson and Providence, wherever Danielson and Providence, wherever bound, is to watch your step going through North Scituate. Keep the speed down to or under 25 miles per hour if you would avoid getting a ticket and making a court appearance. There is barracks of Rhode Island state troopers at North Scituate, the only community of any size between Danielson and Providence. Speeders tearing through that community evidently are responsible for the campaign now in force to slow up reckless driving. To the many drivers who have been accustomed to roll through there at 35 to 45 miles an hour, unmolested, the advice is gratuitously given not to do it any more, especially this week end. The Rhode Island troopers are not anxious to molest anyone, but they have their duties to discharge.

William Walsh and Valmer Auger, both of Plainfield, were in the Killingly town court this morning. Walsh to answer to a charge of operating a motor vehicle while he was under the influence of an intoxicant, Auger, who was riding with him, for having been intoxicated. They were arrested by State Officer George Martin. Both pleaded not guilty and were released on bail, Walsh's case being continued one week. Auger apparently changed his mind about his plea this afternoon, for he came and pleaded guilty and was fined $1 and costs.

Speculation continues as to where Danielson's new postoffice building will be located when, and if, this town gets it. It is a rather certain forecast that it will be close to the center of the borough's business district, and that being true the number of prospective sites narrowed down to a few. Some sites that have been suggested may not be available on account of the high figure at which they are held by the owners. Other good sites that are talked of and that likely could be purchased are just a bit too far out. All of this speculation comes about because the government's lease on the present postoffice quarters in the town hall building expires this coming summer. However good the prospects of Danielson getting a postoffice building in the next year or two, and this is hoped for, it certainly will not be available for use before the lease of the present quarters terminates, so the postoffice likely will be in the town hall building for some time to come.

Automobiles will leave the church at East Killingly at 2:30 Sunday afternoon to convey those who are to take part in the ceremony of decorating the graves of soldiers in outlying cemeteries, and it is hoped that many will go. The Memorial day exercises at East Killingly will be held next Friday morning at the church at 10 o'clock, and will be concluded in ample time for those attending to be in Danielson for the exercises of the early afternoon.

Members of Leo J. L'Homme post, American Legion, and members of the auxiliary, were hopeful this evening that the public will buy generously of the poppies that will be offered here on Saturday—Poppy day. The poppies have their special significance and are for a particularly worthy cause.

Judge W. Fenner Woodward of the town court is becoming air-minded. He is now numbered among those who have looked down upon Danielson from above, and with due good will and graciousness. Judge Woodward said this morning that he greatly enjoyed a flight of 11 minutes duration at a height of about 2,200 feet and a speed that at times reached 140 miles an hour.

BUYS DOZEN NATIVE EGGS, FOUR HAVE EXTRA YOLKS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, May 23—The amazing hen stories that have come out of this town from time to time may be explained in part, at least, by knowing something of the eggs from which they are hatched. This week Mrs. Harry W. Clarke of Hutchins street purchased a dozen native fresh eggs from a local grocer. Four of them eventually were found to have double yolks and one of them a triple yolk. Mr. Clarke agrees that, all of this considered, it isn't at all surprising that Killingly hens do some very extraordinary things and make records that get nation-wide attention.

On Saturday the body of Mrs. Ellen Jones will be brought here from Pawtucket for burial in Westfield cemetery. Mrs. Jones, for many years a resident of Danielson, was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Brown, both deceased these many years. She was 74 years of age. She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Maud Morrow, a sister, Mrs. Florence Bailey, a son, and three brothers, William S. Brown, owner of the Attawaugan hotel, Louis L. Brown and Henry T. Brown.

FUNERAL

This morning the funeral of Mrs. Stephanie Boulais, wife of Damase Boulais, was held from the home on School street, with services at St. James' church at 9 o'clock. Miss Margaret Slattery, noted friend of youth, comes here Sunday under the auspices of the Killingly Tri-Y club to make two addresses, both at the Westfield Congregational church. In the evening her address will be a feature of the union Memorial Sunday services, and a large attendance of members of patriotic organizations of the town are expected to be in attendance. The Three Passions will be Miss Slattery's talk in the evening.

Drought conditions are becoming serious again in this immediate territory, which has had much less rain, especially showers than many other parts of eastern Connecticut during the past three weeks. Conditions approximating those existing in midsummer now exist. The reserve supply of water is dwindling, and it is feared that crops will not do too well unless rain in copious amounts soon comes.

The shopping public is being courteously requested by the chamber of commerce to heed the new arrangement under which many of Danielson stores now close Saturday evenings at 9:30 o'clock. Saturday is a hard day for store folks, and, like others in many walks of life, they like to be released from their labors promptly on time. Belated shoppers prevent this.

Capt. Harold Greene, marshal of the Memorial day parade in Danielson, has appointed Lucien Lambert and Nelson Marrotte as his aides.

On Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the Westfield Congregational church the wedding of Miss Ruth Wilson Clarke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Clarke of Hutchins street, and Ralph W. Arnold are to be united in marriage by Rev. Harding W. Gaylord.

There will be representation from this section at East Hampton on June 3, when Connecticut Guernsey Breeders' association members hold their annual field day.

Miss Marian Pellett is en route with a party of friends to spend two months in California. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Pellett of North Main street.

PUTNAM

MRS. MARY H. BREEN, 98, OF POMFRET, IS DEAD

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 23.—Mrs. Mary H. Breen, one of the few nonagenarians of Windham county and the oldest resident of Pomfret, died last evening at 9:30 o'clock at her home there after a prolonged illness. She was in her 98th year. Her death was caused from heart trouble.

Mrs. Breen, despite her advanced years, was active until the last few months of her long life. She was known throughout the little village as "Grandma" Breen and because of her kindly disposition and sunny outlook on life, made a wide circle of friends among the young and old, who learned of her death with sincere regret.

Mrs. Breen was born in County Kilkenny, Ireland, on Dec. 9, 1832, the daughter of Edward and Mary Stapleton Hackett. Her early life was spent in the country of her birth. At the period in the 19th century when the Irish were immigrating to America, Mrs. Breen, then a young woman of 25, arrived in New York with her family. She was a member of one of the first Irish families to settle in the village of Pomfret. She was married to John Breen of Pomfret, a well-known resident, who died a few years ago.

Mrs. Breen was a communicant at the Church of the Holy Trinity in Pomfret and, until overcome by partial infirmity, which came to her in the late years of life, practiced her faith with zeal.

Mrs. Breen is survived by five daughters, Mrs. Nellie Byrnes of Pomfret; Misses Mary and Elizabeth Breen, who made their home with their mother; Mrs. Lucy Bowers and Miss Julia Breen, both of New York city; three grandchildren, Miss Helen Byrnes of New York, Mrs. Mae Johnson and James Byrnes of Pomfret. She is also survived by three great-grandchildren.

Miss Isabelle Byrne, a sister of Miss Katherine Byrne of this city, has resigned her position as superintendent of the Sloane hospital in New York city to accept the position as superintendent of the Roosevelt hospital there. A noteworthy fact concerning Miss Byrne's new appointment is that she is the first graduate nurse of the Roosevelt hospital training school ever to return to the institution as its active head, which in itself is considered a signal honor. The Roosevelt hospital is one of the best known of America's medical institutions and is perhaps the largest in New York city. Miss Byrne was superintendent of the Sloane General hospital for 12 years and previous to that was assistant superintendent of the hospital which she is soon to superintend. Before assuming her new duties, Miss Byrne will spend a brief visit with her sisters, Miss Katherine and Miss Elizabeth Byrne, of Seward street.

Mrs. D. B. Angelo of Walnut street will sail from New York city Saturday morning for a summer visit to her home in Sweden. Mrs. Angelo's visit to her native country will be her first in 22 years.

This city sweltered today as the mercury zoomed up into the torrid zone this afternoon in the face of a sizzling mid-summer sun. Before the afternoon was half over the sudden temperature change had sent scores of relief-seeking residents scurrying to soft drink stores where the sale of ice cream sodas and other refreshing liquids reached the season's high mark. The bathing resorts in the vicinity hereabouts reported that waterside population was increasing by leaps and bounds as the liquid in the thermometer tube continued its march upward.

In the country districts farmers are fearing a recurrence of last year's disastrous dry spell as signs of a long and much needed rain were not in evidence late this afternoon. Unless heavy rains are received before the end of the week, agriculturists fear that much harm will be caused growing crops. The soil, they say, is sunbaked and many hours of rain will be required to soften the hard, crusted surface.

Although the enumerators have not completed their work in connection with the taking of the 15th decennial census, it was made known today that Putnam's population climbed considerably during the month of April—there having been 27 certificates of birth filed with Town Clerk Henry N. Benoit during that month. According to the records, daughters are in the lead at the present time, as 18 of the 27 April babes were girls. The birth rate during the past month exceeded the records of any previous month this year.

It was said here two columns ago, that the buses of the Short Line system operating between Webster and this city had adopted a new return route to Webster—that of Main street, to Front, School and Mechanics streets—rather than following the old established route of the buses of the Connecticut company. Although the coach returns over a new route, incoming buses run along Providence and Main streets to the terminal in Union square. All passengers desiring to ride to northern points along the line will suffer no inconvenience by the revising of the return route, since a bulletin of the Short Line published this week advises that northbound patrons residing on Providence and lower Main street, shall board the incoming coach and ride over the new route at no added cost. It is understood that the officials of the company petitioned the public utilities commission for a revisal of their out-going route, in order that their coaches avoid, whenever possible, running over city-maintained streets. This is a plausible act on the part of the motor coach officials and no doubt they will be commended for their consideration by officials of the city government.

A four-stroke alarm this morning at 9:58 o'clock was for a fire at the Farley block on Providence street, which was started from sparks flying from a burning pile of rubbish in the rear of the building. The combination pumper and hose wagon company at the Central station in Union square responded to the alarm. Quick and efficient work of the firemen aided by a stream of water from the booster tank of the apparatus extinguished flames which were briskly burning across the roof. Chief R. E. Thurston, after an investigation, reported a small amount of property damage. This morning's alarm was the first this week.

Exterior decorators of the police department were busy this morning applying the first touches of vivid yellow shades of paint on the obscure, weather-faded and grease-smudged restriction lines of the parking areas in the downtown section. The painting of the parking lines is a semi-annual task of the members of the night force of the police department.

A blue spruce tree, a rare specimen of the spruce species, passed through this city mounted on a specially constructed transporting device, on its way to New York, where it will be replanted on a large estate there to beautify the surroundings. The tree was purchased from a land owner in North Chelmsford, Mass. It was fully grown. Expert tree surgeons had carefully packed its life-giving roots in burlap enclosures in order to ensure safe removal to its new position in New York. A blue spruce tree is in evidence at the beautiful country home (Gwen Careg Farm), in Abington, of Mrs. T. Morris Murray.

Prospect Hill is located in the Coastal Village of Noank—overlooking Groton Long Point—just 18 miles from Norwich and 7 miles from New London.

Prospect Hill is the only established all year residential section of its kind on the Connecticut Shore that is so advantageously located, with paved streets on all sides, with powerful motor buses passing one's door every hour and day in the year, with schools, churches, post office and markets only a few minutes away.

Nature has actually endowed this quaint community with every healthful and recreative advantage that one could possibly desire. Boating, bathing and fishing. Speed boats, sail boats, yachts, steamers everywhere.

New York and other Eastern Cities with their ever-increasing population are not only crowding people from their borders, but are forcing thousands to seek the seclusion of New England's water front.

Prospect Hill is just three hours from the Grand Central depot in New York and only five minutes off the Boston Post road, conveniently opening up this marvelous Natural resort section to the million of Metropolitan recreation seekers and Nature lovers. Each year the constant stream of visitors is steadily increasing.

You do not have to be a real estate expert to know that such water front real estate—already scarce—will soon be a thing of the past. Choice locations are being rapidly bought up—prices are steadily increasing—in the meantime Nature is making no more land.

I have never seen a more beautiful property than Prospect Hill and I know of no property investment that has greater money making possibilities than the cooperative two way unit offer that is being made by the developers of Prospect Hill.

Allow me to explain this two way unit investment plan, also the unusual method whereby the POSITIVE RETURN of every dollar invested is ABSOLUTELY GUARANTEED.

The two way units are $1,000, terms if desired. This plan allows each $1,000 unit to grow in value two ways, and should, without question, be worth no less than $5,000 in a few years. In the meantime your money is not only secured by warranty deed and an actual interest in Company holdings, but you are issured an Insurance Policy guaranteeing the return of your principal.

There are only 50 units under this plan, and as there is absolutely no risk, arrangements should be made for the purchase of one or more of these units, without delay.

NORWICH UNDER MAYOR ROBBINS

At various times throughout the administration of Mayor Robbins the people of Norwich have had occasion to appreciate the business-like manner in which city affairs have been handled. There has been strong evidence that the city was getting an excellent, economic and efficient city government. This has been noticeable because it has been different from what was previously obtained.

With the closing of the city's books on the 15th of the month it was disclosed that Norwich has met its obligations, carried out department work and come through the year with a cash balance of practically $45,000. That represents good business. That displays the difference between the conduct of city affairs on the basis of a private corporation and the indulgence in political extravagances. That means much to the thoughtful citizen, the business man and the taxpayer.

Under Mayor Robbins there has been compliance with that oft made, but seldom complied with, demand that the department activities be kept within appropriations. Not a deficit is to be found in any department at the end of the fiscal year and, in addition to that remarkable showing, the administration leaves in the city treasury a cash balance of $45,000 with which to meet part of the expenses for the ensuing year. If the city could have received the benefit of such a cash balance each year for the past 25 years what a relief there would have been to the taxpayers, or, on the other hand, what a hole could have been made in the indebtedness of the city.

Here is evidence of a conscientious determination to show that the affairs of the city can be properly administered and here is the evidence to show that it has been. How many times during the past 25 years has such a record of accomplishment been presented to the citizens of Norwich?

It hasn't been carried on with the blare of trumpets but there has been a steady, consistent hewing to the line, a real regard for what was ordered, insistence upon the elimination of waste, and capable administration. The showing made by the public works department in this particular has been most gratifying. It demonstrates the value of placing an engineer in charge of such work. In this department, under Commissioner Wightman, the results have been especially pleasing, both as to new construction and regular departmental service. It does no injustice to anyone to say that it far exceeds expectations.

With such a showing as has been made it is only a natural desire that it should be continued, and with Mayor Robbins a candidate for reelection next month it will be an ungrateful electorate if he isn't returned to office by a rousing majority, together with the rest of the ticket, upon whom dependence will be placed for continuing the same successful regime in the future that has been provided in the past.

DOG OWNERS

Opinions vary in regard to dogs. There are plenty who like dogs, treat them with consideration and find much pleasure and satisfaction in owning them. They like their company, appreciate their fine traits, value the protection they give and never begrudge the expense. Others like dogs for all they can get from them but they seem to think neighbors or someone else should provide most of their food.

It is an unusual year when the question isn't raised somewhere about mad dogs or steps aren't taken to curtail the freedom with which they are permitted to roam the streets. Such cases have to be decided upon their merit. There is the protection of humanity which cannot be overlooked. All dogs may not be dangerous, but when it comes to applying preventive measures it is a case of placing restrictions on all dogs, quite the same as restrictions are placed on all human beings when necessary regulations have to be established.

Just now the state board of health is demanding a quarantine on all dogs in certain parts of the state. The purpose is to prevent the spread of rabies, and if such a quarantine will do it there should be a willingness to comply for the necessary period. What is the result of the order?

Those who value their dogs and desire to protect the dogs as well as the public are complying. Those who own dogs but let their neighbors support them are turning the dogs loose, disclaiming ownership, probably refusing to pay their license fees and really putting them in a position to raise havoc and become a general nuisance, if not actually contributing to the danger of more mad dogs.

Such dogs running wild, hungry and without water, are a menace. They are fit subjects for the dog catcher and yet the real responsibility for such condition lies at the door of those dog owners who have turned them loose to become neighborhood pests.

There are some people who assume their full obligation toward dumb animals of any kind. Others do just the opposite and it is most unfortunate that those who let animals shift for themselves without proper care should be permitted to have them.

THE PROHIBITION POLL

After a number of weeks the poll of the country by the Literary Digest, in an effort to sound public sentiment relative to prohibition, has been completed with nearly 5,000,000 expressing their views. That makes it possible to get an expression from about 5 per cent of the people of the country.

From the final count it is disclosed that 30.4 per cent are for enforcement of the dry law, 29.1 per cent are for modification of the law to permit the sale of light wines and beer and 40.4 per cent are for the repeal of the amendment. This means that exactly 10 per cent more favor repeal than those favoring enforcement if we consider those classes alone. It likewise shows that those favoring enforcement exceed those for modification by 1.3 per cent but, inasmuch as modification and repeal are both against the enforcement of the law as it is, the sentiment of the participants in the polls shows the opponents of enforcement to be more than twice as numerous as those for enforcement.

The poll represents an expression of the people from all sections of the country. It is the most elaborate effort of this character on any question and the response that has been made indicates that there is plenty of interest. In getting this test of public opinion the number of out and out dry and wet states is five each, with one showing a plurality for modification.

This poll isn't going to bring about any direct change. What it may accomplish indirectly no one knows. There has long been a demand for a national referendum on the question that it might be known how the people stood. Till such a thing is provided, and there seems little prospect of it, the poll will come the nearest to satisfying that desire. Regardless of how one may feel concerning the dry-wet question, it will be impossible to disregard the story it tells.

WHEN BUILDINGS CRASH

New York has experienced the crashing of a building under construction. It is not the first time that a structure has crumbled and piled up in a confused mass of material, but in this instance the steel framework of a four-story building had been almost completed when some defect in the boom of a derrick set the girders and steel work turning and twisting to the ground.

Here is a situation where the steel work which was expected to reinforce and strengthen the building, a new structure, proved to be so weak that it could not withstand the falling boom of the derrick which was used in raising the respective pieces into place. Such being the case, one may well wonder how effective it would have been had the accident been avoided and the brick and woodwork been completed.

The wonder is that more lives were not lost and that so few were injured, but the opportunity exists for digging into the facts of the case and ascertaining whether the steel work was proper, whether it had been erected in the right way, whether compliance had been made with building requirements and whether dependence was being placed upon the brick work to keep the steel work up.

There may be less surprise when old structures collapse but when a new one which has not gotten beyond the steel work stage crumples up and drops there seems to be something radically wrong, even though the boom of a derrick should have given way. Whether the building inspector has been diligently pursuing his duties should be determined by the inquiry which is certain to follow.

FIGHTING TYPHOID

Fighting disease seems to be an endless contest, and yet it is evident from the reports that are made that good progress is being made in many directions. The progress doesn't mean that the fight can be abandoned. It must go on ceaselessly.

According to the American Medical association's annual report, there was a typhoid death rate in 1910 in 74 cities of this country having an aggregate population of 22,286,000 of 20.58 per 100,000 inhabitants. After 20 years with those cities showing a population of 33,954,261 there was a typhoid death rate of 1.56 last year. That means that while there were 531 deaths in those cities from typhoid last year there would have been 6,976 had there been no decrease in the death rate from 1910.

That tells graphically the great benefit that has been obtained through the fight that has been waged for the prevention of typhoid, for in fighting that disease it has been necessary to work for better sanitation, to clear up the dangerous conditions which previously existed and remove the disease-breeding situations through cleaner milk and water supplies and the improvement of sewage conditions.

Typhoid hasn't been eliminated. That it has been decreased, both as to the number of deaths and the cases of illness, means much and demonstrates that the successful fight deserves all possible support. Certainly there can be no withholding of credit for the good work accomplished.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Sunday is to be Rural Life Sunday and there will be the usual big crowd seeking it, weather being propitious.

The man on the corner says: It won't be long now before we have a chance to see the crew that will practice with Yale.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Probably the two greatest boons that a kindly Providence has conferred upon this or any other civilized country are: First, the blessing of free government, and secondly, escape from the curse and burden of the slave system. These are the two greatest sources of power in the United States. This fact is frequently asserted and is nowhere denied. But within recent years another boon has come to us that is nearly—if not quite—parallel to the other two, and that is "the conquest of epidemic and infectious forms of disease," by virtue of recent progress in medical science. Take, for instance, the Asiatic cholera and yellow fever. Not long since the dread of these terrible diseases was nearly as bad as the diseases themselves. But now, in the providence of God, not only has the dread of these terrible ills gone, but the diseases themselves have been forever abolished.

The above reflection leads us to the larger fact that diseases generally have been greatly reduced as science has advanced. It is hardly too much to say that the states bordering the Gulf of Mexico have virtually been put upon the map by the extinction of the yellow fever. What northerner years ago would have imperilled his own life and that of his family by taking up his residence near Miami as long as the Everglades were reeking with malarial poison? Through the mercy of God science took hold of this as well as the yellow fever menace and has virtually banished it from the sunny south. And it is not too much to say that life is as safe in Florida and Alabama as it is in Massachusetts and Connecticut. What is true of the above applies equally well to typhoid fever, once to be dreaded everywhere.

There are so many things today that are scheduled in our category of blessings that it is clearly impossible to enumerate them all. Not only was it once dangerous for those acclimated to a northern latitude to go to sections where the yellow fever and cholera were indigenous, but it was quite difficult to get there. The railroad that now runs along the Atlantic seaboard has not been built many years, and for fewer years still has the automobile been built. I am thinking how marvellous is the constructive skill of the United States today. As a single illustration: What a great convenience for people living in New England to travel west and south by means of a new bridge built jointly by the states of New York and Vermont across Lake Champlain! It makes the Adirondacks, Niagara Falls and other points of historical interest quite accessible.

Surely the greatest heart of New England is going out to Nashua, N. H., in true fraternal fashion, and there is every reason why it should. We know not how soon some great calamity may come to our city. This terrible event still emphasizes the fact that fire holds the first place as a destroyer. Rarely, if ever, has the total amount of loss here in New England been so great in four months as since January began. It is all the more provoking because the majorities of these fires were evidently directly due to carelessness. We are thankful that the loss has been confined to property rather than to precious human lives. But everything possible should be done even to save valuable property.

With all the fits and spasms that seem to bedevil or much advertised New England weather, it must be admitted that along many lines it is marked by eternal regularity. While the wind that blows upon us makes us regret that we let out the furnace fire when we did, still as we look around us from the vantage ground of the summer house (sometimes with overcoat on) we cannot fail to reveal in the beauty and fragrance of the apple blossoms. Were we stone blind the richly-scented air would remind us that May was here, as it always has been here annually ever since "the morning stars sang together." The tulips and the daffodils, as well as the apple and the cherry blossoms will continue to beautify the earth when you and I will only be known by a few lines of "Who is Who."

The usual and generally sunny weather in May is wisely selected by religious and fraternal organizations for their annual meetings. The reasons for thus getting together has a larger significance that is generally supposed. Of course, it is well to hear reports of the general work that is being done by the different committees. It is well to know what our churches are going along benevolent lines. What interest has been shown by such important agencies as social service, religious education, evangelism, pastoral service, and the great missionary work of our churches in both the homes and foreign fields. It is well to hear experts along these lines tell us where improvements can be made and impress upon us the duty of meeting financially the extending work of the Kingdom of God. But one of the great features of such a gathering is the fellowship we have in coming into contact with one another.

One is often inclined to ask if anything really worth while is accomplished by cartoons. In nearly every prominent periodical today the oddities of action and personal appearance of our prominent men and women are so exaggerated, and oftentimes so effectively, as to set the whole nation laughing from one end of the country to the other. President Taft laughed with his fellows, and when the cartoonists found it out they gave it up in disgust. But some of the high steppers, like Senator Borah is so indignant that the tormentors lay it on all the harder. It is doubtless true that no great cause can receive a greater setback than to have a nation laughing at it by means of a clever cartoon. For the victim to show anger only urges the cartoonist to make him squirm all the more.

Stories That Recall Others

"Four" on the Train

A little chap who had gone a long distance to visit relatives was asked: "How old are you?"

"I'm five, but when I'm on the train an' don't want to pay, I'm four," was the ready response.

Scored As An Error

An outfielder in a local sandlot game saw a high fly coming his way and he set out at top speed. Just as he came up to the descending ball his toe caught in a tuft of grass and he fell forward on his hands and knees. The ball landed squarely on the top of his head and bounded nearly 20 feet straight up. Without loss of time the player was up and looking wildly about for the ball. There it was, coming down a second time and he made another lunge to catch it, but too late, for he could barely get his finger tips on the ball and it fell safely to the ground.

It was an error said the scorekeeper, but the player insisted that a sore spot on his head was penalty enough on that play.

LIGHTNING'S PRANKS AT GALES FERRY RECALL THOSE IT ONCE PLAYED HERE

The other day the Gales Ferry correspondent of The Bulletin described how a lightning bolt played the part of uninvited guest at Minor Moxley's table, breaking a vinegar cruet and peppersauce bottle, scattering the glass and contents about, tearing the oil-cloth cover and strewing salt from a wooden dish into Mr. Moxley's face but doing him no injury, though for a while the experience left him dazed.

This episode takes the old-time residents of Norwich back to the 1880's, when lightening played a number of famous pranks in this city. Some of the strangest of these incidents occurred in the great electrical storm of 1881, which is thus described in The Bulletin of June 15 and June 21:

Hurled Sliver Through Wall.

The dismal clouds that overhung the city yesterday grew more dense and threatening in the northwest between two and three o'clock p. m. indicating the approach of a severe shower. The thunder grumbled low in the distance for some time before a flash of lightning was seen; but the first blaze of lurid light from the sky was followed by such an instantaneous and startling report that people in all parts of the city remarked intuitively, "That struck somewhere;" but few were aware of the destruction that one thunderbolt carried to different localities.

The lightning struck the residence of Nelson Gallup, No. 69 Laurel Hill avenue, entering it on the northwesterly side, razing the chimney, shattering a dormer window, breaking the heavy moulding and demolishing a second story window, tearing off the casing and adjacent plastering, breaking out every pane of glass and literally filling the room occupied by Mrs. George Priestly as a kitchen with debris.

Mrs. Priestly and her daughter, Nellie, aged about 17, were at work in the pantry when the electric fluid entered the apartment. It carried a sliver some three feet in length from the casing of the kitchen window, across the room with such force that it passed through two thicknesses of towelling the plastering and lathing and remained transfixed in the pantry about two feet to the left of Mrs. Priestly, who stood at a table.

The lightning crossed the sink at which Miss Nellie Priestly was drawing water, and both the mother and daughter were prostrated. They were taken up in an insensible condition but were soon restored to consciousness. Both Mrs. Priestly and her daughter complained of deafness last evening.

In the upper rooms of the house the electric fluid had full play. A bed was moved out into the middle of the room, a commode was moved to the center of the room, the casing was splintered along the door of a third chamber, and large holes were discovered in the northwest and northeast corners of the mansard roof. The lightning prostrated Miss Hattie Gallup on the first floor but did no damage to the rooms. The damage done to the dwelling is estimated at between $200 and $300.

Vaporized Mr. Case's Copper Wire.

At the residence of Charles E. Case, No. 55 Laurel Hill avenue, the lightning entered on the wires of his telephone, charring the paper of the hall and vaporizing 27 feet of copper wire connected with the transmitter. This fact enables one to estimate the heat of the electric fluid, as 1,994 degrees Fahrenheit are required to obtain such a result. To those who suffer at 110 in the shade, it is suggestive that wrought iron ulsters would be no protection against the unknown heat of regions reputed to be much warmer. A good ground wire saved Mr. Case's residence from being badly damaged.

Wrecked Laurel Hill's Water System.

Almost every day reveals some new extent of the destructiveness of last Tuesday's thunderbolt. During the past few days the Hon. Henry Bill has had a gang of men examining the pipes by which about 50 families on Laurel Hill are supplied with water from the Bill reservoir, and they have found the pipes shattered to such an extent that the whole system will have to be abandoned. The pipes are of the cement and iron description and are cracked in every direction.

Mr. Bill has preserved a piece of the pipe where the lightning first entered. It is perforated by a round hole about the size of one's finger, which looks as if it had been made by a good-sized rifle-ball.

It is estimated that it would cost about $2,000 to repair the damage, and it has been determined to extend the city mains to that section instead of attempting to make the repairs. The plant originally cost $10,000.

The reservoir furnished the purest spring water, and its abandonment will be regretted by those accustomed to draw their supplies from that source. Mr. Bill has not determined what disposition to make of the reservoir.

Struck Twice in Same Place.

In those days the telephone offered an easy target for lightning owing to the fact that the technique of insulating the wires had not then been worked out to the degree of perfection later attained. Nowadays, of course, protective devices render the apparatus wholly unaffected by any electrical disturbance of natural origin. In 1883 Mr. Case had another unpleasant experience with a thunderbolt, which is thus described in the July 14 Bulletin of that year:

Drove Tacks Into Door.

During the heavy thunder shower in the small hours of Friday morning, the lightning struck the telephone wire leading to the house of Charles E. Case at the lower end of Laurel Hill avenue and followed it into the house, evaporating 50 feet of copper wire, burning out the telephone and exploding with the noise of a 24 pound field piece in the entryway, shaking the house to its foundations and thoroughly waking up all the inmates.

The lightning burned the carpet for quite a distance and drew the tacks out of the floor and drove them against the front door with such force that those which struck point inward were well driven into the wood. This is the second time the lightning has entered Mr. Case's house in this way, doing slight damage.

A tree was struck by lightning near the corner of East Broad street and Boswell avenue, and Policeman Robert J. Smiley was knocked down by the shock.

A tree was also struck near Eleventh street, Greeneville.

Splintered Well-Sweep at Montville.

At the Fort hill farm at Montville, owned by Theodore Raymond, the lightning struck the well-sweep and passed down the well rope to the bucket near the wellspout, at which point heat enough was developed to melt the iron nails in the woodwork. There were no traces of fire on the chestnut well-sweep, which was broken into many pieces, several of the splinters being thrown to the roof of the house 72 feet away, and the yard about the well being literally strewn with them. The damage done was slight.

Ripped Shingles Off Church Roof

A Westerly correspondent says: The thunder storm which swept over this section about 10 o'clock, Tuesday morning, was one of the most terrific ever known here. The thunder peals were loud and sharp and the lightning was exceedingly vivid. Buildings to the number of half a dozen were struck in this vicinity, though in only one case was much damage done.

The chancel of Christ church was struck on the west side of the roof, but only a few shingles were removed. As Mrs. August Ballert was engaged in cleaning the woodwork of the church at the time it was struck, the possibilities of the case were not pleasant to contemplate

The barn of Daniel Brown, a farmer, living on the road between this place and Stonington borough, was struck and burned, together with the contents, several tons of hay, and other property. At Watch Hill the life saving station was struck, but not seriously damaged. At the corner of Prospect and Palmer streets, (over the river) the lightning passed down the chimney of a tenement house and ripped up a portion of the roof, but injured no one, although there were about 20 persons in the house at the time.

Fireball Douses Itself

Numerous instances of frights and personal shocks from the lightning are reported in the village. It is said that an employee at the machine shop of C. B. Cottrell & company, who was at work on a bar of steel, was knocked down and partially overcome by the mysterious element. A ball of fire is said to have popped in at the window of J. L. Moss' residence, on Broad street, and landed in a basin of water, where it spent itself, greatly to the alarm of the feminine portion of the household.

In the last twenty years great advances have been made in the knowledge of artificial feeding of infants, but in spite of this progress, we have no food to compare with mother's milk. The best of the artificial foods are but poor substitutes. The two main advantages of breast milk are: First, its almost perfect digestibility for all sorts of babies and under all sorts of conditions; second, its protection against every kind of infectious disease except tuberculosis. Tuberculosis is high fatal for young infants and no mother with open tuberculosis should nurse her baby. If, however, she has smallpox, scarlet-fever, diphtheria, tonsillitis or any other infectious disease, she may either express her milk and feed it to her baby or have it nurse directly from the breast, the mother taking the precaution of wearing a mask over the nose and mouth (this face mask should also be worn when the mother has a common "cold"). The breast milk contains protective bodies against these diseases and the baby either will not contract the disease or will have it in a very mild form.

Of late years our main problem has not been so much the education of people as to the value of breast milk, but more in showing mothers how breast feeding can be continued under adverse conditions. There are various measures by which the supply can be maintained. The baby should be nursed regularly every four hours if possible, or if the amount is not sufficient, every three hours. The breast feeding should never be omitted and a bottle feeding substituted because this invariably decreases the milk supply. If artificial feeding must be resorted to it should be complementary, that is, given after each nursing and the amount the smallest that will make the baby gain. The mother's diet should consist of plenty of any good nutritious food within range of her digestion. The old idea, widely held, that she should drink large quantities of fluids should not be carried to such an extent as to interfere with her appetite for more substantial foods. Accompanying these measures, the mother or attendent must thoroughly empty the breasts after each nursing. Formerly this was done by means of a breast pump, but experience has shown that after the knack is acquired, manual expression works much better. To do this the breast is grasped between the thumb and forefinger, just back of the areola or colored portion, the fingers being pressed gently but firmly together squeezing a portion of the breast between them and then with a sudden pincers motion, using considerable force, the breast is squeezed very tightly and then suddenly released. The fingers do not change their position on the skin during the process. If done properly the milk comes out in streams, not in drops. If the breasts are thoroughly emptied after each nursing the supply will increase very rapidly, so much so that sometimes in a few weeks there is an over-abundance.

When there are anatomical defects in the infant, such as hare lip or cleft palate, or in the mother's nipples or breasts, which prevent proper nursing, the above method will save the breast milk for the baby. The writer had under his care a baby whose mother was never able to put it to the breast but for nine months expressed enough milk to feed it without supplementing, and the results were well worth the trouble.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

Enthusiasm

Put your whole soul into what you do, think nothing impossible and let enthusiasm be the power to spur to your best, no time poem was ever written without it. Poets, sculptors, artists, preachers, orators, know well its worth. Enthusiasm divides the world among its children. The triumphs are innumerable. Enthusiasm gives a zest and relish to life, making its merest trifles great. It will override physical disability and work out wonders with the most fragile machinery. The Greek word for enthusiasm means God in us which is a beautiful way of expressing it. No effort is too great for the one possessing this trait. The true enthusiast beholds Christ as His saviour friend and guide. Like His master, He never loses sight of His heavenly home. He finds the world lovely. Enthusiasm is contagious. How easily and quickly an enthusiast person. It has given men confidence, without it they would have lost courage. O, that each one of us might be filled with enthusiasm to make the very best of our lives knowing that the master appreciates our humblest effort. The triumphs of enthusiasm are innumerable. They are written in the blood of martyrs, in the liberty of nations, in the freedom of slaves, in the establishment of churches, in the growth of reforms, in the miracles of genius. Never was a great idea conceived, a great work begun, a noble thought born, a splendid discovery made, but enthusiasm furnished the light by which it was perceived.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, May 23—It fell out that the senate's double headed inquiry into the London naval pact got started with the two most eminent seadogs on the federal payrolls as simultaneous witnesses.

Seadog Secretary Adams was first at bat before the naval committee at the very time Seadog Admiral Pratt was getting in his highly effective lick before the Foreign Relations committee.

So the civilian seadog was before the more or less professional committee on naval matters while the lifelong man o'warsman was before the civilian committee.

Listening to Secretary Adams, whose seadogging is of the yachting instead of the battleship sort, the Bystander recalled reports that it was pressure of the so-called "big navy" group which caused him to be sent to London as a member of the American delegation.

Adams Calm

Chairman Hale of the naval committee generally is rated as about the top hand in that group since he fathered the cruiser authorization bill in the 70th congress. But if the quiet mannered little secretary with all the revolutionary blue blood flowing in his veins was expected to disclose himself as other than a staunch supporter of the London pact, that expectation was not fulfilled.

Secretary Adams has the reputation of being a man of few words. He met the rather critical barrage of questions showered on him by Hale without any indication that his calm was in the least ruffled.

Over in the Foreign Relations committee meanwhile, Seadog Pratt was furnishing copy for the press lads at a great rate. He was coining phrases as fast as the busy pencils could set 'em down. He brought the 6-inch vs. 8-inch gun controversy down to understandable terms, snappy and sometimes slangy terms. And speaking with the authority of the man who commands the whole massed naval strength of the nation, his opinions were not to be brushed aside.

Study In Contrast

There could not be a wider contrast in appearance and manner than between the secretary and the ranking sea officer. Mr. Adams is mild and reserved before a congressional committee, but he looks any questioner right straight in the eye. Pratt, a well built man of middle height with closely clipped gray moustache and hair, is the very ideal of a well turned out and highly successful American business man. And he has a gift for picturesque speech at times.

Back in 1921-22 Pratt, then a captain, and Admiral Coontz, now retired, but then chief of naval operations, walked large on the ashington naval parley. Admiral Coontz was back to fill the role of on-looker, presumably, at the new treaty developments. But he elected to hear Secretary Adams rather than Pratt. Which probably indicates where he expected the fire works to pop, if any.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Two Happy Little Folks

No loss is there without some gain;
Nor joy so great 'tis free of pain.
—Nanny Meadow Mouse.

Nanny Meadow Mouse was up in a tree. She didn't get there herself. Farmer Brown's Boy had put her there, although Farmer Brown's Boy didn't know it. Farmer Brown's Boy had put an old tin can up in the tree for a birdhouse and unknown to him Nanny was in that tin can. When Nanny finally discovered where she really was, she was for leaving at once. She waited only long enough to make sure that Reddy Fox was not at hand and no other enemy was in sight. Then she crept out onto a little branch that was just in front of the little round door and started down to the ground. There was an old stick leaning against the tree and slanting down. It was an easy matter for Nanny, for she had climbed before.

"There!" she said, when at last she was on the ground. "I guess I'm about through with that thing. Now what shall I do and where shall I go?"

She hesitated a bit, for she had never been over here before and it was all new to her. She made her way to the edge of the bushes and tried to make up her mind whether to stay in the bushes or to go out on the Green Meadows. She was still undecided when she heard a little rustling back of her. Nanny's heart leaped right up in her throat. Who could that be? It might be Shadow the Weasel. It might be a strange Mouse. It might be—well, there were a lot of people it might be. Nanny turned her head and looked back. Then she gave a little squeal of joy. There was Danny Meadow Mouse!

Danny was staring as if he had never seen her before. You see, they had been separated so long that Danny had been sure that something dreadful had happened to Nanny, and Nanny had been sure that something dreadful had happened to Danny. So it was hard for either to believe that they were once more together. It was Nanny who moved first. After that first little squeal she turned and rushed straight to Danny. They touched noses and right then and there were two as happy little people as could be found on all the Green Meadows.

"Where have you been?" demanded Nanny.

"Where have you been?" demanded Danny.

Then each told of the adventures they had had. Danny had been wandering around all this time, not knowing where to go and not caring much where he was, so long as he could not find Nanny. It was just by chance that he had come that way just then. He had been not very far from there when Farmer Brown's Boy had come along.

"Did you see Reddy Fox, too?" asked Nanny.

"No," replied Danny. "Has Reddy been this way?"

"I should say so!" exclaimed Nanny. "He ran when he heard Farmer Brown's Boy coming."

"Then he must have run the other way and that is why I did not see him," said Danny. "Well, my dear, what shall we do now? Where shall we go? I suppose we may as well look for the place to make that new home we started out to make. Shall we look around here in the bushes or shall we go out on the Green Meadows?"

"That is the very thing I was trying to decide when you came along," replied Nanny.

Just then a Merry Little Breeze wandered by and tickled their noses with an odor that made little cold shivers run up and down their backbones. That Merry Little Breeze brought the smell of Reddy Fox, and they knew by the strength of that smell that Reddy was very near. He must have seen Farmer Brown's Boy leave and have come back to see if Nanny had left that old can.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Memorial Day Flowers

Mr. Editor: A year ago in taking flowers to the Buckingham Memorial for our so-called Decoration day, I found the supply pitifully meager for the need, in spite of the contributions of the school children and others.

The Woman's Relief corps and Daughters of Veterans must have had difficulty in arranging a tribute to be put on the grave of every soldier by the Sons of Veterans and other veteran organizations.

We do not need reminding that Memorial day is set apart to honor the memory of these soldiers, to beautify their graves.

The wish is universal to put flowers where lie those dear to us. However, there are many other anniversary days in which these graves can be made beautiful.

Primarily, I am sure, we all wish to add to the memorial flowers for the dead veterans. Many were soldiers in the Civil war; some graves bring back memories of the Spanish war; in the most recent graves lie the victims of the Great war.

Many people now have no gardens from which to contribute. May I suggest that a small purchase made from a florist will add materially to the flowers to be arranged by the ladies at Buckingham Memorial on the afternoon and evening of May 29th. An early application to some near-by florist for this purpose could be more easily filled.

In an added wealth of flowers to be distributed in our peaceful cemeteries, the veteran organizations will realize that our city does not forget.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The J. O. Smith Mfg. Co. Middletown

In 1828 John Smith came to America from England, starting a small japanning shop in New York city, and had the distinction of being the first practical japanner in the United States.

Several years later his son, James O. Smith, also born in England, became associated in the business. During 1845, James O. Smith branched out for himself and came to Middletown, purchasing a parcel of land including a water right. On this site was a wooden building used as a cider brandy distillery and it was in this building that a start was made in the manufacture of cash, bond, and similar boxes for the stationery trade. These goods were then called trunks.

Later, when sons of James O. Smith came into the business, the name was changed to James O. Smith & Sons. During the Civil war the old style powder cannisters were manufactured for the Hazard Powder company.

From time to time other frame buildings were added to the original cider brandy distillery among which was a small building formally used as a church, and moved from its original site. In 1874 a fire destroyed all but the former church and distillery, evidently showing no preference. The plant was rebuilt from brick and in 1878 the business was incorporated as The J. O. Smith Mfg. company.

The manufacture of metal covers for typewriters and the enameling of wooden handles were added to the original lines.

Proper Diet

An anchovy curled
On a tuffet of cheese
With a cracker beneath,
May be nibbled with ease.

A mince pie, in season,
With Roquefort or Brie,
Will foster sweet dreams,
Indubitably.

Bananas are good,
Or a fluffy souffle;
Or toast and a tipple,
Oolong or cafe.

A salad can never
Be thought of amiss,
When devising a nocturnal
Session with bliss.

Take white grapes and almonds—
How much? Oh, enough!
And slather them richly
With marshmallow puff.

Cucumber sandwiches,
Chocolate cake—
If you choose either viand,
You'll make no mistake.

Hot coffee's delicious;
And that five-part drink
Will make the world rosy,
Or a very deep pink.

(But remember: the grenadine's
Only an aid;
Your guests will not relish
Mere pink lemonade.)

Fried eggs are nourishing;
Bacon and ham;
And what could be better than Biscuits and jam?

Oh, many's the condiment
Midnight will find
At rest in the tummy
Of hungry mankind.

COUNCIL RECOMMENDS 13 3-5 MILL TAX FOR REGULAR CITY EXPENSES

The city ended its fiscal year, May 15th, with a cash balance of $44,979.64, as shown in the list of estimated expenses and receipts for the coming year, presented Friday evening by the finance committee at an adjourned meeting of the court of common council. The list of regular estimates call for a city tax of 13 3-5 mills, the tax recommended a year ago being 12 3-5 mills, and the tax laid at the annual city meeting last June being 12 mills flat.

There are in addition to the regular estimates, 13 "extras" in the list, calling for appropriations totaling $272,585. The largest item in the list of "extras" is $143,000 for court house bonds payable April 2, 1931, and the next largest item is $65,000, for Fairview reservoir, payable April 2, 1931. There are also in the list of "extras" $30,000 to provide for the improvement of Asylum street from Starr street to Newton street, and $14,500 for the payment of the Male Richmond note of November 8, 1921.

Other items in the "extras" are appropriations for the Bath street curb cut-off, Church street improvement, Broad street cut-off, Yantic street filling, fire department salaries for vacations, Avery street sewer, Elizabeth street sewer, Palmer street catch basin and $1,000 to provide for the expense of Christmas season lighting of the city's streets next December. If the entire list of regular estimates and "extras" is approved at the annual city meeting, next June, the city tax will be 21 1-10 mills on the dollar. The finance committee, in presenting the list of estimates, expresses no opinion as to which of the "extras" are necessary and the order in which they appear in the list has no meaning as to the respective merits of each.

Protest Broadway Building Line

The meeting was called to order at 8:20 o'clock, and the city clerk read his return of publication of the notice of the Broadway building line ordinance. Charles V. James, attorney, presented a signed protest against the adoption of the ordinance. He said it was signed by at least 20% of the owners of the land on the area affected. The protest was read by the clerk.

Mr. James said the proposed ordinance does not conform with the act authorizing zoning in Norwich.

It is our claim that the proposed ordinance to be valid must conform with Section Two of the act authorizing zoning, said Mr. James. The proposed ordinance does not affect uniformly all buildings on the street. Mr. James said the ordinance is intended to prevent property holders from building on their own land in front of their own buildings. He said zoning regulations should be made for the whole district and not for only a part of the district. Mr. James was the only person who appeared to speak at the hearing, which was then declared closed, the council recessing to the mayor's office. Attorney James represented Thomas M. Connor and the H. M. Land Co. They, with Henry H. Vignot, were the signers of the protest which Attorney James presented to the council at the opening of the hearing.

Asylum Street Petition

The council re-convened at 9:55 o'clock. An invitation from the Dwell Athletic club to attend their national road race Memorial day was accepted. A petition from the West End Community association with some 60 signers, asking an appropriation of $30,000 to improve Asylum street from Newton street to Starr street, was referred to the public works committee. A petition from Timothy F. Brewer et al. to connect with the sewer on Dunham street, was referred to the public works committee.

Marcella Kiccolt petitioned the city to remove a manhole from in front of Nos. 163-165 North Main street and place it in some other location. Petitioner claims the manhole is a detriment to her property. The petition was referred to the public works committee.

Broadway Building Line Fixed

The council then adopted, without change, the new ordinance, fixing the building line on lower Broadway as proposed at the last meeting and on which a hearing was held earlier in the evening.

The public works committee requested that sidewalk grades be established on the easterly side of McKinley avenue from Rockwell street northerly and the north westerly side of Boswell avenue from Hickory street northerly. The grades asked for were fixed by resolutions and hearings on the resolutions will be held at the July meeting of the council.

Claims Disallowed

On recommendation of the finance committee the claims of Louise A. Corcoran and Eleanore Wilbur for personal injury were disallowed.

The annual reports of the city treasurer, city health officer, cemetery department, street commissioner, cemetery trust funds and fire commissioners, the auditing committee report of the water department and cash report of the water department were received and accepted.

The public works committee recommended that Mary Sacitowska, who petitioned for a sewer from West Thames street and South street to the Thames river, be given leave to withdraw. The committee pointed out that the sewer would have to be run either across the tracks of the Central Vermont railroad or clear to Shipping street and across a flat grade, at considerable expense.

The public works committee also recommended that John Prsekop be given leave to withdraw his petition. He asked that an appropriation be placed in the estimates to provide for a sewer in Golden street extension. Because of the cost the committee recommended that he be given leave to withdraw. The finance committee made a report on claims against the city, paid, disallowed and pending. On recommendation of the fire commissioners, Fannie Blinderman was given permission to construct a second-story wooden addition to an ell on her property at No. 37 Thames street.

To meet the expenditures called for by the foregoing estimates, a tax of thirteen and three-fifths (13 3-5) mills on the last city list will be required, said list being $36,134,928.00.

The tax recommended last year by the finance committee was twelve and three-fifths (12 3-5) mills, on the list of $36,035,266.

In addition to the said estimated expenses for the ordinary requirements of the City, the Committee on Finance has been requested by petition and otherwise to submit to the annual city meeting for its action, estimates for the following purposes, which are as follows:

1.	Bath street curb cut-off	$1,500.00
2.	Church street improvement	4,500.00
3.	Broad street cut-off	2,000.00
4.	Yantic street filling	3,000.00

13.	Court house bonds payable Apr. 2, 1931	143,000.00
	Total	$272,685.00

The foregoing items are all desirable, but will, if all are voted by the City Meeting, require an additional tax of seven and one-half (7 1-2) mills above that required by the regular estimates for which the Committee has recommended a tax of 13 3-5 mills. Your Committee recommends that the warning for the next Annual Meeting include the last named estimates, commonly known as "extras," and a call for action thereon. Your Committee expresses no opinion as to which of said extra items are necessary and the order in which they appear has no meaning as to the respective merits of each.

Mayor Robbins Speaks

Just before the council adjourned sine die, Mayor Robbins addressed the meeting. "Gentlemen of the council," said the mayor, every meeting this fiscal year has had very unusual attendance. This is probably our last, and it is the concluding one of my term of office.

In looking at the annual treasurer's report of the city for the 23 fiscal years prior to 1928-9, I was surprised to find only one—just 20 years ago—when there was no overdraft. Four years ago the peak was reached by an astounding overdraft exceeding $44,000. The average overdraft for this 23-year period is upward of $10,000. Unpaid temporary loans have accumulated year after year until at present they total $104,000. Money borrowed for permanent improvements and not repaid amounts to about $325,000 additional; upon all of which $425,000 of unbonded debt—the curse of a spendthrift policy—the city pays interest year after year without progress or relief.

Regardless of this example, last year's council established a unique record in the form of a $13,000 surplus for you to strive to equal or surpass.

When you assumed office last June, I expressed confidence in your ability to better this mark. I did not, however, anticipate the unprecedented record which you have set by meeting all obligations and having left nearly $45,000 cash balance. I heartily congratulate you! This result is particularly pleasing because it is not attributable to any one source nor to any one department, but is the reward of strict adherence to efficient business methods by all.

While every department deserves credit, particular comment is due the splendid showing of the public works department which has a cash saving of more than $10,000, exclusive of the North Main street improvement which was constructed at a saving to the city of over $13,000 under the $50,000 appropriation. Saving money, of course, is not the sole criterion of the efficient functioning of a department. Improved service is also indicative of competence. A great amount of lasting improvement to our streets has been accomplished by Commissioner Wightman during his term of office and this fact accounts for the few requests at this time for extra appropriations for surfacing roads.

The water department with its additional 15,800 odd dollars of receipts over and above the estimate fixed for the year, made a wonderful gain.

The police department has notably improved during the past year. Great credit is due to it for the manner in which it has coped with our ever-increasing traffic. Holding this wheeled avalanche under control is a stupendous task made more acute by reason of narrow highways and multiple intersections within small areas. The addition of the so-called mounted police offer has successfully corrected the reckless operation of motor cars heretofore endangering school children and adults. We all know this department is undermanned, but there is no crime wave and the city was never before so free of vice.

The two-platoon system has proven a God-send to our fire department and the morale of its men was never before so high as now. Although the past year has been a hard one, the efficiency of this branch has never faltered.

The gas and electrical department is likewise entitled to praise for its accomplishments during the year. When the controversy of the year before quieted down, and sober consideration was restored, this department frankly acknowledged that some criticism of its methods had been justified. Self-recognition of this fact has proven an inspiration for a steady improvement in the operation of this business and much greater efficiency exists today than was thought possible a year ago. Sincere efforts are being made to accomplish even greater results. A sinking fund sufficient to liquidate bonded indebtedness of this plant amounting to $287,000 is assured. I am optimistic concerning the future showing of this department and further reductions in the rates are virtually assured for the coming year.

In conclusion, I desire to express my thanks for whole-hearted cooperation to each of you, to Corporation Counsel Perkins, City Engineer Palmer, Treasurer Coit and to the members of all boards and commissions, the heads of the several departments and to all city employes.

ARREST FOLLOWS COLLISION AT WASHINGTON ST. CORNER

Charges of reckless driving and failure to grant right of way were made against Earl G. Swan, 16, of this city Friday afternoon, after a collision at the corner of Washington and Sachem street between the car he was driving and a sedan driven by Mrs. Mattie E. Beit of 390 West Main street.

As the sedan was coming down Washington street and reached the intersection it was hit in the side by Swan's car which was coming along Chelsea Parade south. Swan's machine lost a front wheel and the Beit car had a rear wheel damaged so that both machines were disabled. Swan was arrested by Officer Patrick Murphy in the complaint of Mrs. Beit.

MOTORCYCLIST SUFFERS INJURIES IN FALL

As he swerved sharply to avoid a collision with an automobile, Tony Abruzzo, who lives off Palmer street, fell off his motorcycle Friday evening at Broad and Grove streets. He received a cut that required several stitches to close and he was summoned to appear in the city court this (Saturday) morning to answer to a charge of failure to grant the right of way. Abruzzo, it is said, was driving on the left hand side of the street at the time his motorcycle fell over.

A fully-loaded pistol, believed made in the 1850's or 60's, recently was dug up by A. L. Dill of Sterling, Kas.

RED ARROW BOOSTER RESULTS AND AUCTION

The tenth Red Arrow auction was held at the Palace theatre at 9 o'clock Friday evening. In spite of the hot weather the theatre was filled with Red Arrow patrons waiting to bid on the articles offered for auction. Max Hanover, treasurer of the Red Arrow club, welcomed the audience in the name of the Red Arrow club and thanked them for the interest manifested in the Red Arrow game. Mr. Hanover also spoke of the Boy Scout Jamboree to be held at the state armory tonight (Saturday), telling the audience that Norwich council is now servicing Putnam, Willimantic, Stafford Springs, Danielson, Willington, East Woodstock, Pomfret Center, Baltic, Plainfield, Moosup, Canterbury, and Sterling.

He also said that Norwich is indeed fortunate in having secured the services of John Sellman, Scout executive, who is doing such wonderful work for the boys of Norwich. The speaker also said that being affiliated with the Boy Scouts as one of its vice presidents and knowing of the wonderful work that is being taught to the boys of Norwich, he often felt sorry that there was no Boy Scout organization when he was a boy, as he could never learn the things that are taught to our boys in the Scout organization. He also said that he is particularly impressed with the foundation of loyalty, respect for the elders and the doing of a good turn every day which the boys are taught in the Scout organization.

In the name of the Scout council he extended to the audience a cordial invitation to attend the Jamboree, telling them that if they have not as yet attended one of these events they will enjoy one of the finest entertainments in a long time. He said that admission to the Jamboree is free, only that a ticket should be obtained during the day from any Boy Scout or by applying at Scout headquarters in the Thayer building.

Mr. Hanover also said that he was very glad that the Red Arrow club had been enabled to help the boys put on their Jamboree at the armory.

Booster Contest Winners

The special feature of the auction was the announcement of the winners in the Booster contest which has been going for four months. Mr. Hanover expressed great praise for the energy, perseverance and industry displayed by the ten Boosters who remained in the contest out of 125 who entered at the beginning. He said it was highly gratifying that out of the ten Boosters seven were ladies and three were men, which goes to show, he said, that our women of Norwich are industrious. He also pointed out that out of the six winners five were women and only one a man.

Mrs. Edward Brennan, 7,633,185, fifth, $160 Maytag washing machine.

While Mr. Hanover congratulated the winners upon their hard work in the contest he expressed great admiration for the sportsmanlike manner in which those who had not won had accepted the results in a real friendly spirit.

ENTRY LIST FOR NATIONAL DUWELL RUN MEMORIAL DAY HAS 73 RUNNERS

The name of William Kyronen, Finnish-American A. C. athlete, of New York, another of the world's greatest distancemen, was added Friday night to the entry list for the National 10-Mile championship run, to be held at the fair grounds on the afternoon of Memorial day. The entry of the famed Finn was received during the day Friday together with 10 from the Dorchester A. C., of Dorchester, Mass. With still a week to go the entry list for the title run now numbers 73. There is a strong possibility that by race time the list will go over the 100 mark.

To those that know distance running there is little need of introducing Kyronen but for the benefit of those that are just learning their A, B, Cs of the business it might be stated that the Finn ranks alongside of DeMar, Michaelson, Hennigen, Ward and a few others of the headliners already entered for the run. Kyronen's most recent achievement was his work in the Boston marathon, held on April 19, when he finished second to DeMar in one of the greatest races ever run in the Hub city.

The filing of Kyronen's entry means additional worry for James McDade of the Millrose A. A., New York, the present champ. The latter has promised to put his crown on the block Memorial day and according to present indications there is going to be a terrific scramble for it. Never in the history of distance running has a classier field ever entered for a title chase. The list includes three members of the 1928 American Olympic team in addition to four national champions, two ex-national titleholders and a flock of intersectional, county and state champs. The entries to date are as follows:

Moody and Ryan Enter Finals At Auteuil

AUTEUIL, France, May 23—(AP)—Helen Wills Moody and Elizabeth Ryan, daughters of sunny California playing in polar weather, defeated a strong pair of English players today in the semi-finals of the French hard court tennis championships.

With Queen Helen volleying, smashing and serving in greatly improved form, the American standard-bearers in the women's doubles divison won from Joan Fry and Ermyntrude Harvey by scores of 6-1, 6-2, to be the first players in any event of this rain-soaked tournament to reach the finals.

It took the Americans only 41 minutes to demonstrate their superiority over the English girls who had been rated as leading contenders for the title.

The Californians now are favored to win the championship by defeating Mme. Simone Mathieu and Mlle. Yvette Barbier of France who reached the finals through an unexpected victory over Mrs. Phoebe Watson and Doris Round of England.

Paired with Jean Borotra, "the bounding basque" of France, Miss Ryan advanced to the quarter-final round in mixed doubles by defeating Mme. Desloges and Antoine Gentien, France, 6-3, 6-3.

In the quarter-finals of the men's doubles competition, Harry Hopman and Jim Willard of Australia upset the veteran English combination of J. Colin Gregory and I. G. Collins in five bitterly contested sets at 3-6, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2 10-8.

A second Australian team consisting of E. F. Moon and Jack Crawford disposed of two more of England's best players, H. G. N. Lee and G. P. Hughes, at 6-2, 4-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, to gain the semi-finals.

FINE RELIEF HURLING BY SPENCER BEATS CHICAGO

PITTSBURGH, May 23—(AP)—Glenn Spencer, rookie pitcher, fanned Hartnett and Pinchhitter Tolson with the tying run on the sacks in the ninth here today and Pittsburgh defeated Chicago, 7 to 6.

Meine worked eight clever innings against the Cubs but they shelled him heavy in the ninth for three runs before Spencer reached the scene.

Hal Carlson started for Chicago but retired at the end of the third in favor of Guy Bush, when he was struck on the pitching hand by a liner.

INTEREST IN ACADEMY-BULKELEY GAME THIS AFTERNOON IS AT HIGH PITCH

CHUBBY GIBBS
N. F. A. Baseball Captain

"Beat Bulkeley."

That is the cry from Academy students and the city in general as the Academy's baseball team sets out for New London this afternoon to tackle its ancient rival on the Mercer field diamond, the game starting at 3 o'clock.

The boys are out for revenge today, because of the 7 to 1 victory Bulkeley scored here last Saturday, their first over the Red and White since 1926. It has irked Academy followers no little bit and they are confident the team can turn the tables this afternoon.

Bulkeley is leading the league by a half game but would be displaced by an Academy victory today, the Wildcats going to first, with Tech second and Bulkeley third.

Indications Friday night were that Eugene Callahan, slight right-hander, would again get the pitching assignment for Bulkeley and attempt to duplicate his four-hit win over the Wildcats one week ago. Callahan, aided by brilliant support and more than his share of breaks, tamed the Wilcats as no one has done in the last three or four years, but whether he can do it twice in a row is another question. Local fans say that the breaks never come to a team again in a lifetime like they did in the first game and that the Red and Whitesters should solve his delivery today for an easy victory.

The Academy's starting pitcher will not be known until game time. It may be Butsy Weisgraber, veteran right-hander, who was the losing pitcher last week, or it may be Boots Greene, the team's undefeated hurler, who has five wins to his credit. In case Greene goes to the mound Weisgraber, a good hitter, will take left field. Second base is also undecided with Speed Reardon and Jerry Fitzgerald the candidates, and rightfield with Ed Flathier, Les Crowell and Chet Berchinzo as possibilities, is also a question-mark. The rest of the lineup is Bud Fontaine catching, Alec Arico, whose home run saved the team from a shutout last week, at first, Captain Chubby Gibbs at short, Mickey Breen at third and Hack Pepin in center.

The bands of the two schools will again be present, playing before the game and between the innings and umpires from Hartford, Central Board officials, will again handle the game.

BALTIC SENIORS OPPOSE POLISH CITIZENS SUNDAY

The Polish Citizens club will make its second appearance at Sayles field, Baltic, Sunday afternoon, when it plays the Baltic S. and A. C. team. The Citizens blanked Baltic in the first game, 5 to 0, but they will meet with much stronger opposition on Sunday, as Manager Coullard has strengthened his lineup.

Lefty Lucier, star twirler of the Greeneville A. C., and his battery mate, Pete Tombari, have been signed by Baltic and will endeavor to put Baltic on an even basis with the Norwich team. Lucier has been hurling a great game of ball this season, turning many back by the strikeout route. He has also allowed but a few hits in each game he has pitched in.

FORT TRUMBULL STARS PLAY GREENEVILLE A. C.

The Fort Trumbull Stars of New London will test the mettle of the Greeneville A. C. nine at Hollyhock Island diamond Saturday afternoon and will attempt to even the series. Greeneville holds a 2 to 0 victory over the Stars, this game having been played earlier in the season. Pete Tombari and Nevins will be the battery for the locals. The rest of the lineup includes A. Tombari, 2b; Pete Finn, 3b; Kampf, ss; Fitzgerald, lf; Jackson, cf; Couture, rf.

H. N. S. TACKLES NEW LONDON TEAM SUNDAY

With five straight victories under its belt the Holy Name Society nine will attempt to make it six against the Willetts A. C. of New London at Slaters park, Jewett City, Sunday afternoon. The Jewett City team has been hitting the ball hard in its previous encounters and expect to continue to do so in Sunday's game. The Willetts A. C. will be one of the strongest teams that the H. N. S. will meet during the season, so the fans can expect a good game.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WEBSTER, May 23—Putnam High school slammed out 13 hits here this afternoon in their first contest with the St. Louis high school nine of Webster to win by a 15-9 score. GERMANY'S AUTO INDUSTRY DECLARED IN GOOD SHAPE

RUESSELSHEIM, Germany—(AP)—German progress in the automobile industries is sounder than that in other countries, declares Keith Wood, director general of the General Motors-Opel Works.

Wood asserted that in most countries increased production and the utilization of modern labor methods in a great many instances had led to overexpansion and overproduction. This, he said, had been avoided by German industries, whereby they had gained a lasting start over their foreign competitors.

While the German automobile output was steadily increasing with a marked reduction in costs, he said, foreign competitors had to contend with a diminution of productivity at a very noticeable increase of costs.

Singer Easily Beats Fernandez Before 12,000

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, N. Y., May 23—(AP)—Slash Al Singer wiped out the last obstacle in his path to a shot at the lightweight championship tonight and battered up the only warrior who had ever knocked him out.

The dark Jewish boy from the Bronx made a mess of Ignacio Fernandez' features, dropped him once for a count of two, and hammered him steadily for ten long rounds but he could not finish the Filipino. Fernandez deadened Singer with a single right to the hin in three rounds here less than a year ago. By whipping Fernandez, Singer now is assured of a title match with Sammy Mandell in one of the open air extravaganzas of the summer.

HIGH SCHOOL SPORTS

Hillhouse high of New Haven, with a record of ten straight victories and no defeats, is one of the leading clubs in Connecticut at the present time. The New Haven team has compiled quite a record so far and should it be able to maintain its present pace, will make the game with the Academy here, June 7, one of the most interesting of the season.

Here is what The New Haven Register says of the team: Hillhouse, with ten straight victories without a defeat, appears to have the best-balanced club in the state. In its game the team has gathered 118 runs, for an average of 12 to a game.

The J. B. Martin nine meets one of the best semi-pro clubs in Massachusetts in the Fall River A. C., at the J. B. Martin grounds, Taftville, Sunday afternoon. This team is made up of the fastest and most prominent ball tossers in semi-professional ball, and always gives its opponents plenty to worry about. The game is scheduled to start at 3 o'clock.

The well known Dan Costigan is manager of the nine and will send either Bull or Anatol to twirl against the Martins with a strong supporting lineup including such players as Shag, Lent and Kirby. Anatol is the hurler that defeated the J. B. Martins in its first game of teh season. He was pitching for the Universal Winding nine.

With the above bunch of stickers facing him Walter Linder, who has been signed by the J. B. to take the mound, will have a kotty problem and one to his liking. In his abbreviated stay with New Haven with the Eastern league Walter pitched to some of the best players in the country and did fairly well. He ought to hold these boys in check.

Outside of Linder no new faces will be seen in the Taftville lineup, the same lineup taking the field as worked in the first game.

Planning for Parade

A large gathering of members of Montville post, No. 114, American Legion, attended the special Memorial day parade meeting held in Gair field, Uncasville, Thursday evening. An invitation has been extended the Civil war veterans, Spanish American war veterans, the Red Cross, Cochegan camp, Modern Woodmen of America degree team, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, pupils of Uncasville school and Palmer Memorial school, Palmertown. A large number is expected to participate in the Memorial day parade, Friday morning. Graves of the honored dead will be decorated and services conducted in Comstock cemetery, Uncasville. The legion post has secured the services of a well known band. After the services the procession will march to the Community house where those who took part in the parade will be served lunch by the post.

A beautiful May basket was hung at the home of Mrs. Albert Taylor in honor of Stella Wickowski, of Palmertown, Thursday evening. The event was enjoyed by her school friends. Church. The accused was found guilty of speeding and was fined $25 and costs which he paid.

FISH BEING FOUND DEAD IN QUINEBAUG RIVER

Returning fisherman from the Quinebaug told, Friday, about the large numbers of dead fish floating in the water and stranded at points all along the shore. Heretofore the dead fish that have been reported from time to time have been chiefly suckers. Friday there were found to be a considerable number of pickerel, bass and bullheads. In the lower Aspinook pond more than two bushels were taken from the canal grating, with the long rake used to clear the screen from obstructions that float in with the current. As proof of the existence of carp in these waters, one was found floating near Bennett's cove. Local fishermen are at a loss to acount for this occurrence, as the water is running clear. The state fish and game officials are to be notified and asked for an opinion. One reason given Friday afternoon by Deputy Game Warden Charles B. Palmer is that at this season of the year the local pond fish are very much weakened on account of the spawning period which is just passed. He thought that, carried along by the current, they were borne against the grating at the canal, where they were eventually drowned. It is definitely stated that no water impurity exists in the Quinebaug.

The mercury stood at 94 for four hours Friday afternoon. Farmers all through this section are telling of the need of rain again and report the top of plowed land is burning hot. At five a. m. the temperature was 58, at 5 p. m. 90.

Exercises at Pachaug

There will be impressive memorial ceremonies at Pachaug cemetery Sunday afternoon at 2:30 (advanced time). Orville LaFlamme post, American Legion, will be in charge of all the program. Frank Morgan is in charge of the Legion firing squad, with their Ashland Boys' band, singing by Pachaug grange, and the regular Legion firing squad, are to be special features. The speaker will be Rev. Harold L. Arnold, pastor of the First Congregational church of Griswold. This (Saturday) evening Mr. Morgan will place flags on the soldiers' graves. The Sunday exercises will not include a visit to the individual graves, but instead, the gates of the cemetery will be fittingly decorated. The local grange is inviting all grangers to help make the musical program a success. The legion firing squad, with their parting volleys, will thus honor the sleeping soldiers. The Legion and other committees ask that veterans of all wars take part in the exercises.

Geo. A. Ross Offers Prize

George A. Ross, who is keenly interested in local baseball and who was manager of the team here close to 50 years ago when Hugh Duffy was the home town star, has offered to give to the player in the Jewett City Twilight league who makes the greatest number of base hits during the season, the best glove that can be bought, or five dollars in gold.

The cement road builders established a record for expert highway construction in laying the half-mile from a point on Main street to the borough line. Some parts of the construction was put down at the rate of 85 feet in 60 minutes. The many local interested spectators were anxious to know what the three-foot, six inch square beams of cement were to be used for. These pieces are to be seen at points along the finished section. It was learned that they are for testing purposes. After the required number of hours, a machine, rigged in an auto truck will subject these beams to a breaking test, which serves to prove the existence of the actual specifications required by the state. The first Main street section was begun Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock and completed to the borough line Friday noon. Division Engineer John Smith was in town Friday and said that Monday morning the builders would begin on the shoulders and gutters on the south side of Main street and continue to Brown avenue. The test beams will be broken today (Saturday).

SISTER JEANNE DE CHANTAL DIES AT LOCAL CONVENT

A great sorrow has come unexpectedly to the sisters of St. Mary's convent and the entire Catholic parish, in the death of Sister Jeanne de Chantal, which occurred Friday morning. She had been ill a week with pneumonia, and as only so recently she had conducted a Polish program in the Bijou. Her brief illness proving fatal came as a shock to the parish. She was a native of France. In her younger days she had traveled with her father, who was a sea captain. She spent a few years in Poland, and acquired a fine knowledge of the Slavic languages and customs. Twenty-five years ago she came to this country and taught in Catholic high schools in Leominster, Mass., and Tupper Lake, N. Y. In September, 1929, she came to St. Mary's school as a teacher, principally of the children of Polish descent. With her wide experience in travel and in her years of teacher training, added to her endearing personality, she was a most beloved sister, not only to the pupils, but to the adult members of the parish. Her death affects Sister Cecelia more nearly than anyone else, as she was her teacher, both in grammar and high school. Her nearest relatives are cousins in France.

Mrs. H. B. Kingsley of Meshaweut, R. I., has returned home after spending a few days at the home of her son, Ralph Kingsley.

No one is going to forget the poppy girls today. They are going to ask you to buy a flower. The great good done each year, right in Griswold, as the results of poppy sales, is well known, so everybody is asked to buy a flower.

A prominent citizen of New London county, who is thoroughly alive to the seriousness of the forest fire situation in the county, has offered a reward of $100.00 to any one who furnishes sufficient information to convict the party responsible for the fire of May 2, 3 and 4, which burned such a large area in North Stonington near the Ledyard line, and a $25.00 reward for information leading to the conviction of any person setting any fire without a permit from the fire warden in the towns of North Stonington, Preston, or Ledyard. This reward to be good until the parties responsible for four fires have been convicted.

MARY

By
MARIAN L. MADDISON

THE DEADLY MONOTONY OF WORK, ECONOMY AND CHILDREN TURNED HER ROSEATE DREAMS OF MARRIAGE INTO LISTLESS DESPAIR UNTIL TRAGEDY SHOWED HER A WAY TO HAPPINESS

A THIN patter of rain splashed unnoticed against the windowpanes. Filled with the promise of romance, the first little home was all ready for occupancy. The complete set of parlor furniture and the nearly complete set for the dining room, the elaborately decorated lamp, the equally decorated umbrella stand and cut-glass punch bowl and glasses, all proudly displaying the cards of those who had sent them as tokens of their esteem.

With the very last dish tucked away on the topmost shelf, Mary climbed down from the borrowed stepladder proudly to survey their united efforts.

"Yes, Mary."

"It's wonderful."

"You bet it is, dear. Wouldn't take a million for it."

"It does look nice, Jimmy. But I didn't mean * * * the house. I mean * * * you and I * * * the beginning. Oh, Jim, tomorrow * * * tomorrow life begins all over."

"I know, Mary," and there was a little, choking sound in the boy's deep voice.

"Jimmy, dear, can't we remain always as we are tonight? Marriage won't make any difference, it won't, will it, Jim?"

"'Course not, Mary. Don't I love you 'nough?"

"Yes, Jim, but I mean, let's keep each other as we are now. Marriage won't stop our loving each other as we do now? It won't, will it, Jim?"

"How could it, Mary?"

"Married love is different, everybody says so."

"May be it is, but it's bigger and stronger. And besides, ours isn't like any one else's. Ours is real."

"Then it will last forever. Oh, Jimmy, don't let us forget. Promise?"

"What will I promise?"

"That marriage won't make us different—cross or unkind or common or * * *"

"I promise," said Jim, a bit, huskily.

"I promise," said Mary a bit wistfully.

THE rector of the small, ivy-covered church wiped his glasses a second time and his romantic sister watched them enviousy as hand-in-hand they went down the old flagstone path together. Watched them from a corner of her window, a little sadly, a little gladly.

Big, good-natured Jim, clean, hard-working, a silent plodder. And Mary, so daintily pretty, gentle, refined, kindly to every one. Jim adored Mary, a sort of childish adoration. Mary loved Jim, simply, proudly. Both 20 and all of life before them.

And then * * * another April, bringing with the rich fragrance of hyacinth and crocus and honeysuckle the little bundle called Mary, junior.

How proud they were of little Mary! Every afternoon Mary trundled her out in time to meet Jim coming out of the factory. Big, plain Jim, always unconsciously glancing over his shoulder, peering ahead, secretly longing to meet some one that he knew to hear himself saying, "My wife, Mary, and the baby. Ain't she a peach?"

The following summer was somewhat different. Jimmy, junior, came and Mary was more than tired with the summer heat. Mary, junior, cutting more teeth and not quite the novelty of the year before, while Jim, of course, no longer expected them to meet him each afternoon as he came from work.

After that—well, things were never quite the same after that. Other things, many things were taking the place of the romance in the lives of Jim and Mary. Such things as cribbled formulas tacked beside the cupboard door, stews and broths always simmering on the stove, baby wardrobes snowy white and stringing on the line (Sundays inclusive). Little clothes to button or untie, frocks to mend, stockings to darn, almost to make anew. Each night at 9 or 10 o'clock, with the last clean dish in place, little toys idling in the corner and the breakfast already in the making, Mary's work might be suspended until the morrow.

Weary Mary, loving so much to be neat and clean, loving the babies as they came, though secretly hoping no more would come.

They did, seven in all.

Big, good-natured Jim, the same Jim that Mary had married, the same Jim, only different. A Jim who liked to come home to peace and quiet, liked to slip into his smoking jacket, Mary's gift that memorable first-married Christmas. He liked to sit with his feet on the parlor table and tip his chair at a certain angle with the evening papers lying across his knees unread, to close his eyes and dream while the ashes from his pipe fell — well, no matter.

Poor Jim! He really did not know that he was sometimes a little more than merely thoughtless. Upon rare occasions at Mary's suggestions he washed the dishes, that is, he washed some of the dishes, washed the pots and pans and peanut-butter tumblers in the first hot soapy water, invariably forgetting the silver.

The same flat with added room or two, the same furniture thought somewhat the worse for the wear and tear. That little white house in the suburbs, with the all-alike-doteds at the windows, was only one of those many, many dreams yet to come true.

Mary was still so young, pitifully young for the tired lines and stooped shoulders. Young enough to dream, only Mary's dreams belonged only to Mary, never to Jim. Dreams of rest, quiet, peace, yes, and cleanliness. Dreams of clothes enough and coal enough and health enough and strength enough. The last was really not a dream, but a constant, silent prayer that had grown to be a vital part of every day and night of Mary's wearied life.

April again and the children needing new hats, shoes and underthings, not forgetting Jim, who no longer wore the cheap, ready-made clothes of those earlier days. Jim was progressing and Mary more than Jim himself realized too well that he could not afford to be threadbare.

Mary's clothes—well, of course, with the children coming so fast she really had had little opportunity for pretty clothes anyway. Sometimes she thought of pretty things a bit wistfully, perhaps; sometimes, too, she hoped that her neighbors would not count the absence of many necessary things hanging on the line, but she didn't mind, anyway. That is, she didn't know that she did until that April morning when Adgar Patterson passed by.

SATURDAY morning and Adgar's house all spick-and-span. As for that, it could be, for only one small boy who has to keep his toys in the cellar cannot make so very much work. Nine o'clock and Tommy Patterson packed off to grandma's for the week end. Nine o'clock and Adgar looking like the front page of a Paris style book in her latest coat and silkiest frock, not to mention the tantalizing ostrich tips curling down upon her shoulder.

It was, after all, those same ostrich tips that proved to be the last feather for poor Mary. "Ostrich tips," she sighed, "and only 9 o'clock on a Saturday morning."

Thus she surveyed the cake and pie pans adorning the kitchen table, longing to pitch them through the window and into the rubbish heap, as all the while she heaped them with savory fillings. Jim's favorite fillings.

She was thinking of those ostrich tips drooping so tantalizing near Adgar's pretty face, thinking of Adgar's neat house, thinking * * * thinking. Sniff * * * sniff. A cake plumped into the resemblance of a bloated pancake. Thinking * * * thinking. Sniff * * * sniff. Another cake burned beyond reclaim. Thinking * * * but suddenly Mary's cheeks felt the sting of hot tears, the first since the baby had crushed his fingers in the food chopper.

With her head burrowed into her arms among the pots and pans upon that cluttered table, she was wondering if there were any other Marys quite as tired as she within her heart.

And all the while blind Jim remained unthinking, simply forgetting that Mary's life must necessarily glimpse the sunshine and the need of a few hours that she might cometimes call her own, a few hours without the feel of babies' fingers or the cries and questions of every hour of every day.

Saturday afternoon and Jim home for the week end. His smoking jacket and slippers fitted as accustomed, feet on the parlor table, papers unread across his knees.

Saturday afternoon and Mary, junior, 16 and boy-crazy, hanging out of the front window bestowing movie-vamp glances upon a susceptible grocer boy. Jimmy, junior, hustling his toilette, opening drawers, leaving them open. Jimmy was helping in a flower shop and his personal appearance had suddenly become the most important thing of the moment.

The twins emulating the latest prizefighter. Crash! Bang! The cut-glass punch bowl and glasses departed forever. Jim said that it really didn't matter, since they had never used them, anyway. Benny wailing on a harmonica. Marguerite in the opposite corner wailing with a toothache. Jim said that any little girl possessed with a name like Marguerite should never have anything so ordinary as a toothache. And, lastly, the baby, unnoticed in his highchair, busily pouring his tin cup of milk on Mary's recently scoured floor.

Perhaps Mary did not mean all that she said on that particular Saturday afternoon, but Jim was Jim and Mary was Mary, just like most of the Jims and Marys in the world.

"Mary, do you mean that?"

"I do."

"No, you don't, Mary. You're tired. You work too hard."

"Well, who's to do it if I don't?"

"I'll help you, you know that I will."

"You * * * you! Oh, heavens! You'll help me! What good are you? What can you do but waste your time and twiddle your thumbs while you pretend to read the papers? Look at those screen doors; the Smith's have had theirs no two weeks and they haven't any baby. You promised three years ago to paint the icebox and it isn't painted yet. You promised to make me some window-boxes, fix the baby's highchair, put the casters on the bureau, paint the bathtub and nail up the back steps. You'll help me?"

"Why didn't you remind me?"

"Remind you? I've been reminding you for seventeen years and now I'm too tired. Yes, I'm tired and I'm cross and I wish * * * I wish you'd get out from under my feet and go somewhere * * anywhere * * * only get out from under my feet."

Tired Mary, Hungry Mary, hungry for rest and quiet, and dreams-come-true.

"Why, Mary, you don't mean these things, you're upset over something. Who's been talking to you, anyway?"

"Nobody's been talking to me. I do mean them."

"No, you don't."

"Yes, I do. I'm tired. I'm tired of everything. I'm tired of us. You, us and company. What's it all amount to, anyway? Nothing * * * nothing. There hasn't been any companionship between us since Jimmy came; no love, no romance, no anything. Nothing except living together. Now I'm tired. I wish you'd go somewhere and rent a room and get out from under my feet. I'm tired of cooking, I'm tired of scrubbing and I'm tired of babies."

"Now wait a minute, Mary. Wait a minute. I wouldn't say these things if I were you."

"Why shouldn't I say them? They're true, aren't they?"

"Perhaps you feel that way about us; I don't."

"Well, I do."

"I'm sorry, Mary. I thought that we had been rather happy myself, the ups and downs like every one, that's all."

"Everybody doesn't have 'ups and downs.' Look at the Pattersons, Adgar Patterson. She with her fine clothes and ostrich tips and her work all done at 9 o'clock every Saturday morning. Her John * * *"

"Stop right there, Mary. If it's the money, well, I give you nearly all that I earn, you know that. And its clean. Please remember that, Mary. It is clean."

"Adgar's money is clean."

"Maybe it is, maybe it isn't, but John Patterson isn't earning half as much as I am and they live twice as well. But we aren't discussing John and Adgar; their business is their own. I am earning almost three times as much as I did when we were married. You think that I waste my time, do you? Well, one of those day-dreams has earned me a third promotion, and Hendy told me today that if that order from Lansing Cross comes through they'll promote me again."

April, later that same Saturday afternoon and Mary once more lapsed into sullen silence. Jim's smoking jacket hanging on its hook. Jim sitting in the nearby park, feet stretched out before him, papers unread across his knees. Sunday morning and Jim again in the park, thinking * * * brooding * * * dreaming."

Dinnertime * * * Suppertime * * * Bedtime.

Mary feigning sleep, listening for his step. It came at last, giving her sufficient time to slip into the empty cot usually occupied by Mary, junior, who had unfortunately elected that particular April night to visit nearby.

Jim away all day and home again to the silent house and the old white iron bed, empty. The same white iron bed of those years gone by when Mary had felt that she could not sleep without the feel of Jim's head against her shoulder. Jim away all day and home again, unwelcomed. Ten o'clock and the last clean dish in place, little worn toys idling in the corner and the breakfast already in the making.

Monday morning, breakfast, Jim with his hand on the doorknob, as upon all of those other mornings, only different.

"I'll come home when you send for me, Mary."

Silence.

"Then you'll not be coming home very soon. I'll never send for you."

MONDAY NIGHT. Jim's smoking jacket hanging on its hook. Mary's heart thumping a little too hard. Midnight. Mary, alone, sleepless in the old white iron bed. Jim in the rented room, again promoted, the Lansing Cross order properly signed and under way, while locked in the vault of the great plant lay one of Jim's dreams, born of those years when he had dreamed enveloped in Mary's Christmas gift, feet on the parlor table, papers unread across his knees.

Days * * * weeks * * * months. Mary's stoic, sullen lips sealed so tightly. If her heart ached a little sometimes, no one ever knew. Jim's money came regularly, steadily, increasing more and more as the months passed on. Then it came by check from distant cities. Larger checks from larger cities. A year, two years, five years, ten years passed.

Still the same house, the same everything. Even with the rose rug and all-alike-dotteds and ostrich tips so easily attainable, they had never materialized. Still the same old house, the same old everything.

Mary, junior, long since married to her grocer boy and quite independently bringing up a little family of her own. Jimmy, junior, happily married to Anna. Jimmy loved her simply, proudly. Anna adored Jim, that sort of childish adoration, merely, the old order reversed. Yet it was Anna who had to remind even this younger Jim to telephone his mother each day, to run in unexpectedly or to take her out in the little car.

Little gifts at Anna's suggestion, little touches of thoughtfulness unnatural to Jimmy himself. It was Anna, too, the only only one one of Mary's flock, and she only Jimmy's wife, who kept in touch with his father regularly, the others able to find him only when they wanted something. It was Anna alone who remembered him at Christmas, and the only one who could have found him instantly in case of emergency. She was the only one who knew that Jim still waited for Mary to send for him.

The twins worked in a distant city, Benny, still possessed of that uncanny reach, a little troublesome at times, so troublesome that the county usually provided a home for him several months of every year in the nearest reformatory. Mary seemed to love him most of all, feeling that she alone must be responsible.

Then Marguerite, just about where Mary, junior, had been when her father went away, boy, movie and clothes crazed, darlingly modern and living most of the time with her sister because she was ashamed of "the old dump" and her mother, with her so-called antiquated restrictions.

And, lastly, the baby whose years Mary counted greedily, hungrily, dreading the time when he, too, should fly out of the nest.

Yet through all of these years, all of these trials, no one had ever seen Mary cry. No one had ever heard Mary complain. Her lips were still sealed by that stoic, sullen silence.

APRIL again, ten long years since that other April day when Adgar's ostrich feathers had dangled so tantalizingly down upon her shoulder. Ten long years and now an empty house, not even the baby. Only a noisy street, boys playing ball and * * Mary all alone. The baby had been married.

Ten years and that stoic, sullen silence broken. Mary's head bent forward and buried in her arms in the first agonies of grief.

After the simple services were over they gathered once more beneath the old roof. Mary, junior, was the first to bring forth the subject, and with one eye on her grocer boy timidly suggested that her mother return home with her. Anna was oddly missing and Jimmy, junior, was quite as thoughtless as usual. The twins seemed a bit uncertain as to just what might be expected of them. "However, it could be managed somehow, and mother could adjust herself shortly to the big city and its rushing ways. It would be very different, of course, but * * *" The uncertainty was quite unnecessary. Their mother had no intentions in that particular direction. Marguerite seemed a bit disappointed; it was 250 miles away and her mother's philosophies were not improving with time. There still remained Benny, but Benny's possibilities were now justly limited to the state penitentiary.

And so after a while they all went away, until Mary was at last alone. So utterly alone that she failed to hear the sound of steps upon the stairs and Jim standing on the threshold; the same Jim, only so different. A gray Jim, a worldly Jim, a little stouter, touches of prosperity all about him.

For a long, long minute he surveyed the flower-scented room and Mary, his Mary, her head buried in the very last remnants of that memorable first-married-Christmas gift. Down upon his knees beside her, Mary enveloped in his arms, faded, unhappy Mary, whose happiness had once included rose rugs, all-alike-dotteds and ostrich tips and her work all done at 9 o'clock on Saturday mornings.

Mary should have found happiness with the peace and quiet and rest, but, strangely, the things she had always yearned for did not bring her happiness.

With that stoic, sullen silence once broken, she did not seem to be the same. There was something the matter, something radically wrong with Mary. The new apartment, once undreamed in comfort and luxury, many other dreams slowly coming true. Benny, in reward for good behavior and Jim's vast influence, once and for all time was out in the fresh air and sunshine somewhere in the west, where he had always longed to be.

Yes, most of Mary's dreams were slowly coming true, but still those shoulders prematurely stooped, feet that lagged and that ever-aching place within her empty heart.

From one specialist to another Jim went in desperation, and at last to the old doctor who had been with Mary when all the babies came.

"The trouble with Mary is life," he said. "Repression and reaction. If only one of that brood of young ones that she brought into the world would need her a bit * * *" The old voice faltered. He shook his head sadly, wiping his glasses with a spotless handkerchief. "It's all that can save her from herself, Jim. The only thing."

Brusque words, true words, and when Jim huskily repeated them to Jimmy's Anna, the tears swept down the thin white cheeks, to fall upon a dainty blue blanket in the making.

FOR days Anna thought of those words, dreaming, trying to recall all of those vague talks with Mary, hoping that in these she might find the key to Mary's happiness.

At last it came to her, just a vague memory. There followed days spent in the search and at last they came upon it, as through all the weary years it had been waiting for Mary and Jim to take possession.

A little white cottage out of the city limits. Gardens of lilac, honeysuckle and syringa. Flower beds of crocus, hyacinth and iris. Low-beamed ceilings and square windows with tiny panes. Even a path of flagstone, such as the first path over which the newly married Mary and Jim had walked hand in hand so many years before.

There was a different look in Mary's eyes in the weeks that followed and her step seemed lighter. Not until the last dish was in its place and the last length of chintz and window glass hung perfectly did she really find time to wander in the gardens, rich in the new life of early spring.

Jimmy and Anna found her there one evening when they moved out to remain until after the baby came.

Anna needed Mary, and said so a bit timidly, as Annas sometimes do. And Mary loved it, the having them there, the knowing that once again she was truly needed.

Soon April was upon them, the sweet fragrance drifting through the windows from Mary's own gardens. Light rain pattered on the roof and within the cottage Mary clung tightly to Jim's big hand while they waited * * * that never-ending waiting while two lives hung by that frail thread of life itself.

In the hush of early morning, cars dimly lighted were parked in the old driveway. Two white-clad figures moved silently about. Professional men who turned the pages of life each day spoke grimly, wishing that morning might come.

Jimmy Junior * * * waiting.

When morning came Jim placed in Mary's trembling arms the tiny bundle, wrapped in the blue blanket into which Anna's stilled fingers had woven so many hours of happiness and dreams. Just a lonely little blue bundle. Mary's heritage from Jimmy's Anna.

In Mary Junior's attic Jim found the old rocking-chair, the same rocking-chair of those long-ago years; and after many weeks there fell from Mary's lips that old rock-a-by song, the one that she had crooned to Mary Junior and Jimmy Junior and all the others.

Then * * * with that broken trembling song came the Mary of old, the wistful Mary who had once tucked the very last dish into the fartherest corner of the topmost shelf, the eager Mary who had once trundled Mary Junior to meet Jim each late afternoon when he came out of the factory.

Once again there are simmering broths, sticky bottles and snowy clothes hanging on the lines, Sundays inclusive. Sometimes Mary wonders how she ever managed to care for more than one. There are others to cook and clean and wash and scour. Mary herself has only time enough for that tiny heritage of Jimmy's Anna.

As Recorder Nellie Dorr read the name of the departed Legionnaires, the guides tolled the gong three times for each Legionnaire, the chaplain placed a red carnation in the space left in the wreath, then the president of Mooseheart Legion 92, was escorted to the station by Conductress Rita Hoelck and Conductor John Watters and she placed a carnation in the remaining space for the departed Jr. Legion member. Heifetz For Slater Hall Course

Slater hall music course patrons, radio enthusiasts and music lovers in general of Norwich are much delighted in the news of a possibility of the coming to the city of Jascha Heifetz, the great and famous violinist.

The Slater hall concert courses throughout the past years have filled a very real place in the cultural life of Norwich, bringing to the community much of the world's best musical talent. The constant rise in the concert fees of the great artists has made it increasingly difficult to finance these high grade concerts with the limited seating capacity of Slater hall and so there has been no course for this 1929-30 season. The lack of this course was keenly felt by many during these past months and the management very much regretted the situation.

So, after much thought, a new plan of promotion has been conceived which, if successfully carried out, will make possible a course for the season of 1930-31, for next fall and winter. A very fine roster of artists has been selected, one which would give an excellently balanced type of course and which the management feels certain would be highly pleasing to all interested.

The course would consist of four concerts coming in the early part of November, December, January and February and the artists would be as follows: Jascha Heifetz, violinist of such world-wide fame that to say his name is enough, the New York String Quartette, one of the finest of the younger quartettes, which has so very acceptably appeared at the Berkshire Music Festival, under the patronage of Mrs. Coolidge in Washington, George Meader, one of the foremost tenors of the Metropolitan Opera company, and Katharine Meisle, leading contralto of the Chicago Opera company.

The new plan for this course is as follows: To find two hundred persons who will act as patrons or guarantors to the extent of paying $10 each for their course tickets and who would thereby be entitled to the first choice of seats in sections of the hall selected and reserved as entirely free of post obstruction. This group would furnish a financial nucleus sufficient to warrant the signing of the contracts for the course at once and assurance of a probable success in the sale of the remainder of the hall in the early fall. It is of course obvious that the committee must know immediately who is to comprise the list of guarantors and for that reason is placing a list blank in the Cranston company's store for the signatures of any willing to act as such. If preferred, the pledge may be given or sent to Mr. Archibald Mitchell, 4th, or Miss Ruth A. Hamilton any time this coming week.—See adv.

Palace Theater

Your chance to give the nicest girl in Norwich a trip to Atlantic City has arrived. Be sure to get to Palace theatre soon to cast your first five votes for her in the Popularity Contest now being held at that theater. Each patron is given a slip of admittance which entitles him to five votes for any girl in the town and that girl will receive not only a vacation for the reward for being well-liked but she will also be completely togged out in clothes, jewels and have a bank account to make it complete. The winner of the second prize will be given a gold season pass to the Palace which is also very alluring.

And of course you will see the usual excellent picture characteristic of the Palace policy. Starting today and continuing through Tuesday of next week the management will present Ramon Novarro in a modern romance called "In Gay Madrid." Among the features of this splendid production are the excellent songs written by well-known composers, dancing which is superb with Novarro specializing in the traditional tango for which he has long been famous and a cast including Beryl Mercer, Lottice Howell, Claude King, Eugenia Bessere and William V. Mong, with Dorothy Jordan in the leading feminine role.

The story of "In Gay Madrid" concerns the son of a Marquis who when he is sent to the university involves himself in romance which almost ends in ruin when a previous affair with a dancer of Madrid is brought to light.

The production has been handsomely fitted both as regards costumes and settings. Musical attractions include six songs sung by Novarro and a male chorus of fifty trained voices.

This is a picture which no lover of romantic stories should miss and besides affording delightful entertainment gives an opportunity to cast those first very important ballots for your favorite lady. Go and vote for yourself if you need a vacation and encourage all your friends to get there as soon as possible so that your name will be ranked among the first.

Broadway Theatre

Adventure!—What a wealth of day dreams the very word itself suggests! What man has not reveled in "cowboy" tales, what with riding, shooting cowboys, quick-triggered sheriffs, bandits, crooked gamblers, cattle rustlers and the like?—and the so-called "weaker sex" revel just as deeply in tales of the far-flung frontiers, with their glamor of romance always "just around the next bend." Mention of cowboy tales naturally brings us to Gary Cooper, tall, lean, lanky, quiet-spoken, lightning-triggered, and a marvelous rider—to the great majority of screen fans, the ideal cowboy—and why not?—born and raised in the cattle country, so important a part of that territory of vast prairies and tremendous herds that a city, center of trading, has been named after him—Gary, Montana, on the Great Northern railroad. Remembered best for his portrayal of Owen Wister's "The Virginian," and later in "Seven Days Leave," he strikes a new and higher dramatic note in the swaggering story of "The Texan," adapted from one of O. Henry's best-known stories. The scenes unfold with bewildering rapidity from the limitless plains of Texas to a border gambling house, where the stripling shoots a crooked gambler, and salvaging his horse from the blacksmith-sheriff at gunpoint, rides to the railroad. Boarding the train in the dead of night, he cleverly gets free passage to Galveston, and falling in with an American renegade, bent on swindling an aged and wealthy South American woman, is inveigled into the plot. Climaxes follow one another speedily, working to a dramatic scene that has never been equalled on the screen, when the relentless sheriff who has trailed his man southwards, suddenly appears just as the Texan has ironed out a most ticklish situation. Typically O. Henry, the plot is intriguing and fascinating, and with splendid outdoor shots of the Texas plains, the broad Gulf of Mexico, with an old windjammer plowing heavy sea, the limitless expanse of the great South American pampas, the beautiful hacienda, and the swift, breathless action, the story is ideal for the lanky Cooper and his beautiful co-star, lovely Fay Wray. On the same bill are booked Charlie Murray doing a "Jimmy Walker" in "His Honor the Mayor," a featured comedy with rib-tickling twists, selected Vitaphone varieties, and the latest Paramount Sound news.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY

Away

She is not dead. She has gone away
Into the joys of a sweeter day.
She gently smiled and waved her hand
And then went into a fairer land.

And we whose hearts in anguish burn
For her kindly voice and glad return,
Must think of her as finding there,
The windows of love beyond repair.

So sweet, so kind. She always smiled
With the artlessness of a little child.

And when she lay on her bed of pain,
She neither murmured, nor made complain
But seemed like a flour that greets the sun
With a cheery face when the day is done.

She is not dead, she only sleeps
Where the trailing wild rose softly creeps.

We must not say we cannot say
That she is dead.
She has gone away.

The New Memorial Day

"Under the roses the blue,
Under the lilies the gray."

Oh, the roses we plucked for the blue,
And the lilies we twined for the gray,
We have bound in a wreath,
And in silence beneath
Slumber our heroes today.

Over the new-turned sod
The sons of our fathers stand,
And the fierce old fight
Slips out of sight
In the clasp of a brother's hand.

That the new has washed away,
And the sons of those
That have faced as foes,
Are marching together today.

Oh, the blood that our fathers gave!
Oh, the tide of our mother's tears!
And the flow of red,
And the tears they shed,
Embittered a sea of years.

But the roses we plucked for the blue,
And the lilies we twined for the gray
We have bound in a wreath,
And in glory beneath
Slumber our heroes today.

The Very Fine Art of Forgetting.

Oh, is it worth while to remember too long
The grievance that caused one small sorrow?
It darkened our day and it silenced our song—
Why carry it into tomorrow?
Strange that we should choose to hold fast to our heart
The thing that produces our fretting!
'Twould surely be better to take up the art—
The very fine art of forgetting!

Forget the unkindness that rankled a bit,
Forget the quick words that were spoken—
Shall we let the friendships we've valued so long
In one hopeless moment be broken?
And why do we take precious time to lament
Our blunders that proved so unsetting?
If there is no mending let's try for a while
The very fine art of forgetting!

Our yesterday's losses, our yesterday's fears,
Mistakes—we have somehow lived through them—
Our keen disappointments, our heartaches, our tears,
What profits us now to hold them?
The world would be for us a happier place,
And there would be less of regretting,
If we would remember to practice with grace
The very fine art of forgetting!

Clipped.

OLD FOLKS AND OLDEN TIMES

Editor and S. C. Folks: I wonder if a little chat about old folks and olden times in and about Foster and other parts of Rhode Island would be interesting to the readers? If so, I will start at Manton. In the spring of 1864 my folks moved from Providence to Manton, then called Triptown. This, of course, was in Civil war times and there were families in those days that had to look sharp and scratch lively to get enough to eat and keep a roof over their heads. In this respect we had no trouble, for we did not wait for a job to turn up that we liked but did whatever there was to be done and kept everlastingly at it.

As those were days before the bug family had confiscated the fruit business there were quantities of apples to gather, potatoes to pick up and corn to husk, as well as hog killing and other fall work. I still have a corn husker that a Mr. Sessions made, that was used to husk corn, 300 bushels for him, and has served ever since. Mr. Sessions was said to be a rich farmer.

In late fall we moved up into the Cyril Rounds house at Little Rest, some three or four miles easterly from what was then called Danielsonville. This old house stood right across the state line so that Mr. Rounds lived in Rhode Island and we lived in Connecticut. There is nothing left of the old house now, or barn, or other buildings. Horace Burgess, who lived in the two-story house moved our goods with his ox team. Oxen were a common sight on the road in those days and many a load of farm products, especially charcoal, has been carted out of Foster and even as far back as Canterbury and Hampton, with ox teams.

As charcoal is light and bulky, wagon bodies had to be built especially for the business. They were built long, tight-boarded, about four feet high, and flaring, or widest at top, so as to get greatest capacity and they were called "coal trains."

Probably thousands of cords of birch and some alder have been burned into coal and carted to Providence from Foster, and much of it with oxen.

Alder coal is used in the manufacture of gun powder and was also said to be preferred by jewelers and silver smiths, as it gave off little or no sparks.

Foster also used to be a great town for huckleberries. Men, women and children used to make a business of picking them and selling to the stores or to men who came around on regular days and picked them up. To speak of a batch of 23 bushels of huckleberries going to Providence at one trip would not be telling a big story. Huckleberries were handled in bulk in those days. They were put in wooden boxes, covers lightly nailed so as to pack good in wagon. In the summer of 1865 I drove one of two teams loaded with huckleberries to Providence, in the night, of course, as we had to be there early in the morning. I don't remember how many bushels we had but I do remember that we doubled up and used two horses to pull each load up Dolly Coles hill (one of these horses was a wan mare and none too good natured). On another trip this same summer my brother had gone with a load and I and another boy went to follow the next night and met him at Palmer Torrence's hotel and stable, pretty well down on what was then High street but is now Westminster street.

Palmer Torrance was a former Foster man and once did business at the Rounds Tavern place rear what has since been called Hopkins' Crossing. The old Providence and Danielsonville stage coach used to stop here at one time and change harness, so you see Palmer Dorrance's place was a favorite stopping place for the farmers from Foster and surrounding towns. Well, it seems that the "other boy" had given old John, the big black horse too generous a feed of whole shelled corn and when a couple of kids woke up way down along in Waterman's woods old John was lying in the ditch. But several milk men happened along and got him onto his feet and we managed to get him to Providence and into Mr. Dorrance's barn where the usual remedies were applied, which consisted mostly of running him up and down the street and rubbing his stomach with a hoe handle. Did you ever try this remedy for the stomachache? It is great! If you survive the treatment you always get well. Old John didn't survive the treatment and never got back to Foster!

In those days Henry Davis kept a store at Hopkins Mills and Paris Hopkins kept a little store on the crossroad leading off them ain highway just westerly from the Rounds Tavern and it was from these two little stores that we picked up most of our berries. A great many bushels of berries were picked in Mr. Hopkins' pasture and brought into his store to sell by the neighbors, for by a sort of common consent and a mutual and neighborly understanding, everybody went hunting, fishing and huckleberrying where they pleased. Not so today! O, no! but necessity has compelled the changes.

I remember strolling through a pasture near our house in Foster one bright day in March and saw something red shining through the thin ice covering quite a spot of ground and on investigating found they were checkerberries. I had to wait a few days for the snow to go off and then I went out and picked ten quarts and a pint. They were beauties and I took them to Providence, anticipating a quick sale and at least $2, but was doomed to disappointment for nobody wanted checkerberries or even knew what they were, so I took them back as far as Clayville, where I sold them to Charles Jordan for $1.10. I thought at the time that Mr. Jordan bought them because he wanted them but now I know that it was a big and kindly heart that prompted this 250-pound man to help out the boy.

When Latan Hill kept store in Clayville I remember taking 12 bushels of huckleberries to Providence one morning and Mr. Hill took 11 bushels, making 23 bushels on that trip.

There is a lot I would like to write about Clayville and the people I used to know, also Fiskville, Jackson and Arkwright, for I have worked in all of these mills when a boy and young man, but with the passing of the years I find there is a passing of the eyesight, so don't dare promise—but perhaps.

HOW TO CARE FOR FERN

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: How are you all? I am busy, as usual, with flowers and planting the garden. Have enjoyed all the nice letters and especially those concerning flowers.

If Fidelis will cut off all worm infected parts and change to nice mellow soil and water her fern once a week with one-half cup of strong coffee diluted with one-half cup of water, she will find her fern will thrive. I had one a few weeks ago the same way and now you would not know it was the same plant.

Be True: Where are you and how are those wonderful flowers of yours? Those you gave me are fine.

Crimson Rambler: How are you enjoying yourself. Write and tell us of your trip.

E. L. M.: Did you plant your Marigold seed? I just planted mine.

I well remember trundle bed days for I used to sleep in one, too. If anyone would care for some Iris roots I have some I have taken up. Colors, orange and lemon and blue. I have 180 hills of dahlias and nearly 300 gladioli planted, beside other things. Wishing you all good luck with all your flowers, I wish Fidelis would let me know how her fern gets along.

Will ring off by wishing you all a happy summer and especially the sick and shut-ins.

SHOWER GREATLY ENJOYED

Social Corner Editor:

I want to thank Biddy for getting up a card shower for me. I did enjoy it all so very much as it helped to break the monotony of the long days and longer nights. I had over 50 cards and letters and I want to thank you all for the pleasure you gave me. I especially want to thank Evelyn Burr for her nice original poetry with the pretty cards and the cute card that was just to my taste from Eliza Jane, check and double check, and that is to be framed.

Diana: You well know how to sympathize with the sick as you have had so much yourself and I thank you for your kind letter and card.

Balsam Fir: You sent a whole shower of entertainment in your letter. As I cannot mention every one I again thank you for the messages of love and sympathy which I read over and over. I am some better. As ever.

BRAVE

BUSY J. E. T.

Social Corner All: I thank the sender of the Social calendar. So kind.

I must tell you what I am doing. I bought three sample dresses, size 56. After wash day I took seven inches out of the front and back and some from the bottom of dresses, made small tuck in center, both front and back, then ripped long strings and pressed flat. I sewed all pieces on to a thin blanket and they covered one side. I used even the chain stitch thread to finish.

There are good letters in the Corner page and soon it will be time for the outdoor Social Corner meetings.

We can get anything nowadays the world over by airships, etc. Twenty-five years ago we waited for peas, beans and other early things from the garden. Not so now. What next, I wonder. What's the use to worry and fret; all things come to those that wait and believe. I wonder about Joan and others. Have a sick one in the family a long time now.

Like the bees, flitter from one thing to another.

A DAY IN THE PARK

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I have noticed for the past two or three Saturdays that the Social Corner page hasn't been full of letters for some reason. I think we all like to see a full page, so I will try and send my bit.

Last Sunday was Mother's day and I attended church services at the Pleasant street Baptist church and listened to a very excellent sermon on a praying mother, and what it means to her family of children in their lives. I was well remembered by my children and friends with greetings. One gift, my oldest daughter sent me, was a book of patriotic poetry. One poem was written by one of our Social Corner sisters, Zulieka. That makes the book a bit more interesting to me.

Prairie Chicken: The description of the programme you had charge of was very amusing and interested me much as I was too far away to attend the meetings. I think of you all at these gatherings and when the postman brings my Courier everything is laid aside till I look over the Social Corner page. It is like a letter from home, there are so many good interesting letters.

I have been saving the Social Corner pages. I had quite a roll of them and took them to a shut-in and I hope she will get as much pleasure in reading them as I do. Not long ago it was announced over the radio that the second baby buffalo had been born in the Green Hill part, Worcester, and of course we wanted to see them. So my cousins and I took the trolley one beautiful afternoon for the park. We went to the end of the car line, then had to walk quite a distance to this park. I have corns on my feet, so had to walk slow but finally we came to the enclosure where we had a good view of these rare animals. These little buffaloes resemble a small calf. I think they stand higher. They are fawn color. One of them strolled some distance from its mother but I noticed she kept her eye on her baby. There are only nine old buffalo in the park now. Two have died since last year. There were a great many autos in the grounds and a cop to direct traffic. We got tired of walking so came down and took seats near the lake and watched the children throw food to the fish that are there in great numbers. It is very interesting to watch these fish trying to see which one will get the piece of food first. There was a beautiful view on the side hill. The grass was so green and the trees were in ful bloom with their varied colors it made a grand picture.

It was getting toward sundown and we wended our way to the trolley that bought us safely to the city. When we arrived home we felt we had a very pleasant outing. Am sending a recipe for ginger bread that my cousin makes often; it is very nice.

Ginger Bread: 1-2 cup sugar, 1-2 cup molasses, 1-4 cup shortening, 1-2 cup sour milk, 1 teaspoon of soda, 1 teaspoon ginger, 1 1-2 cups of flour, one egg beat well and stirred in last. Bake in a moderate oven.

My sympathy goes to all who lost their homes or property in the awful fires and may brighter days be in store for you is the sincere wish of

STRANGER IN THE CITY

ICELAND POPPIES.

Dear Social Corner: Are Iceland poppies biennial or perennial in habit? This question has been in my mind for months and I hope that I have now found the correct answer. It was two summers ago that I first tried to raise these charming flowers. In the seed catologues I read that these poppies will bloom the same season if planted early in the spring. So I bought some seed and sowed it. Next think I knew there was a fine growth of weeds where I had hoped to raise poppies. By lookin carefully I found a few tiny plants. There was only one thing to be done and that was to dig up the whole plot. Each trowel full of earth was examined and the poppies saved. These were successfully transplanted.

Late in the summer the poppies began to bloom and they kept this up until stopped by severe frosts. But I got my greatest enjoyment from them the following spring. I had mulched the plants so that they all survived the winter. They began blooming early in the season when flowers are scarce. As the buds were covered with fine brown hairs, I told the children that they were wearing fur coats. The crinkly, buttercup yellow blooms make nice bouquets if cut at the right time. The buds hang downward until just before opening. If cut when they straighten up the flowers will last well in winter. We like to put them with the dainty narcissus that is called Laurens Koster.

At one corner of my poppy bed I had a clump of a perennial from my grandmother's garden. She called it vervasin. I think it is a kind of veronica for its blue flowers look very much like some veronica that I have in my garden. These blue flowers looked lovely with the sunny poppies. The latter seemed to bloom themselves to death for in mid-summer they died. The children had kept the blooms picked so that few of them went to seed. I wondered if there would be any seedlings. A few days ago I was delighted to find several baby plants. So there will be Iceland poppies in my garden this summer. From this experience I conclude that they are biennial like foxgloves and Canterbury bells. After blooming they die and self sown seeds furnish plants for another year. Although I bought mixed colors, my poppies were all yellow. They come in white, pink and various shades of yellow and orange. Another year I plan to try some of these new hybrids.

GREETINGS FROM GLENDALE.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: It seems more than three weeks sncie I saw you all, and I want you to know I miss you and think of you often, especially Rebe, Ruthina, Blandina, Estelle, Maybug, Tempist and Idealine. I hope you'll think of me this summer when you are picnicing at the beach. I shall also miss the nice times at the Social Corner meetings.

I enjoyed meeting all the ladies and sincerely hope to see the mall again one of these days.

We are nicely located here in Glendale, Calif., where we had lived three years before going back east. California is all very beautiful and I have many lovely friends out here but there never will be any as dear to me as my good Rhode Island friends. Mr. Glendale also joins me in love and best wishes for your success. He also misses the ladies' splendid company. We are looking forward to hearing from them soon. Yours for prosperity.

GLENDALE

GREETINGS FROM CRIMSON RAMBLER

Dear Corner Friends: I have not forgotten any of you but as I have been away for quite a little while thought I would write you and let you know I have not missed a single one of the Corner pages.

Black Eyed Susie: I will try to write you before long. When one has sickness to attend to, one doesn't find time for much writing.

Elm Tree Bobbie: I had a funny dream about you. Thought I saw you in trouble. You seemed to be in water, fishing. How about it? Hope there was nothing to it. Will try and write you soon.

212: How are things progressing up your way? I will try and see you when I return to Connecticut.

Balsam Fir: I am nearer you than you have any idea. Call me on the phone; we have one in each house.

White Chrysanthemum: Well, well! So you are out hunting for skunks. Beware, for the law is on yet. I thought I smelled one last Saturday night. How about it? I am a good many miles away from you just now but hope to return to Connecticut before snow flies. Where do you intend to spend the Fourth of July?

Best wishes to all Corner friends.

THE DAYS OF THE PARASOL.

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: I was quite interested in a recent letter whitten by Lular Wylie regarding house cleaning and the many things we find accumulated in the attic. True it is, there are too many things that are all of no present or future value that are stored away with the thought that possibly they may be used again sometime.

When Lular referred to an old newspaper having an adv. for a bargain sale in parasols, I had to smile, for we do not see those kind of ads. in the up-to-date newspapers. But in those days when parasols were in their prime they certainly were a necessary convenience.

Before the days of trolley cars, we had to do more walking than we do now, consequently it was no joke to walk in the hot sun a mile or two, or more, without some protection from the heat and glare of the sun's rays. In their day the parasol had its vanity like everything else. Some were cheap and plain and others expensive and pretty. Different material was used, cotton, plain colors, figured and striped. I think the most common was plain black silk, but frequently dark colors were used. Many of the prettiest parasols had fringe or a silk ruffle all around the edge, sometimes a lace ruffle. The handle of the parasol was quite a feature in those days. Some of them were fancy carved wood and others were inlaid with bits of pearl. Often there was an eyelet through the handle near the end and anarrow silk ribbon drawn through and tied with bow knot making a loop by which we could suspend from the wrist and very conveniently carry the parasol when closed and not in use as a sunshade. There was a difference in the position of holding the parasol according to the direction of the sun; if directly over head, it was carried upright, but if the sun was back of us, then it rested on, usually, the right shoulder and was tilted slightly backwards.

In looking our articles over and among old pictures of girl friends, we may find some tin-types that will varify this attitude. I have some of myself, also of others taken in the years of our teens. Before the days of trolley or recent automobile the young man who could not afford to take his best girl out for a carriage ride did the next best; invited her to go out for a "walk," according to the season of the year and time of day and the parasol was needed. Of course it was courtesy for the young man to carry the sun protector. Sometimes it was done very carefully and dignified and again it was rather awkward, but in either event the couple had to walk rather close together to prevent the girl's hat from getting a hit from a rib or the edge of the parasol.

For several years past and at present, the automobile is responsible for the dismissal of the convenient parasol, but to us, who once enjoyed those things in their day, they remain a memory.

Kind wishes to all.

JENNIE (Club 1).

RESPONSIBILITY FOR FIRES

Dear Editor: Some time ago Capricon mentioned in her letter something of the progress of the American Indian. I read an interesting item lately by J. W. Fraser who tells us of some men who were fighting flames (brush fires) to save the little town of Rossaburg, Washington. Some 3,000 acres of timber land had been destroyed; whole farms, grain fields and livestock had been burned to a cinder. Hundreds of exhausted men fell back and at this juncture, an old and withered Indian approached one of the fire-fighting group. He stood erect with arms folded and requested to be shot. Little attention was paid to him until he became insistent. He pleaded to die. Then the reason for his strange request became known. He was an ancient brave of the Kootenai tribe, and lived a nomadic life beside his camp fire in the forests. One of his camp fires had started this disasterous conflagration. According to the customs of his tribe, such careless conduct was unbecoming a warrior. The punishment was death.

White men failed to recognize the red man's tribal law, and put him to work fighting flames, instead of killing him.

Betsy Bobbet: What was the name of the lily you wanted? I happened to read an item about lilies, West of Zanzibar, in a valley where they grew it is uninhabitable because of a huge and beautiful variety of arum lily which flourishes there. The individual blossoms are the size of an elephant's ear, and the valley is so thickly covered with them that no other vegetation can be seen when they are in flower. The perfume is so overpowering that no living thing can enter the valley and live. An aviator, flying 8,000 feet above the valley found the perfume strong at that altitude; descending to 2,000 feet to observe the great masses of lilies, he was stifled and almost fainted.

So I am glad that I live in New England and have only harmless varieties.

L. T. H.: So glad to hear of your lovely May basket and party. Twelve or more for a chicken dinner is no joke.

Aunt Jerusha: Raising any turkeys this year? I have 30 little ducklings. Where is Calamity Jane?

Successful Club 4 Meeting

Will you allow me to add a postscript to my letter to say that I attended meeting of Club 4 today in East Killingly through the kindness of Bay State who conveyed Artificial Flowers and myself in her car. We enjoyed the ride through country roads and came to a stop when we saw the yellow bow tacked to a pole near the meeting place. The hostess and her aides were on deck to welcome us all and between 40 and 50 were present. The club rooms are tastefully decorated with flags, flowered cretonne and crepe paper streamers. The tables looked lovely decorated with May baskets filled with yellow paper roses and tulips. The ladies had spared no pains in giving us a bountiful repast of warm baked dishes, as well as salads of all sorts, pies, cake, cookies and coffee.

A shadow of sadness came to each one of us as we learned of the death of one of our members, Mrs. Grace Sheffield, pen name Trixy, has passed from our midst. Our sympathy goes out to her family. We shall miss the dear one.

Club 4 continued the program after an hour's social chat, with a song by Butterfly and her friend. Then two songs by all present, then roll call, each responding with something in the way of reading, recitation or song. A Psalm was read by Skinny and Lord's Prayer by all in memory of Trixy. Bug accompanied on piano and all sang "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," thus bringing to a close a very pleasant and successful meeting of Club 4.

ARIES.

ARE WE NEGLECTING OUR CORNER DUTY?

Dear Social Corner Folks: You have not heard from me since I sent in the notice of our anniversary meeting in March. It was very gratifying to the committee in charge to have 80 members and guests respond to the invitation and we appreciated the abundance of good food that was brought for the dinner. Club No. 4 has never yet lacked in that respect. We are pleased to know that a number of those who came as guests were favorably enough impressed to become members and one of them who has just the right place for a Social Corner picnic told me a few days ago that she may invite us to her home in the early fall.

We are having very few letters in proportion to our membership. In our eagerness to attend the social events of the Corner, I fear we neglect to do our duty in keeping the page filled on Saturday. As Calla Lily says "write something" and I am going to act upon her suggestion and pass along a few hints and some receipts that sound good to me.

Vegetable hints: There are three things to remember when cooking vegetables. First, use as little water as possible. Second, do not cook too long. Third, season with a little sugar to bring out the natural flavor. This was long ago discovered by European cooks to make the difference between vegetables that are flat and those that are a gastronomic treat. In warm weather, sugar helps to supply the needed energy.

Baked carrot loaf: Scrape carrots and boil until tender. Hash, and to a pint of the pulp, add two well beaten eggs, a half teaspoon salt, a quarter teaspoon pepper, one tablespoon sugar and a quarter cup of cream. Pour into a buttered mold, stand in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven until firm. Turn out on a platter and surround with peas, or serve with a white sauce.

Carrot-and-pea delight: Boil two cups cubed carrots until tender. Combine with one cup of cooked peas. Make a sauce of three tablespoons flour, three tablespoons butter, one and a half cups milk, two teaspoons sugar, one half teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper. Add the cooked carrots and peas, reheat and serve hot.

PRIMROSE.

ADDING TO THE GARDEN

Dear Social Corner Members: Since I wrote to you last time, my garden has another addition. A barrel we were using at the hotbeds to hold water proved to be too leaky to give good service so I took it and sawed it in half and rolled it up to the end of my garden. It was quite a task to dig a hole large enough to hold it, but I succeeded at last, though it seemed there could not be any more stones in the same amount of space in the whole state. I put a layer of manure in the bottom, a heavy layer of loam and a two-inch layer of pebbles. Pebbles are supposed to keep the water from roiling the mud in the bottom but these don't work very well. I wonder how I can keep the water clear?

Once I had the pool made I had to get some flowers to make it look more natural so I went to the swamp for violets. I feared that they might wilt but they did not seem to mind being taken up in the least. Probably this was because I took up such a large clump of earth with each one of them. They looked so well, I decided to try some lady's slippers also and there are now six of them nodding at their reflections in the water. Three water lilies from the pond completed my planting for the present, but I shall have to find other plants to take their places when they are through blooming.

The columbines are beginning to bloom and soon the bed will be attracting the hummingbirds. They have come late this year and we have not seen them about very much but the honied blooms will bring them to the garden. I have one or two of the long-spurred aquilega which have not blomed for me before, but which are budded now and I am anxious to see them open.

PERNICKETY.

THAT OLD FELT HAT.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Don't throw away that old felt hat!

Some say, "What isn't in the head must be in the feet."

Out of that old felt hat you can cut the finest kind of insoles for your shoes. How comfy for cold feet! Or you can resole those old bedroom slippers with soles cut from it. Or fashion a lovely pair of moccasins for the small one of the family.

You can cut button-like pieces from the hat and glue them to the bottom of chair legs and so keep your polished floors or linoleum from being scratched. This deadens noise too. And what noise kiddies can make scraping chairs across the floor.

That old hat will also make the most serviceable kind of lampwicks or wicks for oil-burners of any kind. Also pieces of the felt can be glued to the bottom of lamps, vases, or other objects which are to stand on polished surfaces. And a handy sized block of wood covered with a piece of the hat makes a fine shoe brush.

IRVA LYNN.

INTERESTED IN CORNER

Dear Social Corner Friends: I have been a member only a few months, but I read in last week's paper of Mrs. Flagg's illness in Danielson and I am sure a large number of old members will be glad to send her a card and word of greeting. Am glad she is getting stronger. Sisters were inquiring for her at the April meeting in Putnam.

I am in great hopes of attending the Social club meeting at East Killingly, May 22. All of the sisters are very busy this time of year cleaning house. I do enjoy reading the poetry printed each week and I was sorry when the daily Lenten services and daily prayer came to an end for this year. Hope all sick members and shut-ins are thought of today.

THE FARMER BOYS OF THE SIXTIES

Dear Social Corner Editor and Readers: The boy on the farm in my younger days had pleasures that were as eagerly looked forward to and enjoyed, as much as the young do today with the recently created amusements and pastimes.

The farm boy had no set hours for labor, whether a boy was on his home farm or was hired out to a neighbor farmer for a certain time at a given price for six or seven months, from April first.

The winter term at the "old red school house" closed the middle of March after a four months' term, with but one vacation; that from Wednesday afternoon before Thanksgiving until the following Monday. Every other week was a six-day session. When the five-day session came, Saturday saw the boy as soon as chores were done and breakfast eaten (at seven or before) on his way with his father to the woods to chop, or with team to draw wood to the door, for the year's supply.

A pile as large as a house confronted him at the close of the four months' term of school. You could hear the whack of the ax and see the flying chips from early morn until late afternoon as the boy prepared the wood to be piled under cover for use as the saying went, "until wood came again."

Father saw to it that good quantity was thrown into the wood shed to be piled in regular order, should a rainy day come. He managed to find something to do on such occasions.

April on the farm was a busy month. Chores done, and away you go with oxen and cart to haul fertilizer to the planting ground, while another team was hitched to the plow that boy No. 2 was to chase around a four-acre field. Whether stoney or smooth, the stunt was to plow it in four days. Then came planting of various crops; no time for play in those busy days.

"It looked like rain this evening as we finished the day's work. The sun sank to rest in the west, mid a bank of dark clouds.

"Father, do you think it will rain tomorrow? If it does, can brother and I go fishing?" He takes off his straw hat, scratches his head, while we listen for an answer.

"I was going to have you two shell some corn should it rain and make up a grist to take to "Uncle Tom's" mill, but as you have worked pretty well since school closed, I'll let you go; hope you'll have good luck."

Before dark we had dug a nice box of worms for bait. The next thing was to look up our fishing tackle that was put aside from last year's fishing. "Mother, where are our fish poles that we had last year?"

"O, when I slicked up the attic this spring, I put them back under the eaves and back of the old red chest, that the warming pan lies on. Don't disturb anything in the chest. I have put your grandfather's sword that he carried in the Revolutionary war, in there, with his shoe and knee buckles, an this waistcoat, that I have managed to save from the moths all these years. Yes, and your father's brass flint lock pistols that he carried when he rode in the troop, long before I knew him, are there, with his military coat and cavalry hat, with the yellow lamb's tail pom pon still on it; they are treasures."

After moving the old spinning wheel and other small wheels, swifts and reel, that stood in back of the old hand loom, we found our white birch fishing poles. A family of house wasps had built their nest, attached to the poles, but we got them away without getting stung. Our fish lines and hooks were where we put them the season before, after we caught a pickerel weighing 2 1-2 pounds.

As we awoke the next morning, we heard the patter of the rain on the roof. With a yawn, we both exclaimed, "Going to be a good day for fishing." We were out of bed in an instant, not waiting to be called.

They are most often due to faulty hygiene. Eat sparingly of meat, but [illegible]

Breakfast eaten, and away we go to the Appoquaug at Ford Ned, and then up stream to the Safford pond where we always found good fishing and plenty of various kinds to catch. By mid afternoon, wet and hungry, we had filled our basket with a good variety of fish; one trout weighing one and a half pounds.

My, but didn't that boiled dinner smell and taste good, that mother was placing on the table soon after our erturn. There were occasional days of rain and fishing between planting and haying.

May was a busy month; days were long in the field; O, yes, it was the month for May basket hanging and not a fun few nights found us on the way to hang a basket to some neighbor boy or girl. A poor and worth family were objects of pity and sympathy. The father of a family of a mother with five children had answered President Lincoln's call for troops, was at the front, a target for rebel bullets. Thirteen dollars per month (unless sooner shot) didn't go far toward feeding the hungry mouths of a wife and five young children.

The heart of my mother was touched with pity. She fited out a basket of large proportions, liberally filled with a good fat chicken, a large apple pie, bread, cake, doughnuts, a nice lump of butter, and a generous piece of cheese and topped out the basket with some nice apples. As soon as dark came we were despatched with the basket and told to place it on the door step, give a loud rap, and then run for home. A few days after, a note came to my mother, thanking her most heartily for the donation. The secret was out. Who was responsible for the May basket? In her haste to prepare the basket she neglected to remove the family address from the paper, "Norwich Courier," that lined the basket. Other donations followed from time to time, the neighbors joining.

June saw no let up from being busy. Long before the sun appeared over the woods to the east, we hear the voice of father calling from the foot of the chamber stairs, "Come boys, it's time you were up. It's past daylight." Soon we are out of bed, and on our way down stairs, half asleep, adjusting the suspenders of the blue dennim overalls, homemade. A cotton shirt, overalls and a 25 cent palm leaf hat made the warm weather outfit of clothing.

My straw hat was usually found in the morning, hanging on the damper handle to the old brick oven.

Our noonings were usually short; their length depended upon whether father laid his hat down by his side when he seated at the dinner table, or left it in the sitting room. If in the latter place, we knew he was going to read and nod for a while over the weekly paper. All signs being favorable, after a hasty dinner, we were soon on our way to the old swimming hole, near Ford Ned. A hasty dip in the cool water, then we are back on time to catch up with father before he gets to the field.

After the glorious Fourth of July and the picnic in Captain Watter's grove at Gay Head, where on that memorable day was gathered together neighbors and friends from miles away, to enjoy dancing, singing, drinking ping lemonade, eating ice cream, cake and other sweet meats, while seated on rude benches, stumps and the ground. The insect, of the genus, "Formica," the ant or emmet, made free to sample your sweet meats, bathe in your lemonade, or play tag by running over any part of your flesh most openly exposed, or elsewhere. No more play, for July is here. Father has on the morning of the Fourth, sown the four acres of buckwheat and we are to harrow and bush it in, before we can fire off our pack of fire crackers or go to the picnic. The job is done. We don our "best bib and tucker" and away we go as happy as one can imagine. The morning after, the old grindstone is brought into use. The hand sythe is taken from the tool house and ground to a razor edge. But didn't father bear down, as we turned the stone lubricated with a thick fat bacon rind!

Mid puffs and sweat the job is done and with whetstone and rifle in hand, we are away to the meadow to swing the sythe until dinner time, after which the hand rake was brought into use for two or more hours to make the long windrows of sweet smelling hay. Very few, if any, mowing machines or horserakes were in use at this time. Man and main strength was the power behind the sythe and rake, while the horse stamped flies in the stall, and the dependable oxen chewed their cud under the shade tree, until the faithful shepherd dog drove them to the yard to be yoked to draw the well cured hay to the barn.

Haying finished other duties took our time until the beckoning ripe grain called for the sickle, corn-knife and cradle.

Harvesting done. If a husking bee was in order, as it usually was, the corn was drawn together and the boys and girls for miles around were invited to come and see how many red ears could be found. After which a toothsome and satisfying lunch was served. Dancing for a few hours in the old big kitchen was the happy finish of an enjoyable night of anold time custom.

The small grains were threshed by the old hand flail. The grain now lies in a heap on the barn floor; the winnowing mill is brought into use; and not to interfere with daylight work, the winnowing was done at night after supper. By the light of the old tin lantern, a compiete counterpart of the one Robert Newman placed in the steeple of the old North church that flashed the signal for Paul Revere's memorable ride to warn the citizens of the coming of the British.

Until the hour of nine, one could hear the whir and rattle of the mill as it seperated the grain fro mthe chaff.

Harvesting the root crops was soon done; the golden pumpkins that thickly dotted the corn fild were stored away, safe from freezing and now the season's work was practically done.

All crops were bountiful and safely stored away for the coming winter. All husband men had occasion to celebrate the Thanksgiving that was soon to be proclaimed; to praise the All Supreme Being for good health, prosperity and happiness.

This does not apply to one particular family of farmers, for they all were within a radius of several miles, prosperous, painstaking, honest and substantial citizens. The middle of November is here and the Monday nearest the middle of the month we will be on our way to the old red school house, with books in hand and dinner basket, well filled with mother's best cookery. Weren't we proud of the pair of red-topped boots that father brought from Norwich the Saturday before; and didn't we feel proud and like giving dear mother a hug and kiss for that nice suit of warm woolen clothes, that she had made from the cloth woven and finished in Deacon Cory's factory in Lebanon!

During one of our recent dreary days I was seated in my easy chair, reading the general news in The Bulletin, when I, in the keeping of the dreamy day, fell into a doze and the paper dropped into my lap. Don't think for a moment that I was reading the Social Corner page, or a letter of "Dad" Shaw's (the Edgar Guest of prose), for no one would ever pass into dreamland while reading the Corner letters or "Dad's" interesting articles.

Yes, I passed into a sleeping vision, not for long, I am sure, for on the swift wings of thought the scenes and doings of the farmer boy of the '60's passed through my subconscious mind, vividly bringing back those happy care-free days.

We thought the labor hard and exacting some times, but happy days just the same, and who of us wouldn't wish them back?

Hard, faithful service never hurt anyone. They live to a ripe ol dage and I am here to tell the story.

QUID NUNC

CORNER CLUB SISTERS AT THE MEETING

Dear Social Corner: Throughout the year certain things have come up which have not been according to the rules of the Corner and I am going to speak of, or rather write about, them here, and see if, when the September meetings open, it can't be overcome. If not, other changes will be made by those faithful few who have carried on this work ever since the club was founded.

First—if those who bring a 10 cent pan of rolls, a small bottle of olives or relish, think they are doing their part, it's time they chipped in and did better. How would you, who bring the olives, like to make a dinner out of a roll and relish? Poor dinner, eh? Well, whoever this fits, why not do better hereafter? We have one who tries to get her dinner for just the 15 cents. I have spoken to her twice about it. She does not belong to Club No. 2 and a pan of rolls is not enough. Don't forget, we know who gives and who doesn't. This has continued throughout the year's dinners. I am not writing this just for myself, but you all know every complaint comes to me, and as the Corner truck horse, for I have to carry the whole load, it is up to me to make a big noise about it.

Next—I want to kindly ask each who promises either coffee, beans, butter, salads, or the heavy food, won't you kindly see we have it, as we surely depend on it. If the food isn't there you surely can't have it. Those who promise sometimes think, "Well, they will have enough and mine can slide by this time." No, it isn't so, so please carry out your dinner promises, please.

Now I also want to say something about hostesses. Why do you able bodied members sit back and let the same ones serve over and over again? It isn't right. For myself, I am on the floor from start to finish. I'm not 18 years old. Like the other hostesses, I have a family and home to keep clean and dusted and we faithful ones think its time we held back and let others do it and see and visit with the sisters who enjoy themselves and get a good dinner for a few cents. Do you relly think this is right? Think it over and report at the last indoor meeting of Club No. 2.

Unless things change there are only three things to do: First, have box lunches, then no one works; second, go and tell this or that one we would like her to serve; third, or give up entirely, for it has come to a pass where each must take her turn and promptly respond by giving substantial food each month.

Think this over, Club members. We have enough of Club 2 to work and it was surely a terrible mistake that Club 2 refused to put the June 10th dinner on and to have two members of Club 5 come forward and do your work. I want to say I don't want any hard feelings about this letter. It's the hostess's yearly complaint on this subject. Those who the coat fits should put it on and wear it and when you have done your rightful duty take it off and hang it outside of the Buckingham Memorial like those can who do their duty in food and work for Club No. 2. Trusting you will take this kindly as I have. Charity for all and malice toward none. Faithfully,

REGRETS E. L. M.'S RETIREMENT AS SECRETARY

Dear Corner Editor and Sisters: I attended the meeting of Club No. 4 on Tuesday and Rebe and her helpers gave us a delicious dinner and Ravena had a program of interesting readings and contests. We were glad to see B. Natural, who has been absent for a long time owing to ill health and also H. E. N., who has also been ill. We were all very sorry to hear E. L. M. say she was unable to be secretary any longer and hope she will change her mind before another meeting. The members might have made it much pleasanter for her by offering to be hostesses instead of making her beg some one to take it each month (almost on bended knees). I am afraid it will be hard work to get anyone to take the office unless some arrangement is made by which the hostess is chosen. As one visitor from Norwich said: "It is not asking much, just once in ten months."

It is nice today after the cold damp weather. We needed rain but I like to have it come and get it over with. The apple blossoms are gone with the exception of some very old Chesbrook Russet trees. These old trees are wonderful when in bloom. The buds are deep pink and grow lighter when full bloom but never fade to real white. They blossom full every year but seem to think their work is done then, as there isn't a half dozen apples on the four trees. I expect they need some spray mixture but the heart of them is rotted and every wind storm we expect to see them fall. The Balm o' Gilead's are beginning to shed their cotton and we will son be sneezing. It is like the silk from milkweed pods, only the fibres are much shorter. The mulberry tree is just putting forth its leaves, a bit early this year. Sometimes it is the first of June before it starts. And the horse-chestnuts, looking like a Christmas tree with candles on are in full bloom. We did have four but one has succumbed to blight and no telling how soon the rest will go, too. It died in sections, each year a little more dead wood showing, until last year it was all gone. Lilacs will be gone before Memorial day this year. It will seem funny not to see them in the cemeteries.

We have the most gorgeous orioles this year. They must be nesting in the orchard and two pairs of cat-birds are also on the edge of the woods. Plenty of crows are keeping their eye on the corn fields and I don't dare write the words to express my feelings about the starlings. They have destroyed a nest of chick-a-dees that were in the cornice of the house. They threw the three babies out on the ground where we found them but they were all dead. That is three birds they have driven out around our house. The others were a blue-bird and a martin.

I will have to finish cleaning house now as I have no excuse to put it off. We have had electric lights installed and while that work was going on I had a very good excuse but now they are all finished and still I haven't done any more cleaning. And, my goodness, how the cob webs show up when those lights are on!

I had missed Antenna's letters and wondered what was wrong.

More letters, please, the Corner page is looking skimpy again. It doesn't take but a few minutes to write and I'm sure we would all enjoy the letters.

HOME AGAIN AND BUSY

Dear Editor and Cornerites: Oh, yes, glad to be home again and feeling fine, but I have so much cleaning to do I can only say howdy! this time and hope to be able to write a long letter soon.

Fidelis: Yes, I was in the big town of Chicago for the last few days of the warm weather. I changed on the way home and I have been cold ever since but it will soon be warm again.

I will tell you more about the land of sunshine when my work is done. But the thing of beauty and joy forever that I enjoyed the most was the "singing tower" and bird sanctuary with scarlet flamingos and nightingales as well as everything in the flower line. I shall never forget the glorious bells. It doesn't seem as if a human mind could have developed such a beautiful thing as the tower.

Now sisters, I'm hoping to have you all at a picnic before it gets too warm. I have a shady place all green and cool. I want to meet the new writers as well as the old.

ENJOYS BEING OUTDOORS

Dear Social Corner Sisters: What beautiful weather we are having. I am enjoying three days off from my work and it's so good to get outdoors. The different kind of fruit trees were just loaded with blossoms and the flowers are just lovely this spring. Different ones have given me lots of hardy plans this spring and I'll surely enjoy them when they are in bloom.

E. Pluribus Unum: Yes, you guessed right. That's one me. But who are you? Please give me a clue.

We like this recipe and it's very rich so perhaps some of the sisters would like it.

Nut and Raisin Roll: 2 1-2 cups flour, 2-3 cup milk, 1-2 cup sugar, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 cup raisins, chopped nuts, pinch salt, 5 tablespoons shortening.

Mix above ingredients and knead slightly. Roll out, spread on melted butter, cinnamon, nut meats, raisins and little sugar on top. Roll like jelly roll and bake.

Fire-Fly: The location is all right but there are several of us members who live near each other so who is who?

WHITE CHRYSANTHEMUM.

FORGETTING

Dear Social Corner Friends: I have just been reading a poem about forgetting. Little things in life we might forget, or say I never thought of it, or it has slipped my mind, but how often when in trouble one will say, "Forget it." I have had it said to me. But could I forget it? Oh, no. But one can make the best of it, even if it does hurt.

I am glad the Gold Star mothers are able to go to France where their sons gave their lives. That is one thing that can't be forgotten. We would like to forget the bad things that happen. I am going to send the poem I have just read.

Farmers will be glad to have this rain. "Cold wet May a barn full of hay." Yours for the Corner.

ROSALIND

JOINS THE CORNER.

Dear Social Corner Editor: I have attended the Social Corner meetings several times and have enjoyed them very much. Would like to join the Corner and Club No. 2 and will take for my pen name

COMFORTABLE AND WELL SUSTAINED RALLY IN STOCK MARKET YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, May 23—(AP)—The stock market made a comfortable rally today. Higher tendencies that had developed in yesterday's late trading were expanded into a modest buying movement which, if not particularly aggressive, was nevertheless sustained, forcing a covering of short commitments and encouraging the placement of numerous lines on the long side.

The upward move carried the leaders one to five points net higher, and there were larger gains in less active issues. Final prices were close to the highest of the day, for profit-taking on the advance was only moderate and the market finished strong.

The existence of an oversold condition, as the result of the persistent professional liquidation earlier in the week, favored a technical recovery but steady investment buying as well as pool accumulation of prominent issues was influential in determining the course of prices. Utilities and industrials displayed the most noticeable strength. American Telephone, selling without the rights, showed a maximum gain of six points and closed 5 1-8 higher. Electric Power and Light, North American, Public Service of New Jersey, Columbia Gas, Consolidated Gas, American Can, U. S. Steel, New York Central, Johns Manville, Radio and General Electric rallied about 2. The American Tobacco issues soared 5 points, Westinghouse Electric nearly 5, Calumet and Arizona 2 3-4, Worthington Pump 3 1-2 and Eastman Kodak 4. Case was up 12 1-2 on the day and Diamond Match 9 1-4.

News developments were insignificant. Although Dun's found that "indications of betterment are more distinct in some instances," they were "not representative of a broad and decisive revival and sentiment is more than usually sensitive to varying conditions."

Bradstreet's found that aside from slight further ease in the general level of lines, especially in iron and steel and farm products affected by speculation, "there are strikingly few changes to be observed in the general trade and industrial field."

Reports from the Santa Fe Springs oil field conveyed a hope that conferences on the curtailment program had given the situation a more favorable turn and that one of the principal objectors to the restriction agreement might be brought into line. Most of the operators were said to be observing the agreement, and the advices added that details for signing the six months output restriction pact had been arranged.

Strength of New York Central was coincident with announcement that the road had acquired a 4.6 per cent interest in Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, which is controlled by interests close to Central. Lackawanna is assigned to the Chesapeake and Ohio-Nickel Plate system in the interstate commerce commission's consolidation plan. New York Central has been interested for some time in the possibility of acquiring a shorter route to the west, thereby relieving its main line.

The commodity markets eased. Wheat and corn sold off more than a cent, while cotton was 5 to 10 points lower in a steady close. Sugar was off slightly.

Foreign exchanges softened slightly. The Spanish peseta, up 5 points, was an exception to the general trend of the European rates. Sterling cables sagged 3-32.

Credit conditions remained stationary. Call money was in supply at 3 per cent and the undertone of time funds eased, although there was no change in the rates.

WASHINGTON, May 23—(AP)—Treasury receipts for May 21 were $8,353,819.16; expenditures $5,587,929.70; balance $116,910,753.71.

Installment buying is standing the test of the present business depression, according to Pratt E. Tracey, president of the Airway Electric Appliance corporation. He said the corporation's records showed that out of 100,000 retail accounts the number delinquent in payment at the end of March constituted only a 3.2 per cent over a year ago.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, May 23—(AP)—The curb market broke out of its narrow trading range with a decided upturn today, centering in a handful of the utility shares. Niagara Hudson was a dominant feature, displacing such recent leaders as Electric Bond and Share, and United Light A. Trading, however, showed little acceleration, the day's turnover falling short of 700,000 shares.

Operations for the advance were resumed on the theory that the market had reached an oversold position, and was due for an upturn, on technical grounds alone if for no other reason. The activity in Niagara Hudson was evidently in response to expectations of early consummation of a close alignment with Consolidated Gas of New York. Floyd L. Carlyle, chairman, is expected to be placed on the Consolidated Gas board at the meeting next week.

Niagara Hudson sold 2 1-2 points to 23 1-4, less than a point from its 1930 record, and closed near the top. St. Regis and Eastern States Power were carried up along with it. A buoyant feature was Central Public Service new, which shot up more than six points to a new high about 40. American Commonwealth's B also reached new high ground. Among the more volatile issues, Commonwealth Edison and Duke Power each gained about 9 points. Electric Bond and Share, American Superpower, and United Light A gained nearly a point each.

The industrials, on the whole, were neglected. Deere rallied 4 points, then lost its gain. The Pacific Coast Biscuit issues were again firm, selling up moderately to new peak prices. Fokker Aircraft was in fair demand, and the Van Camp Packing issues, recent weak features, rallied substantially.

Oil and Natural Gas stocks moved in narrow ranges.

Cities Service was fairly active, but moved up only a fraction. Gulf and Cosden each gained more than a point.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, May 23—(AP)—Convertible bonds dominated the trading on the New York Stock exchange today in a session which in contrast with the recent dullness was spirited. The demand for the stock privilege issues, particularly the five most active bonds, brought the total volume to a good figure, despite the fact that many bond men were out of town for their annual field day.

Investment issues showed an inclination to go somewhere, but by the close only a few had advanced appreciably. The general tone of the market, however, was satisfactory. Moderate demand for rails firmed prices during the earlier hours but many yielded ground later to finish steady or only slightly changed.

This was the last day which the American Telephone 4 1-2s could be converted into common stock carrying rights and the bond's performance was sensational. Sagging 3 points at the start, it rebounded 9 to end the day 6 points above yesterday's close. Offices of the company were designed by bond holders anxious to make the exchange for stock and only a small proportion of the original $219,000,000 issue remained unconverted at the close of business.

Philadelphia, Reading Coal and Iron 6s, were heavily in demand and rose nearly two points to a new high for the second day in succession. General Theatres 6s of 44 appreciated 3 1-2 points and a half dozen other issues gained moderately.

There was fair activity in the foreign list and prices were steady to firm. European and South American governments were most in demand. Bolivian 7s gained 1 7-8 and Brazil 6 1-2s 1 1-4. Japanese 5 1-2s eased in an active market. French 7s gained a fraction.

United States governments were quiet. Liberty 4th, 4 1-2s, registered, touched a new high. Most of the group are close to the high level of the year.

The Rock Island railway announced that virtually all of the $32,228,000 issue of 30 year 4 1-2 per cent convertibles had been subscribed for stockholders.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, May 23—(AP)—Reports of unusually favorable prospects for the United States 1930 spring wheat crop had a bearish effect on wheat values today. The outlook for the Canadian crop also was reported as relatively auspicious, and selling was further promoted by non-fulfillment of predictions of wide-spread frosts last night. Forecasts of frost tonight in Kansas, Nebraska and the northwest were virtually ignored.

Closing quotations on wheat were weak, [illegible] a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1 1-4a [illegible] down, oats [illegible] off, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 5c.

Provisions were somewhat firmer as a result of upturns in the value of hogs.

NEW YORK, May 23.—(AP)—Members of the National Raw Silk exchange have voted to take a double holiday, May 30-31.

Oscar R. Grab, president of the Normandie National Securities corporation, says a nation-wide survey made by his organization shows an upward trend generally in business conditions. He said present conditions were found "not particularly favorable" in Florida, West Virginia and Michigan.

WILLINGTON

Willington Girl Reserves gave a pleasing entertainment Friday evening which included songs, stunts, a flower song charmingly illustrated, campfire scene and camping song. The deeper meaning of the Girl Reserve organization was shown by the dramatic presentation of "Learning the Code." A play, a selection from Louisa M. UNION

Memorial day will be observed at Union Center as for many years. Many friends and former residents return to town to spend a whole or a part of day—not just a visit but to join in the exercises. Flowers are to be left at the town hall in the morning. It is the custom of the school children to gather wild flowers, but these children also help in the exercises and any flowers, either wild or cultivated, that any one will bring will be a real help. The march to the cemeteries will start from the hall at 11 o'clock (daylight time). Frank's junior band will furnish music for the day. Lunch at noon will be on the basket picnic plan as usual. The exercises in the church will open at 1 o'clock (daylight time). Pupils from the schools will have recitations and songs. The band will take part and an address will be given by Rev. William Bragg.

Through the efforts of Miss Marguerite Miel, school nurse, and Miss Helen J. Hutchins, teacher of Red school, a group of children from this town went to Stafford Springs last week and received their first treatment for immunization from diphtheria.

Some interesting new books, a gift from the state, have been added to the Union Free Public library recently. The library will be open Memorial day. A book recently added will be of special interest locally, not only for its intrinsic worth, but because one of the authors usually spends his summers here and has many friends in town. The book was written by two friends, Eric Hodgins and F. Alexander Magoun. "Sky High, A Story of Aviation" was published last November. It is filled with illustrations and tells the thrilling story of aviation from the time, centuries ago, when men dreamed of flying and made many attempts to emulate the birds of the air, to the time the book was published last fall.

Miss Esther Moore, with friends from Springfield, Mass., was a guest at the Moor homestead at Massapaug Sunday.

SIXTH NIGHT OF NORWICH BROADCAST KEEPS INTEREST OF RADIO AUDIENCE

Hundreds of radios in Norwich and a countless number outside the city were tuned in Friday night for the sixth of the Norwich broadcasts over Station WTIC.

As heard at the Plaut-Cadden company on Main street, where each week the public has the pleasure of listening to the story of Norwich, it came in very satisfactorily Friday night and brought to the listening audience much worth-while information about Norwich, past and present.

In the sign-off sentences, it was announced that the Thermos Bottle given as a prize for the one writing in from the longest distance went to Miss Arlene Horton of Halifax, Nova Scotia.

This is the way the broadcast was given:

ANNOUNCER: The program for the following half-hour, ladies and gentlemen, is dedicated to the Rose of New England, the city of Norwich, Connecticut, and is sponsored by the Merchants Bureau of the chamber of commerce.

The Merchants bureau wishes to make this suggestion for your summer tour through Connecticut: Plan your route to include the city of Norwich. Excellent state highways extend in all directions. If you come to Norwich first, let us suggest that you take the Military highway down to New London, and return on the new cement highway on the west bank of the Thames river.

The Military highway follows closely the east bank of the river most of the way. It carries you past the Pines, Poquetanuck Cove, Fort Decatur, Gales Ferry, the submarine base and Groton monument. At New London, you are within easy motoring distance of beautiful country along Long Island Sound, Mystic, West Mystic and Stonington.

Coming back on the west side of the river, you will pass the grounds of the Connecticut College for Women, through Waterford and Montville, pass over the high Mohegan hills, near to which is the largest single boulder in New England, Cochegun rock. On this road, within a short distance of the city of Norwich, you will come to the Norwich inn. Perhaps you may find, as we find this evening, the old Doctor and his friend, the old Schoolmaster, at ease on the porch, idling an hour of a glorious Connecticut day in breathing life into the past.

SCHOOLMASTER: Have we mentioned yet the first white man in Norwich? I can't recall it.

DOCTOR: I don't know who he might have been. Mason was likely up the river this far. But the first white man to make any extended residence in this section was Jonathan Brewster, a trader.

SCHOOLMASTER: At the site of Norwich?

DOCTOR: I said in this section! Nine or ten years before Norwich was founded, Brewster was given a large tract of land as a bonus to establish a trading post near the mouth of the Poquetanuck creek. The point of land formed by the junction of the creek with the Thames river is still called Brewster's Neck.

SCHOOLMASTER: That must have been around 1650 or 51.

DOCTOR: 1650, according to the records. He opened up for business without a license. When he applied later to the authorities for a license, they raised their eyebrows in horror, but they gave him permission to trade, just the same.

DOCTOR: Brewster was a son of Elder William Brewster, of the Mayflower colony, although the son came over a year later than his father. In the good ship Fortune, in 1621.

SCHOOLMASTER: How long did he operate the post?

DOCTOR: For a few years, then he turned it over to his son, Benjamin, and went to Pequot harbor.

SCHOOLMASTER: Never heard of the place.

DOCTOR: It's called New London today. And come to think of it, Leffingwell might have been up around the site of Norwich, because he was at the famous siege of Shantok point.

SCHOOLMASTER: I saw the monument the other day. What was it, doctor?

DOCTOR: Uncas built a fort there, on that point. The English gave him a hand with it, for Uncas was trying to stand off his ancient enemies, the Narragansetts. It was a splendid place for an Indian fort. There's a spring of water near by. It's there today. The Mohegans could have kept off the Narragansetts for a century or two.

SCHOOLMASTER: How about supplies.

DOCTOR: That's the story. This was back in 1645, you know, when Indians were hearty eaters. The fort was surrounded and the Narragansetts settled down to starve out old Uncas and his little band. Days and nights passed by.

SCHOOLMASTER: Naturally. The sun stood still only once.

DOCTOR: Uncas sent a messenger through the lines to Saybrook, for help. When the appeal arrived at Saybrook, Lieutenant Thomas Leffingwell loaded a canoe with beef and corn and peas and set out. Under cover of night he managed to get into the fort.

SCHOOLMASTER: Dramatic, to say the least!

DOCTOR: The Indians inside set up a howl of joy. Those on the outside had to wait until morning to discover the reason. Uncas let them know by raising a side of beef on a pole. When the Narragansetts saw it, they realized Uncas was receiving aid from the English.

SCHOOLMASTER: But that canoeload couldn't last forever, doctor!

DOCTOR: Consider the principle of the thing, professor! If the English were on the side of Uncas, the siege was useless. The Narragansetts decided thus and returned home.

SCHOOLMASTER: No wonder Uncas sold the nine miles square for $350. By rights, he should have given it to the early settlers.

DOCTOR: Doubtless the little incident at Shantok point had much to do with his willingness to sell. Anyway, when the pioneers down at Saybrook decided to move up here to a new plantation, Major John Mason and the Reverend James Fitch led them up the Thames to the spot.

SCHOOLMASTER: Major John Mason and the Reverend James Fitch, eh? Then they were practically the founders of the town!

DOCTOR: They had as much to do with it as anyone. And while we're talking about them, professor, they are both ancestors of a very famous man of half a century ago.

SCHOOLMASTER: I couldn't guess!

DOCTOR: James A. Garfield, 20th president of the United States. He was descended from Norwich stock, too. You learn something new every day, don't you?

SCHOOLMASTER: What are you going to do next Friday afternoon, doctor?

DOCTOR: That's a week ahead! How can I tell? Anything special you'd like to see?

SCHOOLMASTER: Yes, I'm going to watch the ten-mile run, and you're going with me.

DOCTOR: Ten-mile run! What's this now, some local affair?

SCHOOLMASTER: No, this is to be one of Norwich's big days. The ten-mile run is an annual national championship contest. This is the first time it has ever been held in Connecticut. The event was awarded to this state at the annual convention of the Amateur Athletic union. Judge Samuel E. Hoyt, president of the Connecticut association, awarded the event to the Duwell Athletic association, of Norwich.

DOCTOR: Oh, in that case, of course I'll take it in. The Duwell club has been pulling off some good events in that line. Next Friday, you say?

SCHOOLMASTER: The afternoon of Decoration day. It's a big thing for the Duwell club, on account of this being a national event. There will be runners in Norwich from all over the country. They are going to make their headquarters at the Wauregan hotel. Odd name for a hotel, doctor. Where'd you pick up that one?

DOCTOR: That's an old Indian name. Did you ever read the epitaph on the tomb of Uncas, written by Dr. Elisha Tracy? "For Courage Bold, For Things Wauregan, He Was the Glory of the Mohegan."

SCHOOLMASTER: Yes, but what does it mean?

DOCTOR: It means good, fine, pretty, and for 75 years the hotel has lived up to its name. We wouldn't know what to do here in Norwich without the Wauregan. It sheltered Abraham Lincoln when he visited Norwich.

SCHOOLMASTER: And a thousand other notables, I dare say! Norwich isn't done with notables, nor with commoners, either. I was talking with a man from the Connecticut Light and Power company. He told me their organization has a picture of eastern Connecticut with a population double that of 1923.

SCHOOLMASTER: Go to a power company if you wish to see men looking into the future, that's their business, of course, but they generally manage to hit it about right. What they'd like to see, though, is more diversified industries in this section.

DOCTOR: That's coming! The people of these valleys are beginning to wake up and reach out after things. Day-dreams are turning into solid realities. In the Connecticut Light and Power company, industry of eastern Connecticut has a staunch ally.

SCHOOLMASTER: Yes, I'd say so! It was power that made you, look to power for sustenance! It's there, waiting.

SCHOOLMASTER: I've been very much interested, in the last few days, in looking over the work of the Norwich Free Academy. Quite an institution! Although it seems too peculiar to me to find a town without a high school.

DOCTOR: I never went into the subject deeply. Norwich appears to have gone ahead, in spite of no high school.

SCHOOLMASTER: The Academy is a million dollar institution. But it's worth more than that to the city.

DOCTOR: You'd ought to know. You're a school teacher yourself.

SCHOOLMASTER: In some respects, the Academy offers more than the usual high school. There are the four general courses, two in preparation for college, academic and scientific. And a general course in preparation for normal, or for those wishing practical arts as a part of their work.

DOCTOR: What do you call practical arts?

SCHOOLMASTER: Oh, woodwork, metal-work, printing, mechanical drawing, sewing, design, freehand drawing, jewelry, pottery.

DOCTOR: In my day, the rule of three was the higher education.

SCHOLMASTER: Then there is a splendid commercial course for those who intend to enter business, after four years of the Academy. Take it all together, it's rather a novel arrangement, an Academy working on an endowment fund. The Academy was opened in 1356, so they told me.

DOCTOR: Yes, the citizens of the town contributed $8,000 and the site to start the school. Did you see the library? I have heard that it is the finest of any belonging to a secondary school, about 20,000 volumes in it. And the Slater Museum? fine collection of antique and medieval casts in there! And that building the library and the museum are in! that's the Slater Memorial building.

SCHOOLMASTER: Donated? I should judge so!

SCHOOLMASTER: John Slater, eh? pioneer of the spinning industry in the United States.

DOCTOR: He did a lot for the women, if you stop to think of it, when he took spinning out of the home. Imagine what a colonial house wife had on her hands, and feet. Dinner cooking in the fireplace, watching out the window for a playful arrow or tomahawk, rocking a cradle with one foot, and with her two hands and the other foot, getting ready for the weaving of the family's winter clothing, at the spinning-wheel!

SCHOOLMASTER: And singing while she did it! Yes, the old spinning-wheel is gone, in fact, but it still lives with us in music.

DOCTOR: Before you leave, professor, I'm going to take you into the old Backus house. That's one of our show-places in Norwich. Known today as Dowsett's House O'Gifts.

SCHOOLMASTER: Delighted, doctor!

DOCTOR: Nathaniel Backus built the house in 1750. It was the first residence erected down at the landing. There's a pioneer for you! Up to 1750, everybody wouldn't think of living anywhere else than in Norwich Town. But here was an original soul who deliberately built his house down at the Landing.

SCHOOLMASTER: I'll bet there was a shaking of heads in Norwich Town that year!

DOCTOR: It's a very fine specimen of an 18th century residence of the better class. The first thing you'll notice is the old-time knocker on a beautifully paneled door. You can stop and scrape off your shoes on an old-fashioned foot-scraper.

SCHOOLMASTER: That's be quite a novelty, although I hope my shoes won't need it.

DOCTOR: You'll admire the front hall, especially the carved stairs and the railing. Several fireplaces throughout the house. Corner blocks all hand-carved, a pineapple design. And out in the kitchen is a gigantic fireplace with an old-time brick-oven. As far as possible, it has been kept with its original characteristics and finish.

SCHOOLMASTER: The bake-oven? I wonder if we couldn't arrange to drop in on a baking day!

DOCTOR: I'm talking about the whole house. The Backus family were a military family. There was an Ensign Backus in the Revolution. The old place has seen history. And while we're at it, the builder of the house, Nathaniel Backus, was one of the six first owners of chaises in the town.

SCHOOLMASTER: Was that much of a distinction?

DOCTOR: It was in this case. The six chaises arrived at the same time, and on the following Sunday, six proud owners rattled to church.

SCHOOLMASTER: Rattled to church! That sounds very modern, doctor!

DOCTOR: They were arrested later for disturbing the Sabbath! Picture how indignant Norwich Town must have felt that day! I can see a hundred noses go up in the air as Nathaniel drove past in his new chaise. It took a brave man to try out something new, in those days.

DOCTOR: It's the one house in Norwich you're not going to miss, professor! And while you're browsing through it, conjure up some of those dreams of yours, 1775, drums beating in the streets, flash of blue-coats and glitter of brass buttons, swords jingling, tread of marching feet on the cobbles, anxious faced women peering from windows, and on every tongue, in whispers, the one word, Lexington.

SCHOOLMASTER: Do you know, doctor, whenever I think of the Revolution, I have a picture of a farmer dropping his plow-handles, stepping into the house for a gun, and after a short walk, falling-in with his neighbors behind a breastworks. They certainly had some training! I know my picture is all wrong.

DOCTOR: They lacked training, all through the war, but yet, there was more training than we realize. Men knew for years that war was unavoidable. A year before the actual outbreak of the war, there was a convention held at Norwich. Delegates came from Windham and New London counties. The big question of the day was preparation.

SCHOOLMASTER: In other words, preparedness!

DOCTOR: Correct. In October, of 1774, the General Court of Colonies ordered that all the militia should be called out for drill twelve half-days before the following May.

SCHOOLMASTER: That's six full days, hardly time enough to learn tactics.

SCHOOLMASTER: Very good, for Norwich in 1774!

DOCTOR: There were many complaints about the English colors. Up until then, the standard of the militia had been the British flag. I don't believe it was used after 1774. Anyway, plans were made for a regimental training-day in Norwich. It never came off. When the time arrived, most of the regiment was in service near Boston.

SCHOOLMASTER: How many regiments did the state send into the war at that time?

DOCTOR: Twenty-two regiments. Yes, sir, Norwich men did their share, but back here, in this sheltered corner of the state, things were rather quiet. A number of Boston men sent their families here, for safety. Josiah Quincy, you'll remember him, his family lived in Norwich until the siege of Boston was raised.

SCHOOLMASTER: Not a very great hardship, living in Norwich!

DOCTOR: The Malbones came from Newport; the Moores from New York; Capt. Joseph Coit and the Hubbard family came from New London. Some of them were in town long before the battle of Lexington. You see, everyone knew the war was inevitable. And Governor Trumbull was in Norwich when news arrived of that famous shot heard round the world.

SCHOOLMASTER: How many days was the news on the way?

DOCTOR: You couldn't guess! Exactly one day! That's how well prepared they were. The battle of Lexington began very early on the morning of April 19th.

DOCTOR: Thank you! At 10 o'clock, on the morning of the same day, Israel Bissel left Watertown, near Boston, on a fast horse, and carried the news to Colonel Foster, at Brookfield, Massachusetts. He stopped in Worcester for the dispatch to be copied.

SCHOOLMASTER: Is that dispatch down in the records?

DOCTOR: It is, very much in the records. I can give it to you, word for word. "The British have landed two brigades, have already killed six men, and wounded four others, and are on their march into the country." Well, Nathan Balding, town clerk of Worcester, the man who made the copy, sends it on to Daniel Tyler, Jr. at Brooklyn, Connecticut, who in turn relayed it to Norwich. It arrived on the 20th, the day after the battle.

SCHOOLMASTER: And the war was on!

DOCTOR: They were ready, ready and waiting! They weren't trained soldiers by a long ways, and most of their training was given them between battles. But they were trained enough for the work they had to do! What more could you ask!

SCHOOLMASTER: You were mentioning work, doctor? How'd you like to work for 364 days in preparing for the 365th?

DOCTOR: Never heard of such a thing! I'd rather have it the other way around. Who does that sort of thing?

SCHOOLMASTER: It's done right here in Norwich! Did you ever hear of "Everbrite?" It's a tinsel, doctor, made by the Carpenter Manufacturing company. I'm sure you've seen these words a dozen times: "Make your gifts attractive, tie with Everbright."

DOCTOR: Oh, tinsel! I've never given it a thought. You say we make it here in Norwich?

SCHOOLMASTER: Yes, I was watching it done yesterday, over in the Carpenter plant. Very interesting. You know the tinsel part, the metal? well, that comes from Germany. They call it "Lahn", in other words, flattened wire. We send our copper to Germany. American copper, it's alloyed with silver and drawn into wire, then flattened.

DOCTOR: Doesn't seem to me there'd be enough tinsel used in the country to keep a factory busy. Three hundred and sixty-four days, you say?

SCHOOLMASTER: Practically, minus Sundays and holidays. And I ran across an odd fact, doctor, this organization in Germany that makes this flattened wire has been under the management of the same family for 300 years.

SCHOOLMASTER: Not any more, doctor! I was told in the plant of the Carpenter company that women are using tinsel, especially tinsel cord, more and more every year. And why not? Why not on St. Valentine's day, or Easter, or Memorial day, or the Fourth of July? And by the way, it's the only plant of its kind in the state, and one of the few in the country.

DOCTOR: Well, this is the first time I knew we made tinsel here in Norwich. I'll have to go over to the Carpenter company and take a look.

SCHOOLMASTER: It's quite a sight! Very spectacular! You'll see more glitter and glimmer, and sparkle and shine, more colored fire and diamonds, in one hour than you've seen in your previous life. Beautiful material, that Everbrite, it fairly does for the eye what music does for the ear!

DOCTOR: Speaking about tinsel, reminds me of bareback riders and that reminds me of horses, and horse-back riding.

SCHOOLMASTER: Yes, and does horse-back riding remind you of anything?

DOCTOR: It certainly does. I don't suppose you've ever heard of Sarah Kemble Knight. She lived in both New London and Norwich. Stood very high in both places, socially. There's a silver tankard here in town which she presented to one of our churches.

SCHOOLMASTER: Where does the horse-back riding come in?

DOCTOR: Mrs. Knight made the journey from Boston to New York on horse-back, alone. She kept a journal of the trip which is still preserved. The astonishing fact is that the journey was made back in 1704. I've been wanting to tell you about it. I'm glad you happened to mention tinsel.

ANNOUNCER: The strains of "Yankee Rose" bring to a conclusion the program of the Merchants Bureau of the chamber of commerce, Norwich, Connecticut, the "Rose of New England." Within the hearing of this broadcast, there are thousands who left the state of Connecticut years ago, there are other thousands who can trace their ancestry back to this state. Connecticut invites you to return for a visit this summer. Come back to your old home and see your old friends and neighbors. By all means, visit Norwich as a part of your trip. If, for any reason, you are unable to come east this year, drop a card to this station, WTIC, Hartford, Connecticut, or direct to the Chamber of Commerce at Norwich, and let us have your comments on our efforts to keep the bond between you and your native state unbroken. We shall be glad to hear from you. Next week, at the same time, the old Doctor and the Schoolmaster will be on the air again, and until then, they bid you "good-night."

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago the grand list of the city was $10,414,305, according to the figures compiled by the city assessors a half century ago this week. The same week 600 pounds of shad were caught in one day at the Greeneville dam. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Norwich Bulletin of May, 1880, are as follows:

Monday, May 17, 1880—Owners of private telephones should keep an eye to their wires, as they are liable for any damage the wires may cause as an obstruction to a thoroughfare. A wire recently got loose on Franklin square, and the wonder is that someone was not hurt by it. Carelessness in this respect may make them expensive instruments for their owners.

The third anniversary of the organization of Trinity chapel on Mt. Pleasant street was celebrated yesterday afternoon at three o'clock. Every available inch of room was occupied and scores of people were obliged to return to their homes being unable to get in.

A gang of workmen, under Daniel Coanihan were employed all day yesterday at the yard of the Norwich & Worcester railroad company in excavating for and laying the Ferry street pipe beneath the railroad track approaching the Laurel Hill bridge.

Tuesday, May 18, 1880—A dozen Irish immigrants arrived in this city on the boat train, Monday morning, enroute for Putnam, where they are to be employed in the mills. During the past week quite a large number have passed through this place to Versailles and Willimantic, where they will also find employment in the factories. A fair share has fallen to the lot of Norwich and already the chubby thoroughbred Irish children are studying English in the schools of the Central district.

The Mt. Calvary Baptist society promise to secure the High street church property free from debt. They have succeeded in raising by subscription nearly $1,000 and the late Mrs. Mary A. Baker bequeathed them $1,100, so that they now have about $2,100 of the $2,500 necessary to have full possession of the property.

The recent leak in the water mains on Market street, so undermined the gas mains that they bent and sprang a leak, so that the dimension pavement had to come up to faciliate repairs.

Wednesday, May 19, 1880—The shad fishermen at the Greeneville dam caught 600 pounds of fish yesterday. The shad are running larger than usual in the Shetucket river and a large number weighing above six pounds are caught daily.

The steamer Ella has had a portion of her forward deck renewed and sheathed and her boiler is being thoroughly rebated. She will be ready for service on June 5th, when she enters the fruit freighting service between Stonington and Greenport, L. I.

The prisoners at the jail now number about 20. The discharges and committments nearly balance each other and there is little increase. On Saturday last six prisoners were committed and on Monday six were discharged.

Thursday, May 20, 1880—The schooner S. D. Hart took in a cargo of mollasses at the wharf of J. M. Huntington & Co., yesterday for Portland, Me. The 600 hogsheads of mollasses that encumbered the wharf a week or two since has been disposed of and shipments were made to parties from different states yesterday.

The Block Island cable gives the country another signal station and adds another watering place to the telegraphic circuits of the world. Point Judith is to hold a signal station and Narragansett Pier has a new wire by which it can sport with New Shoreham.

Friday, May 21, 1880—Victory lodge, I. O. G. T., inaugurated the strawberry festival season last night at Temperance hall, where lovers of the luscious fruit were served with a first class feast, at a popular price. It was well patronized.

Mr. William Cramer of Greeneville lost a horse, last night, valued at $200. The animal was taken suddenly ill on Wednesday evening and all efforts to save him proved futile.

Saturday, May 22, 1880—The second rendition of Mr. J. A. Butterfield's spectacular, musical drama, Belshazzer, by the Choral union, at Breed hall, last evening, was greeted by a large and appreciative audience.

The city assessors completed their labors yesterday. The taxable property of the municipality foots up to $10,414,305 for 1880 against $10,492,517 for 1879.

The Rev. William S. Palmer of the Second Congregational church, this city, will address the 12th convention of the Connecticut Sunday school teachers, to be held in New Britain on Wednesday of next week.

Paper will be made from wheat and linseed straws in a factory near Rosario, Argentina.

A Motor Car Opportunity for Character, Capability, Capital.

Within a few days, the field representative of a large Detroit motor car manufacturer will be here for the purpose of appointing a local dealer for this manufacturer's line of cars. ...This product is noted for its high quality and its high salability. The manufacturer occupies a very sound financial and production position. His cars are respected in the industry and preferred by a large section of the public—with 175,000 satisfied owners at present. The feature car of the new line is a four-door sedan listing at $845 and delivering, complete, for less than $1000.00 in the great majority of the motor car market...This is a rare opportunity for a man of character, capability and capital. It makes no difference whether or not he has had motor car experience. If he has had good business experience and has good business judgment, he will want to see this manufacturer's representative when that man is here. Please address a letter to MOTOR CAR REPRESENTATIVE, in care of The Bulletin, and you will hear from him.

CORONER EDW. G. McKAY CONCLUDES THE SIMS INQUEST AT NEW LONDON

NEW LONDON, May 23.—The funeral of Gordon W. Sims, fatally wounded by a bullet from the revolver of Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith last Tuesday night when Sims attempted to escape after being arrested and after attacking the arresting officer, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at 15 Masonic street and was attended by a large gathering. The services were conducted by Rev. Elmer Page, assistant pastor of the First Baptist church. The bearers were: George, James and Charles Butler, brothers of Mrs. Sims, all of Groton; Ridgley Terrill, Clarence Robbins and Howard Boss. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery. Among the mourners was Mrs. Sims, who has been estranged from her husband several months and who came to New London from Norwich when she heard of the slaying of her husband. Mrs. Burhoe, 50 Mountain avenue, the cause of the estrangement between Sims and his wife, also the cause of the battle between Sims and Burhoe which resulted in the issuance of the warrant for Sims' arrest and the shooting of Sims when Sergeant Smith attempted to serve the warrant, was not among the mourners.

Coroner Edward G. McKay, of Norwich, came to New London this afternoon and coducted the inquest which will eventually result in it being determined whether Smith is criminally responsible for the death of Sims. The inquest was supposed to start at 2:30, but the first witness was not called at police headquarters until 3:30. The witnesses interrogated were: Burhoe, who resides at Poquonoc Bridge; James Moore, 245 Jefferson avenue; James O'Donnell, 392 Williams street; Fred Cargrain, Thames diner, Crystal avenue and close to the front of Jimmy's tire shop where the shooting occurred, besides Police Sergeant Patrick Murphy, Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman and Sidney Gooay, 10 Starr street, an employe at the dining car. Coroner McKay conducted his investigation for three hours, for it was nearly 7 o'clock before he concluded taking testimony. Of course, Coroner McKay reserved decision, but it will be rendered within a few days. Attorney Morris Lubchansky, counsel for Detective Sergeant Smith, was present during the inquest.

TAXPAYERS' LEAGUE ADDRESSED BY NORWICH MAN

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 23.—The organization meeting of the New London Taxpayers' league was held this evening with a public meeting in Bulkeley high school auditorium and was attended by a large assemblage of men and women owners of taxable property in the city. Former Mayor Herbert M. Lerou, president of the Norwich Taxpayers' association, was the principal speaker and what he said proved most interesting. Mr. Lerou explained the movement which prompted the formation of the Norwich league and the accomplishments that had been attained since its formation. Mr. Lerou was forcible in his remarks and the opinions he expressed to the New Londoners were such that members of the local organization found them practical and suggestive.

FINED $400 AND COSTS—WOMAN SELLING LIQUOR

Mrs. Josephine Pawlikowski, 37 John street, was in the police court today, on two charges of violation of the liquor law, keeping with intent to sell and possession. She pleaded guilty and was fined $200 and costs on each count. The arrest of the woman was the result of a row at her home and of which Mrs. Pawlikowski is said to have been the instigator. Shortly before 7 o'clock this morning, Patrick Donovan went to police headquarters and made complaint against the woman, alleging that he had been assaulted at the Pawlikowski home by the woman, the purchase of liquor being the direct cause of the assault. Mrs. Pawlikowski was arrested on the breach of peace charge, but that count was nolled when she was presented in court. In the meantime, a search warrant was issued by Judge Daniel M. BOY SCOUT JAMBOREE OF UNUSUAL INTEREST

The Boy Scout Jamboree which will be held this (Saturday) evening at 7:45 in the state armory promises an unusual programme. Consisting of scout exhibits, parade, inspection, dressing race, fire by friction, tree felling, cubbing, knot tying, first aid, scout games and activities, signalling, bugling, airplane flying, etc., the Jamboree is peculiarly adapted to show parents about what kind of spirit and training prevails among the scouts.

An interesting feature of the programme is the large attendance forecast from troops outside of Norwich, Stafford Springs, Stafford, Staffordville, Willimantic, Putnam, East Woodstock, Plainfield and Baltic, all having signified their intention of being present to either participate or to witness the events. One hundred Girl Scouts are also expected to witness the performance.

Though the Jamboree does not represent a finished technique, though the scouts have practiced on the events but for the past three weeks, the general competitive programme is such that an audience will find considerable entertainment in the reactions of the scouts to the several new situations presented to them.

According to the local scout office over $50 in prizes will be awarded as recognitions for both troop and individual scout efforts. First place in the rally will mean the winning of a silk and gold banner from Norwich Rotary which will remain in the hands of the troop so winning the place for one year. The troop winning the banner a second year will become its permanent owner. Second place will mean the winning of a pair of field glasses and signalling kit, third place will mean the winning of an archery set. There are a dozen individual prizes for exhibitions consisting of: Camera drawing set, knives, axes, lariat, carving set, compass, merit badge sash, tool kit, etc. All prizes have been the gifts of Rotarians. The Red Arrow club has taken care of the printing of all programmes and tickets.

The rally will be free and is given as a token of appreciation to the public for the support of the scouts in their recent campaign for funds. With the adoption of the new cub program and with the rapidity with which troops are springing up all over this territory, an enrollment of 1,000 boys under the banner of the Boy Scouts may be predicted within a year or so. This enrollment will necessitate the securing of a Norwich-owned camp; in fact, according to the scout executive, Norwich is one of the few cities of its size in the United States that has not provided a camp for its boys. It is the hope of the scoutleaders of Norwich, therefore, that the Jamboree will serve to call attention to those who might provide a camp of the worth and value of the Boy Scout programme.

Special features of the programme will be the drill by the Boy Scout drum and bugle corps of Troop 5 and the pageant of merit badges.

Parents and friends have been invited to attend the Jamboree and those who will be present are urged by the scoutleaders to get there early to see the exhibits.

SPRING THAT TELLS TIME AMONG OZARK WONDERS

MOUNTAIN HOME, Ark.—(AP)— A spring that tells time and a whistling creek are among the strange phenomena of the Ozark mountain region, known but not understood by the millions outside the mysterious hills.

The spring flows for exactly 60 minutes, ebbs for a like period and flows again. Nature has provided a check valve somewhere in the underground channel, away from the vision of man.

Whistling creek gives voice to a low guttural whistle on quite days, which can be heard for several hundred feet.

GRAF ZEPPELIN IN FLIGHT FROM RIO JANIERO TO CUBA

German Dirigible Remained In the Brazilian Capital Less Than Two Hours and a Quarter—Took Off At 6.42 A. M., E. S. T., Sunday—Will Land At Pernambuco En Route to Havana—When the Graf Arrived Over Rio Janeiro the Citizens Poured Into the Streets, Rushed to the Windows and Climbed House Tops to View the Strange Visitor From Germany.

RIO JANEIRO, May 25—(AP)—The Graf Zeppelin this morning ducked in and out of Rio Janeiro to pay her long heralded courtesy visit to the Brazilian capital in less than two hours and a quarter.

Appearing over the harbor at dawn, the Graf sailed out again before 9:00 a. m. (7:00 a. m., E. S. T.) and at 3:15 o'clock this afternoon (1:15 p. m., E. S. T.) her passage over Victoria, 390 hundred miles away, was signalled on the return voyage to Pernambuco

She is due at Pernambuco early tomorrow morning and will probably start north for Havana and Lakehurst on Tuesday, crossing the equator again and quitting the southern cross and the south hemisphere for the pole star and the northern half of the world.

The Zeppelin's visit at Campo Dos Affonsos, Brazilian army landing field, was about the shortest she has ever made anywhere. Doctor Hugo Eckener did not even get out of the gondola, receiving Brazilian government officials and members of the German colony aboar dhis ship.

Among the distinguished persons present were the American ambassador, Edwin V. Morgan, and several members of the Brazilian cabinet, and Antonio Prado, prefect of Rio De Janeiro.

The dirigible approached the field at an altitude of about a thousand feet, accompanied by two military airplanes. The first landing cable was put over the side at 7:10 a. m. (5:10 a. m., E. S. T.) from 390 feet altitude. The military band began playing the German anthem. Ten minutes later the water ballast was discharged and a second landing cable dropped. The ship was fast within 20 minutes of the time she arrived, and five minutes later the passengers landed.

The Brazilian customs police took charge, and General Mariante, chief of the Brazilian army's aviation, the German minister and consul, directors of the Aero club of Brazil, army aviators, and members of the Germany colony here were welcomed by Dr. Hugh Eckener.

The land lines were withdrawn for departure at 8:40 a. m. (6:40 a. m., E. S. T.) and two minutes later the Zeppelin rose into the air, circled the city twice at slow speed, and then sailed through the headlands toward Pernambuco.

Owing to the uncertainty of the Graf's landing here at all, all passengers from here for Lakehurst and Havana were sent by airplane yesterday to Pernambuco, where the Graf will pick them up tomorrow. They include W. B. Leeds, American millionaire, who came from the United States especially to make the return trip.

GRAP ZEPPELIN TO DATE HAS FLOWN 85,000 MILES

NEW YORK, May 25.—(AP)— With 85,000 miles already to its credit and with the same motors it had when commissioned on September 18, 1928, the Graf Zeppelin now faces at least 17 flights in Europe, which will give it a mileage of more than 100,000 at the end of the summer.

The Hamburg-American line, booking agent for the Graf in America, today announced a tentative itinerary which will take the ship to points in almost every European country.

From July 8 to 11, a northland cruise to the North Cape at the extremity of Norway is scheduled. A week later another northland cruise to Spitzbergen, and the week after that, a voyage to Iceland are planned. Flights to the Baltic and Mediterranean seas are listed in addition to shorter trips.

The Zeppelin has crossed the Atlantic five times and the Pacific once, spanned Europe three times and Asia once, and on the present European-Pan-American tour has added the South Atlantic, northern Africa and South America to its log.

TWO TANKERS COLLIDED OFF BARNEGAT LIGHT

NEW YORK, May 25.—(AP)—The American oil tanker W. W. Bruce, badly damaged last night in collision with another tanker, the Scottish Maiden, in a heavy fog 18 miles southeast of Barnegat lightship, limped into port today with the aid of two tugs. The Scottish maiden, less seriously damaged, proceeded to Newport News, Va., a few hours after the accident.

The W. W. Bruce, with a hole 20 feet long and 19 feet wide extending below the water line on her port bow, discharged what was left of her cargo of 75,000 barrels of oil at Staten Island. Tomorrow she will be taken to drydock at Bayonne, N. J., for repairs.

Capt. John Burrow of the Bruce estimated the damage to his vessel at between $10,000 and $50,000. Seventeen thousand barrels of oil were pumped out to prevent the ship from sinking when it began to settle after the crash. The Bruce (formerly the Sabine Sun) is owned by the Continental Steamship company.

The Scottish Maiden, a British tanker, operated by the Furness-Withy line, was scraped and suffered a twisted bow in the collision.

FORMER BANK PRESIDENT ACQUITTED OF EMBEZZLEMENT

FLINT, Mich., May 25.—(AP)—Grant J. Brown, former president of the Union Industrial Bank of Flint, was acquitted today by a jury in circuit court of charges of embezzlement, which resulted from a $3,592,000 shortage discovered last fall.

Brown was one of 16 employes and executives of the bank indicted after the embezzlement was discovered. Twelve of the 16 now are serving terms in the Michigan state prison at Jackson.

The active charge against Brown was misuse of $47,000. He still faces other embezzlement charges and also is accused of making a false statement to a state bank examiner. Prosecutor Charles D. Beagle said after the verdict he had not determined whether to press these charges against the former bank head.

GOLD STAR MOTHERS MESSENGERS OF PEACE

PARIS, May 25.—(AP)—French opinion today recognized the American Gold Star Mothers as messengers of peace on earth and good will toward men.

Today, with all France watching the visitors reverently, there was abounding evidence that their pilgrimage had served to give impetus to the world movement for the outlawry of war.

The dolorous and unostentatious visit of the American mothers to the graves of their sons has revived sadness in thousands of French homes which were made desolate by the war, but observers believed it had also resuscitated the determination of the masses to wage battle unflinchingly for peace.

WEATHER PREVENTED TAKE OFF OF "K OF NEW HAVEN"

HARTFORD, May 25.—(AP)—The airplane "K of New Haven," which is being groomed for a non-stop refueling flight to Buenos Aires, was prevented from taking off today by driving rain and boggy ground. Weather permitting, its crew plan to get away tomorrow morning.

The condition of the ground prevented the light refueling plane from getting into the air with the load of fuel to be taken on between here and New Haven before the "K" turns south.

Lieut. Commander George R. Pond, pilot, said the start tomorrow would be made between 7 and 8 a. m., E. S. T., if weather conditions are good.

THREE MEN SHOT IN FREE FOR ALL FIGHT AT DANCE

CROWLEY, La., May 25.—(AP)—In a free for all fight at a Saturday night dance near Church Point, 25 miles from here, three men were dangerously shot, one was seriously stabbed and two saddle horses were killed.

Officers said two men started fighting in the yard of the home of Louis Lanclos and the fight spread inside the house with the crowd taking sides. Sheriff Walter Laclede said he had been unable to fix responsibility as the wounded men spoke only French and could not understand English.

After the battle Louis Lanclos was found suffering from two bullets through the body, Alexon Lanclos from two bullets through the abdomen, Siul Cary from three bullets through the body and Adolph Lanclos from knife wounds. The horse were tied to the fence and were killed by stray bullets.

THREE KILLED IN LIQUOR FEUD PISTOL BATTLE

LEPANTO, Ark., May 25.—(AP) — Four men, whom officers said were known to them as leaders of two bitterly hostile liquor running factions, met at an outdoor carnival here early this morning and used pistols to settle their feud.

Before Police Chief W. R. Adam brought his own gun into play, to end the battle, two of them and a third man were killed, another of the quartet was wounded seriously and eight bystanders were shot. All of the wounded, including two women, are expected to recover.

City Attorney John Mosby of Lepanto and E. L. Shinaberry, town marshal at Marked Tree, home of all the dead, said the feud, lasting over a year and a half, had been marked by fist fights and court appearances leading to the clash today.

AN ALL DAY FLIGHT FROM ST. LOUIS TO SPRINGFIELD

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 25—(AP)—Pilot James G. Haizlip landed at Springfield airport in the rain late this afternoon, after an all day flight from St. Louis, Mo., in the Travelair mystery ship of Lieut. Jimmy Doolittle. Haizlip was forced down on a hill in Connecticut, where he landed his ship safely on a precarious stop and then took off for Springfield.

He made the run from St. Louis in 7 hours and 43 minutes, a record between the two cities He said the fog closed in on him completely near Bantam Lake, Conn., and his landing was made almost completely blind. Haizlip will take part in a stunting program at Springfield airport tomorrow, preparatory to the New England air tour which leaves here Tuesday.

MUSSOLINI ADDRESSED CROWD OF 150,000 WORKERS

MILAN, Italy, May 25.—(AP)— Premier Mussolini today addressed a crowd of 150,000 workers here, telling them that discipline of the laboring classes "firmly united around the symbol of the lictor's rods" is the element that is elevating Italy's economic situation above that of other nations.

Cannon kept firing salvos in honor of the duce's visit, throwing varicolored confetti over the crowd's heads. A powerful radio outside the courtyard filled the big park with national nationalist and facist airs.

"It is unnecessary to recount what the fascist government has done for labor. We think of your interests, all your needs, because we love you as workers and fellow-Italians," the premier said.

Population Of State Above 1,500,000

Census to Date, With 41 Town to Hear From, Shows Gain of 12 1-3 Per Cent.

NEW HAVEN, May 25. — Connecticut is the home of probably more than a million and a half of persons, the estimate being based on the census figures now in hand. The number of towns reported by the supervisors of the five districts in the state is 128 and in these the count, roughly totaled, is 1,056,693. The population of these towns in 1920 was 940,646. The percentage of gain is about 12 1-3 per cent.

Taking the 1920 population of the remaining 41 towns and applying the 12 1-3 percentage of gain shown in the 128, the total for the state would be about 1,545,651.

In the 41 towns to come there are several with large populations and while in these there may be indicated a net decrease this may be more than offset by increases in suburban towns to the cities, such as East and West Hartford, and Greenwich, Stamford, Stratford and Westport in Fairfield county, which are among those likely to show increases.

Should the state's population be about 1,545,651 the gain over 1920 would be about 165,020. The gain in population in 1920 over the figure for 1910 was 266,875. But when the 1920 census was taken it was accepted generally as a fact that the influx of population in war years had attributed to the high ratio of gain in many of the cities. The increase in the last ten years will probably be regarded as a normal increase in the ten year period.

The work of the enumerating force in the five districts has progressed to the point where the missing towns number 11 in Hartford county, six in New Haven, four in Fairfield, eight in Litchfield, three in Middlesex, four in New London, three in Windham and two in Tolland.

Among the missing places are New London, Norwich, Waterbury, Middletown, Stamford and Manchester, which are cities, and the large towns of East Hartford, Southington, West Hartford, Windsor, Stonington, Naugatuck, Greenwich, Winchester and New Milford.

The present indications are that most of the remaining 41 towns will be in hand the coming week, or at least enough of them to determine fairly well what the first rough count of Connecticut folks will amount to.

FALL OF 175 FEET WAS FATAL TO JUDGE ENGS

OAKLAND, Calif., May 25.—(AP)—The crushed body of Superior Judge Edward W. Engs was found today in a stone quarry at Clifton street near Broadway, Oakland, within a few blocks of his home. The jurist, who had been missing since a week ago Friday, had fallen 175 feet from the crest of the quarry which adjoins a cemetery.

The quarry had been searched for days by police and possemen accompanied by dogs. That the body of Judge Engs, who disappeared after a nervous breakdown occasioned by the strain of a court trial, was not found earlier, was explained by the fact he fell where he was concealed by a clump of willow trees.

No evidence of foul play was discovered. Examination of a ledge at the quarry's crest disclosed a fragment of slippery bark, crushed as though by a foot. It was probable, Coroner Miller said, Judge Engs slipped on the bark and fell to his death.

COMPROMISE TARIFF BILL IS ACCEPTABLE TO HOOVER

Announcement Made After White House Conference With Attorney General Mitchell and Solicitor General Thatcher and Talk With Senator Smoot By Telephone—The President Previously Had Found Several Sections of the Flexible Provision Unsatisfactory.

WASHINGTON, May 25.— (AP) — President Hoover and republican tariff leaders in congress reached an accord late Saturday night on the flexible tariff provision of the Hawley-Smoot measure and it will be submitted to the senate tomorrow without change.

The president had found certain sections of the new flexible provision unsatisfactory, after being informed of its contents yesterday by telephone at his Rapidan river fishing camp in Virginia, and dispatched four senatorial guests back to Washington late last night with a suggested modification.

The conferences continued late today after Mr. Hoover returned unusually early from his week-end retreat and it was apparent that the executive had not been given all the details of the clause.

After conferring with Attorney General Mitchell and Solicitor-General Thatcher at the white house and with Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, by telephone, the president was represented as favoring the compromise flexible amendment.

Mr. Hoover cut short his visit to his Virginia fishing camp and immediately upon arriving at the white house this afternoon, arranged for several conferences with republican leaders and Attorney General Mitchell on the flexible question.

The president sent word last night to congressional chieftains that he was dissatisfied with certain provisions of the new flexible plan under which the tariff commission would be given the power to recommend increases and decreases up to 50 per cent in statutory rates and the president would be given 60 days to approve or disapprove the recommendation.

Just what features the president desired changed was not made clear. Senator Smooth, republican, Utah, chairman of the senate conference committee, said he probably would call the conferees together to consider the situation before making the conference report to the senate tomorrow.

The president's attitude was conveyed to the tariff leaders here last night by Senators Allen, Kansas; Hatfield, West Virginia; Walcott, Connecticut and Goldsborough, Maryland, all republicans, who were guests at the camp on the Rapidan river and who returned hurriedly late last night and conferred with Senator Smoot, Attorney Mitchell and Solicitor General Thatcher on the legality of certain phases of the flexible clause.

Meanwhile, a democratic attack on the conference flexible plan was opened up by the democrats, who already have laid plans to make points of order against the conference rates on cherries, cheese, rayon, and watches on the ground that the conferees exceeded their authority in determining these rates.

In a statement issued through his party's national committee, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the democratic leader, contended the new flexible provision "constitutes a delegation of legislative authority which renders the same invalid."

"The power to levy duties, imposts and excises is vested exclusively in the congress," he asserted.

Some reports had it that the president was not satisfied with the curtailing of his power under the new flexible clause, but this was denied by several of his senatorial guests over the week end. One of them represented the president as willing to forego some of the power vested in him under existing law and merely desired a widening of the basis upon which the tariff commission would determine changes in rates. The legality of this was being discussed, it was said.

Senator Robinson said it was "only on the theory that the congress may create the president or any one else as its administrative power that the original flexible provision was sustained by the supreme court."

"To give the president the express power to approve or disapprove the commission's recommendations, presumably made in conformity to the rule fixed by law," he added, "is a delegation of authority by congress to the president to legislate, and constitutes a violation of the constitution."

The democratic leader served notice that opposition to the new flexible plan and to elimination of the debenture amendment would be "renewed with vigor and determination."

"The fight against the conference report," he asserted, "will be designed to concentrate and combine not only the opposition of those who regard the conference flexible provision and the abandonment of the debenture clause as decisively objectionable, but also those who recognize the general revision rates carried in the bill as oppressive, unjust and unnecessary.

"Taken as a whole and regarded from the standpoint of the general public, this bill is iniquitous and can not contribute to the restoration of sound economic conditions."

"DRY OR WET" QUESTIONNAIRE FOR MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, May 25.— (AP) — Henry H. Curran, president of the association against the prohibition amendment, today announced he had sent to each member of congress a questionnaire seeking their position on prohibition.

Only one question was asked in the paper, "Do you favor the repeal of the 18th amendment to the Constitution of the United States?"

Curran said each candidate for the senate or house would be called upon to give his position on the question during this year's campaign, adding he felt sure "the time has come when the people of our country wish to know the attitude of their representatives in congress toward this great question."

CITY AND TOWN SHOW DECREASE IN POPULATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 25.—Respective losses of 58 in the town and 259 in the city, since 1920, are shown in the 1930 census returns of the town of Windham and the city of Willimantic as released Saturday by Supervisor Otto B. Robinson of the third district census office here.

The town of Windham has a population of 13,743 as compared with 13,801 in 1920. There are 74 farms in the town. The city of Willimantic, which is within the confines of the town of Windham, has a population of 12,071, as compared with 12,330 in 1920, and boasts of seven farms.

The census returns for the town and city were not released until a careful check had been made of the work of the enumerators. To the request of Supervisor Robinson that any person who had not been enumerated notify local headquarters, there were 18 replies from Windham residents.

The decrease in population for both the city and town is far less than many had expected. There was a general belief that the turbulent industrial conditions of the past five or more years had brought about an exodus of residents much greater than the census reveals.

Windham suffers a loss in population for the first time since 1810 when the population had dwindled to 2,410. Each succeeding census, up to the present one, showed healthy gains, however, with the result that in 1900 Windham had 10,137 inhabitants and in 1910, 12,604, this figure having climbed to 13,801 in 1920.

An alleged confusion on time has cropped up in the case of David Tachinsky, Bricktop road farmer, charged in police court with failure to have a light on his horse-drawn vehicle on the evening of May 12, when the team figured in a collision with a car driven by Edwin C. Ackley of this city, in Windham Center. The case was continued Saturday until next Thursday at the request of Edward L. Dennis, counsel for the defendant, who said he had additional witnesses he wished to communicate with. Morris Foster of this city and Moosup, Hyman Seplowitz and Joseph Horn of this city, testified as defense witnesses. State Police Michael J. Murphy of the Stafford Springs barracks testified that a call to the accident was received at the barracks at 8:30 o'clock. Ackley said that he put in the call to the barracks about 20 minutes after the crash. It was established that the sun set at 7:35 o'clock that evening. The defense is attempting to show that the accident occurred before vehicle lamps should be legally lighted. Ackley, who is charged with failure to grant the right of way, pleaded nolo contendere in court Saturday and was fined $2 and costs. In the accident Tachinsky's horse was killed and his wagon wrecked.

Ernest Paquette, a mill hand driving a Marmon coupe, is scheduled to appear in police court Monday morning to answer to a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor as the result of a collision at Thread Mill square Saturday night at 11:15 o'clock, with a sedan driven by Michael Mazzola of 931 Main street. Paquette turned at the square to go south to Windham road, when he lost control of his machine and it struck the Mazzola machine, which came onto the square northerly from Windham road. The damage to the Marmon consisted of bent left front fender and bumper and broken left front wheel while the left front fender on Mazzola's car was crushed. Patrolman William Hurley arrested Paquette at the scene of the collision.

Officers of the Windham Democratic club elected for the year are: T. Frank Cunningham, president; Aime J. Martineau, Mrs. Alice D. Stoughton and Mrs. James H. Hurley, vice-presidents; Mrs. Veronica Simpson, secretary; and Pierre J. Laramee, treasurer. The club is to take up active work in the voting wards.

There was a three-car collision about 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon on Main street, at the entrance to the Sadd filling station. Two of the cars were damaged but there were no injuries. A truck driven by Haskell Rosen was being turned into the station entrance. In the rear was a touring car driven by Harry Jones, also of this city. Jones pulled out to the right to pass the truck and in doing so came into the path of a coupe going easterly and driven by Frank Caimi of Syosset, N. Y. Brakes were quickly applied but the cars collided and were damaged. Jones agreed to settle for the damage to Caimi's car. Officer Arthur Hurley conducted an investigation.

Nearly 6,000 poppies were sold Saturday under the auspices of the auxiliary to James J. Shea post No. 19, American Legion, the work being done by some 50 women and girls. By early afternoon the 3,000 poppies on hand had been sold and a supply was secured from Hampton and Coventry auxiliaries while awaiting a consignment of 2,000 more secured from state headquarters at Cromwell. Mrs. Florence B. Burchnall, president of the auxiliary, was in charge of the sale, the proceeds of which will be used for the assistance of needy ex-service men and their families in the city and vicinity.

An interesting May day health program was carried out at the Natchaug grammar school assembly Friday with parents and friends of the pupils in attendance. Miss Edith Willett and Mrs. Alice M. Robinson, teachers of the fifth grade, and Miss Mae Sweeney, school nurse, were in charge of the program.

At least one local woman, a resident of Windham street, claims to have felt the results of the explosion of several of the fireworks manufacturing and stock buildings on the outskirts of Thompsonville Thursday morning. The woman stated that her house shook and dishes rattled at the time of the explosion.

People have been looking skyward considerably of late, attracted by the peculiar antics of airplanes and still wondering what it is all about. On at least two occasions last week a trim little craft appeared over the city and after gaining a sufficient audience went off to the outskirts and there favored with well-executed aerial stunts. Then again, shortly after midnight Saturday morning, after all the city street lights had gone out, a low-flying plane sported very close to the housetops and circled about twice, finally heading west.

A series of twilight skeet shoots, starting early in June, are to be held by the Willimantic Rod and Gun club, it was stated today by Captain Carl E. Rice. A. Linn Weatherhead was scheduled to participate in the skeet shoot conducted by the Bridgeport Gun club today.

Oliver E. Barrimore of Louisville, Ky., and S. Theodore Caswell, who have been visiting the latter's parents here, have returned to the U. S. S. West Virginia, which is to leave Hampton Roads, Va., for Panama.

The cellar foundation walls for the home of Judge Lewellyn J. Storrs of Spring Hill, Storrs, is being built by students of the masonry department of the Willimantic Trade school. The Storrs house is to be moved to a new location to make way for the course of the new concrete highway between Mansfield Center and Connecticut Agricultural college.

Stafford Springs

The census returns from the town of Stafford show that there has been a gain in population of 536 during the past ten years. The 1930 census shows a population of 5943 while that of 1920 was 5407. There are 171 farms in the town. The borough of Stafford Springs, which is within the confines of the town, also shows a gain. The figures for 1930 are 3485, compared with 3383 ten years ago, a gain of 102. Four farms are listed in the borough. The census was taken during the dullest period which Stafford has experienced in 25 years. Many families have moved away during the past year and more than 40 tenements are vacant in this town. Had it not been for the slackening of industries here during the past year the town would have gone well over the 6,000 mark in population.

Memorial Day Schedule

Arrangements have been completed for the observance of Memorial day. Ernest K. Taft of the Sons of Veterans is chairman of the committee and John Goryl of the American Legion will act as marshal. All patriotic organizations have been requested to meet at the G. A. R. hall in the library building at seven o'clock Friday morning when the march to the cemetery will begin. The first stop will be at Stafford Springs cemetery where the graves will be decorated and patriotic exercises will be held at the Civil war monument. The next stop will be at St. Edward's cemetery. From St. Edward's the parade will be continued to the West Stafford cemetery where there will be exercises by the school children and an address by Rev. H. C. Beebe of West Stafford Congregational church. The next stop will be at Hillside cemetery, where Rev. Edward Eno will give a brief talk and a program under the direction of the teachers of Pinney grammar school will be carried out. The line will then proceed to Staffordville where Rev. David Carter will speak and the children of that village will give recitations and sing patriotic songs. At Stafford street cemetery, Dr. Batchelder will probably make an address as he has done for several years. The paraders will then march to the Guild hall of Grace church where they will have a dinner served by the members of the Woman's Relief corps, assisted by the auxiliary to Strazza post. In the afternoon the organizations will reassemble in front of the Warren Memorial hall and accompanied by the children of the borough schools will march up Main street to Church street, to High and West Main streets returning down West Main street to Hyde park, where exercises will be conducted at the Soldiers' monument. He was also taxed costs, amounting to $11.35. Giovanni Dottor, charged with failure to give right of way at the railroad underpass near Forestville, Thursday night, had his case nolled. It developed that Dottor had already entered the underpass when a car coming from the opposite direction, operated by Clifford Piourd of Springfield, came through and a third car driven by Oliver Lagacy of Springfield, also crashed through, scraping the side of his car on the wall of the underpass. This is a very dangerous portion of the road and strangers are often deceived in thinking that there is room for two cars to pass, while there is actually room for only one to get through safely.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES

Let Me Be Kind.

Yes, I could wish that I were bright and clever,
And favored with a keen and nimble
wit:
That when among my fellows I might ever
Be qualified to do my brilliant bit;
But to the Giver of rare gifts, who proffers
The precious charms that grace the heart and mind,
This is the prayer my soul with yearnoffers,
"Let me be kind."

Nixon Waterman.

At the Lion-House.

Quietly, with topaz eyes,
He gazes past the staring crowd;—
Does he dream of other skies,
Remember being free and proud?

As he paces that small pen
Back and forth with tireless ease,
Royally aloof from men,
Does he see his jungle trees?

Does he dream of star-bright night
When he had his meat from God?
Does he ponder on his plight,
Tameless still, beneath the rod?

He stands aloof ignores the shame
Of being gazed on as a prize,
And nurses at his heart a flame,
Quietly, with topaz eyes.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE-AWAKES

Creatures which most people observe least closely are those which they see most of. Persons who keep cats are occasionally surprised at the cleverness of the tricks they play, but cats' ways are considered so well known that few ever stop to think there may be anything extraordinary in them. Yet there can be no question that the cat is one of the most intelligent of animals. It suffers by comparison with its great domestic rival, the dog. The dog becomes devoted to people, whereas the cat usually shows fondness mainly for places—a characteristic which is a survival, no doubt, from the attachment felt by its savage ancestors for their lairs. The cat is also of more suspicious and refractory temperament than the dog. For these and other reasons it is harder to teach. But it often shows an intelligence, and especially a cunning in some directions, which the dog cannot equal.

One of the peculiarities of the cat is its dispositin to run wild. The dog, if wholly separated from men, does not become feral for some generations, but let a domestic cat, even though adult, get lost in the woods, and it is soon almost as much at home and as savage as its near relation the wildcat, which is the most vicious and untamable of animals.

The strength of the attachment the cat forms for certain places and the extraordinary degree of development of its instinct of orientation are shown by the way in which it finds its way back home after having been conveyed long distances blindfolded or under cover. How it performs such feats is a question which puzzles naturalists. The most plausible explanation is that advanced by Alfred Russell Wallace. When a cat is carried blindfold, Mr. Wallace thinks, it brings its sense of smell into full exercise and takes note of every odor it encounters. The successive odors leave on its mind "a series of images as distinct as those we receive by the sense of sight, and the recurrence of these odors in their proper, inverse order — every house, ditch, field and village having its own well-marked individuality — makes it a neasy matter for the animal in question to follow the identical route back, however many turnings and crossroads it might have followed.

The cat is one of the most cunning of hunters. Several stories of extraordinary displays of its craft are told by Romanes in his "Animal Intelligence." Dr. Klein related to Romanes that his cat, having observed that birds came to eat the crumbs which were thrown on the garden walk, used to conceal herself in the adjoining shrubbery and lie in wait for them. A cat belonging to another of Romanes' correspondents had evidently noticed that birds came to eat the crumbs which were scattered under the bedroom window, for one day, after a snow had fallen, it was seen digging the crumbs out where the birds might see them, after which it retired behind some shrubs to await developments. A cat belonging to Dr. Frost went a step farther, for it was actually seen laying out crumbs on the grass where it had known birds to come for them.

Nature several years ago told of an old tomcat which used a young bird that had fallen from the nest as a decoy for the parent birds. The cat shook the young bird with its paw to make it flutter and cry. At the same time it kept a sharp eye on the old cock bird, which was flying about in great distress, and restrained the appetite of a kitten which wanted prematurely to make a meal of the young one. Several times the old cock flew quite near, when the cat leaped at him viciously, but unsuccessfully.

Perhaps puss tormented the birds as much for the pleasure of seeing them in distress as from a hope of adding them to his breakfast, for there is no other animal, except, possibly, savage man, that shows the same love of torture for its own sake as the cat. Every one has seen cats toy with mice before eating them, repeatedly letting them loose and quickly recapturing them. No doubt this practice is in some measure due to love of play, but in still larger measure it is attributable to love of tormenting.

One of Romanes's correspondents told him of a cat which he had punished when her kittens misbehaved to see what effect it would have on her. "Soon the cat herself began to train the kittens, for whenever they misbehaved, she boxed their ears until she taught the kittens to be clean." Another Romanes' correspondents had a cat which which learned, by observing a terrier, to stand on its hind legs and beg for food.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

Dear Uncle Jed: I'm going to tell you about the beautiful landscape picture that Mother Nature painted across the sky. The large round sun which warms the earth lowered its rays beneath the tops and the horizon and sent up a beautiful red flame into the sky. Soon almost all the colors of the rainbow could be seen. As I watched, I noticed that the colors faded slowly away forming into clouds, one which was the exact map of the New England states but stayed not very long because night was coming on and Mother Nature had to erase her beautiful picture. I hope you and the Wide Awakes have enjoyed my story.

My Visit.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing you another story, but it is quite different from the first one I wrote about "The Little Yellow Bird."

This one is about a visit at my girl friend's home in the country.

After I had been there a short while we started for the woods where we intended to play and gather some flowers.

We started across the garden on a run, as we wanted a good start to jump over the fence on the other side. We found some winiergreen berries and had a real nice feast on them. After we had filled our pockets with berries, we went on. Pretty soon we heard a sound like running water, so we looked around a large rock and there we saw a baby waterfall over which water from a swift stream was running. We went along up the stream making more water falls and picking flowers until it was time for us to eat our lunch, as we had brought some with us.

After we ate we fed the crumbs to some little birds that seemed very hungry and fought over the crumbs. We played in the woods until we were tired, and just as we were getting ready to go home we found a dead bird. I took the box in which we had had our lunch and put the bird in it. We then dug a hole in the soft dirt near the river and buried it. It was then time for us to go home, so we left the little bird asleep by the river.

RUBY CARRIER.
Norwich.

A Quarrel.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about a quarrel. Yes, there was a quarrel going on in the kitchen. The cup and the saucer were having a regular combat. The battle was raging.

"Well if I were you Mistress Cup vI would say nothing—you with a broken handle and a piece broken offf the top of your head," said Madame Saucer.

"You will have nothing to say in a few minutes, you will fall to pieces," Mistress Cup retored.

Sure enough in a few minutes there was nothing more for either to say for both of them lay on the floor their pieces mingled together. They were placed in a barrel by the cook, were brought by an automobile to the same dump where their bodies molded to dust.

Tabby the Cat.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about Tabby the cat. Tabby was black and white. One day as she walked down the walk she said, I am going to be naughty. So she went in the house and spilled her milk. Then she went in the living room. There was a table with a vase and some flowers. She dug her claws into the scarf and pulled. Down came vase, flowers and all. Missy heard the racket so she came in the room. Tabby hid under a chair. Missy said, Look what that cat has done. When she straightened out everything Tabby came out and broke two dishes. Then she came out and sat in a tree, ready to spring for a robin.

The Hot Dog Roast.

Dear Uncle Jed: One day my mother and my father planned to have a hot dog roast. We invited some people we know from the city. Right here I must tell you that we live on a farm. City people like to come here in the summer. Just as soon as they got here we began to get hot dogs, marshmallows, root beer and apples ready. We took the food, something to sit on and put them in my wagon. My father carried some boards for a table. We took a few song books. When we got there we made a table on which we put the food. We cut eight sticks and when we had built a fire we roasted the hot dogs and marshmallows. Soon they were all eaten up. We drank our root beer, too, then we sang songs. It was very late when we reached home, but we had a very good time.

A Sad Occurrence.

Dear Uncle Jed: One morning, as I was going for the morning paper as I usually do, I noticed two boys. One boy was holding a small black and white kitten, while the other was busily tying a string to its tail. The string was so tight, that the kitten mewed for pain. The boys then laid the kitten on the sidewalk, and laughing gleefully rubbed it back and forth, telling each other they were scrubbing the street. When the boys finished their horrible deed, they tosed the kitten aside and continued down the street. When they were out of sight I went over to the kitten; untied the string, and carried her back to her owner. On my way back the kitten clung to me terrified. It was hard to keep the kitten from following me after setting it down. I soon managed to do so and then I ran home to get ready for school.

Fell Out of Bed.

Dear Uncle Jed: When we first moved into this house, my mother bought me a large four poster bed. Up to that time I had slept in a crib. My crib had high sides and I could not move around much in it nor fall out of it. The first night that I got into it my new bed seemed so good. It was so roomy and I could toss around in it. The first thing I knew I had rolled right out of it on the floor. My mother came running to see what had happened I had made such a thud. There I was, right in the middle of the floor. I was certainly lucky that I did not get hurt a bit. I am used to my bed now and I don't fall out of it anymore.

RUTH CLARKE AND RALPH ARNOLD QUIETLY MARRIED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, May 25.—This afternoon at 5 o'clock at the Westfield Congregational church, Miss Ruth Wilson Clarke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Clarke of Hutchins street, became the bride of Ralph W. Arnold, also of this town. The marriage ceremony was conducted by Rev. Harding W. Gaylord, pastor of the church. Only members of the immediate families were in attendance. The bride and groom were unattended. The bride was gowned in a flat crepe pink ensemble, with hat to match, and her bouquet was of pink rosebuds and lilies of the valley. The wedding music was played by Miss Edith Fuller. Following the service those attending the wedding enjoyed a dinner at the Putnam Inn. Mr. and Mrs. Arnold left during the evening on a honeymoon trip. Upon their return they will make their home in Danielson.

The bride is a life-long resident of Danielson, and is a graduate of Killingly high school in the class of 1927. The groom, who also has spent his lifetime here, is a printer in the employ of a local concern. The bride received many beautiful gifts.

In the interest of youth and culture the Danielson Treble Clef Choir and String Ensemble, under the direction of Henry Flagg, and the Willimantic Community orchestra will give what assuredly will be an outstanding musical treat at the Killingly high school auditorium Tuesday evening. The event is planned to aid the Killingly Woman's club scholarship fund, which is now somewhat in excess of $1,600, and which it is hoped may be increased to $2,000 during the course of the present year. The income from this fund is used yearly to aid some promising student of Killingly high school in obtaining a higher education, which laudable ambition might otherwise be impossible of attainment for the one to whom the award is annually made. The third such award will be made to some unnamed member of the senior class of the school at the commencement exercises in June.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Louis C. Sheffield

Saturday afternoon the funeral of Mrs. Grace Sheffield, wife of Louis C. Sheffield, was held from the home at East Killingly, with services at the Union Baptist church in that place and with Rev. Walter B. Greene of the Woodlawn Baptist church, Pawtucket, a former pastor at East Killingly, and Rev. Chester J. Armstrong of the Danielson Baptist church officiating. Relatives and friends in numbers attended.

During the service, Mrs. Elizabeth Potter, Miss Eleathea Sheldon and Harry Sayles sang Abide With Me, and In the Fadeless Springtime. Miss Myra Wade was the organist. Burial was in the Bartlett cemetery, the committal service conducted by Rev. Mr. Greene. Members of the Jolly Social club, with which Mrs. Sheffield had been affiliated, carried out the ceremonial practice of placing floral remembrances within the grave. The bearers were Samuel Conklin and Harry Sayles, sons-in-law of the deceased, and Mrs. Sheffield's four cousins—Elmer Whiting, Archie Scott, Ray Turner and Frank Hopkins. A. F. Wood was in charge of the arrangements. There was an unusual number of beautiful floral pieces.

This was a day—this Sunday—of mingled thanksgiving and disappointment. The thanks of a multitude went forth for the steady, heavy downpour of rain that definitely broke an unprecedented spring drought, relieving the danger of disastrous forest fires, and so saturating the soil as to remove the menace of lost crops. The disappointment was due to the severe handicap that the rain placed on the carrying out of the annual Memorial Sunday exercises for the honored dead at Dayville and South Killingly. Arrangements had to be rearranged and revised because of weather conditions, but the programs were carried out largely as they had been planned with the exception of curtailment of the outdoor planning.

Approximately 500 persons resident here and hereabouts have enjoyed brief aeroplane trips over the surrounding country during the past week, the majority of them taking their initiation rides in the air. It so happened that this rainy day balked the plans of many others to go aloft, and see what the countryside looks like from up above.

It was a matter of great disappointment today to the members of the Danielson Tri-Y club that Miss Margaret Slattery, Boston, famous author, lecturer and noted friend of youth, was obliged to cancel her scheduled appearances in Danielson this afternoon and evening, when she was to have been a figure in the annual Memorial Sunday union services at the Westfield Congregational church. Illness forced cancellation of her engagements here, and Miss Marjorie I. Gaffney of the Tri-Y club, the organization sponsoring Miss Slattery's coming to Danielson, said that the speaker's appearance will have to be deferred for about a year, so many and so pressing are the claims upon the time she has to give to her public work.

And now Danielson's taxi drivers are facing the prospect of being called upon the carpet, and advised that they must moderate their manner of operation or be summoned into court. They face what appears to be a blanket source of indictment. It is charged against them that they drive too fast through the business section, that they race through traffic wih unnecessary speed, that a group of them jointly sound their horns in disturbing manner going up to the high school for fares afternoons, etc., etc. Complaints about them have been coming in of late.

Hundreds of people here purchased and wore poppies Saturday from those aiding in the sale of them for the American Legion and its auxiliary. While the revenue must have been considerable, no data relative to the amount was available this afternoon, all reports not having been received.

PUTNAM CAR OVERTURNS ON PROVIDENCE PIKE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 25—Three Putnam young people escaped serious injury Saturday evening when a Ford sedan in which they were riding skidded on the soft shoulder of the road and overturned on the dangerous cemetery curve on the Providence pike, a short distance outside the village of Chepatchet. The car was being operated by William Jones of Main street. Jones escaped uninjured as did the others.

The accident was investigated by the state police at Chepacket who reported that Jones was operating at a moderate rate of speed. As he approached the curve, another car travelling in the opposite direction forced him to the sand covered shoulder in order to avoid collision. FORMER POLICE OFFICER ARRESTED IN RAID

At nine o'clock Saturday evening a raiding party of state troopers composed of Officers Royal V. Scranton and James E. Carmody, working under the direction of State Officer John T. Murphy visited stall "14", one of a score of stalls in the Bridge street garage building owned by Ferdinand Gagnon and rented by Benoit, and found the automobile shelter to be a camouflaged speakeasy, containing the customary barroom equipment and a substantial supply of anti-prohibition thirst quenching tonics, several cases of empty bottles and a bottle cooler. Stock seized by the troopers included 5 cases of home brew beer and a case containing about 10 pints of hard liquors.

The establishment was without a patron or a steward when the officers entered, but the former policeman arrived a few minutes later and admitted ownership of the stock and claimed to be the sole proprietor of the alleged beer parlor. Former Officer Benoit was discharged from the police department as the result of a political upheaval in the common council last January which also affected two other members. Since his involuntary retirement from the supernumerary police force, Benoit has been employed as a driver in the service of Peter Racette who operates a fleet of taxi cabs. Racette's quarters are located in the same building where the former patrolman was conducting the unlawful business.

Pays to Advertise

Less than a week ago, a Hopeville man, being desirous of selling an even dozen of pedigreed collie pups, recent arrivals in his kennels, put a for sale advertisement in The Bulletin. Six days sufficed to dispose of the two litters, with two men arriving Saturday afternoon for the last small chap. The advertiser closed a bargain with the first man who made known his errand, for the standard price. The second man, only a length behind the first, wanted the puppy badly, whereupon he made an offer to the new owner well in advance of the purchase price. The first owner assured the second owner that if he should sell to the would-be purchaser he could become owner again in a couple of weeks. A price was named and the small fuzzy puppy was transferred to its third owner, as he paid the second owner twice the amount received by the original owner.

Mrs. Dona Ballou, whose home on Green street presents a western view of the Aspinook reservoir, saw from her window what appeared to be a great fish floating down with the current. Procuring her binoculars, it was made out to be a great carp, fully three feet in length. At intervals the fish was able to right itself, which effort was accompanied by much circling and splashing. Nearing the canal grating, with the current moving faster, the carp, seeming to sense its danger, gave a lunge, turned flukes and disappeared. In substantiation of Game Warden C. B. Palmer's theory, arrived at Friday, it was found Sunday, that the dead and very weak fishes floating down the Quinebaug are all females, recalling the saying, "thin as a downstream shad." One day last summer, pickerel fishermen in Bennett's cove saw a great carp in shallow water, on the mud bottom under the lily pads, which they estimated would weigh 20 pounds. This one, like the others that were seen, refused to bite any sort of bait.

"If Anyone Wants to Know About Bon-Tone—Have Them Call Or Write to Me"

Mr. Jesse R. Flick, 1578 Main St., Hartford, states: "I am 72 years old and the results I have obtained from this Bon-Tone have made me feel years younger. I have not been well for the past four years. Rheumatism settled in both arms and my shoulders and neck. Why I couldn't raise either hand to my head to comb my hair without being in terrible pain, and I couldn't swing my hands back and forth without pain. I always had to be helped on with my coat, and even lifting my shovel was almost too painful, to say nothing of feeding my fires in my work as fireman. It was agony to roll over in bed, my arms, shoulders and neck pained so, and in addition to this my kidneys were in bad condition and the pains in my back helped to keep me from sleeping. My back ached so while at work that I could only stoop over with great difficulty and very often I would have to sit down. Constipation was another source of complaint and I was forever taking different laxatives. I certainly was very much discouraged—I had taken so many different remedies and used so many liniments without avail, but I heard so much about this Bon-Tone and read of so many Hartford people who were praising it that I decided to give it a trial, and how thankful I am for this decision. I am on my sixth bottle now and feel fine. Why, I think nothing of lifting the heaviest shovel of coal and throwing it on the fires. Constipation has been banished—I sleep days, but my sleep is unbroken now, as the rheumatic condition has been corrected and I don't have that awful backache either. If anyone wants to know why I recommend Bon-Tone all they have to do is to call on me or write"

There is a Bon-Tone Man in Norwich, at Smith's Pharmacy. Call on him and he will be only too glad to tell you more about this Tonic.

GETTING TREATY ACTION

President Hoover doesn't want a special session of the senate on his hands. He had experience with a special session of congress immediately after his inauguration and he knows how little it accomplishes and how much of a bother it can be.

On the other hand, he is desirous that the London treaty be disposed of. He knows with a reasonable degree of certainty that there are enough votes in the senate to insure its ratification. He knows that there is a definite effort being made to delay action on it in order to create time in which to create adverse sentiment, stir up opposition and bring about its defeat.

He is well aware of the fact that a policy of delay can be put into operation that will string out the hearings and prevent the treaty being brought up for action at the present session, which may end early in June. This power of obstruction rests in the hands of the minority, some of whom have been persistent opponents of the administration. There is a difference of opinion between the treaty supporters and the big-navy men. Certain of the latter are acting in accord with their convictions and nothing else. For some of the others there is less certainty, since they have been trouble makers and their attitude indicates that such a purpose actuates them now.

There are times when the president is helpless under such a situation, when he cannot speed up action, but in the present matter he hasn't played all his cards. He holds a powerful trump in his hand in the shape of the right to call a special session of the senate for the purpose of dealing with the treaty in case it is not acted upon in the regular session. With the knowledge that that will be done, the futility of the game of delay is recognized. There would be no advantage in delaying treaty action if that means forcing an almost immediate resumption of treaty consideration by the senate in special session. The fact is that the senate wants to shut up and go home quite as much as the house, but is far less ready to do so. With the possibility of a special session staring it in the face a different attitude should and probably will be forthcoming.

ROUTING NEW HIGHWAYS

There are many communities which can recall how strenuously they have objected to the construction of new highways that would carry the traffic around their borough, village or city. They objected because they believed it would deprive them of a certain amount of advertising and a share of business that is done by the highway users. Their objections were, therefore, generally respected.

Times have changed. Those communities which have insisted upon having more traffic in their streets have found that a large percentage of it never stops. It may take notice of attractive places, nice buildings, well-kept grounds, and keep them in mind, but it contributes little business. On the other hand, it necessitates the maintenance of traffic men, makes the erection of signal systems necessary, creates congestion in the highways calling for decreased parking and possibly wider streets, and adds greatly to the danger of those who must use the main street many times a day. This includes the children.

The consequence of this is that there has been a delayed recognition of the desirability of having the through traffic diverted around the community, an appreciation of the fact that those who want to stop will do so anyway and those who do not will be facilitated by keeping away from congested streets and the community itself will experience needed relief.

Those which have insisted upon and gotten the state roads through villages, boroughs and cities are destined to experience the undesirable features for some time to come. Those who are facing such highway construction have the opportunity to profit by the experience of others without going through it themselves. In some instances they are doing so by asking routes around them. Those which are insisting upon being on the new roads, even to the destruction of handsome village trees, future congestion, speeding and highway dangers are due for an awakening.

THE FLEXIBLE FEATURE

If the senate could have had its way there would have been no retreat from the insistence upon having a voice in the flexible clause of the tariff bill. It missed by a narrow margin and it is, therefore, the duty of the conferees to prepare such a compromise as they believe will satisfy and yet meet the requirements of such a clause.

The senate has shown objection to the complete authority which rests with the president and the fact that he is not obliged to act one way or the other upon such recommendations as the tariff commission makes. The president believes that the flexible provision should be retained for the purpose of correcting conditions which need it. The house supports him in that view. The senate wants the right to upset any such action as the president may take, thus leaving any such tariff change up in the air until the senate gets ready to act and, of course, opening up tariff revision all over again.

Washington reports indicate that the conference committee looks with favor upon a compromise that will put greater responsibility upon the tariff commission which, after a careful examination, will recommend changes in tariff rates to the president, who will be allowed time in which to study them. In case he does not approve or veto them in 60 days they will become law after another ten days.

It is to be expected that the tariff commission will carry on its work in a non-political manner and show conclusively what changes should be made and why. This would permit action to be taken as the result of economic changes and the correction of conditions which can be shown to be unjust. It would still leave the president in a position to insist upon the right thing being done and would permit of limited changes without congress being in session or without having the entire tariff subjected to revision just because one or more items needed adjustment.

WANTS THE FACTS

When Congressman Ramseyer of Iowa spoke in the house the other day he urged the abandonment of the idea of an investigation of communist propaganda in this country with particular reference to our educational institutions and the various groups and organizations affiliated with the communists.

When the house came to act it showed a vote nearly 12 to one in favor of the investigation and a committee of five will be named to conduct it.

The congressman from Iowa belittled the idea that communism had any future in this country. He said it was negligible in the west. It is not improbable that he knows what he is talking about in the west, but does he stand on as familiar ground concerning the east?

There have been demonstrations of certain kinds which have indicated that there was some foundation for the charges made against such an organization. The former police commissioner of New York takes a decidedly different attitude from the Iowa congressman. This is a large country and if there exist conditions in the large centers in the east which haven't extended to the west, and if those conditions are dangerous to the country, there is no time to shut our eyes and say they do not exist or are harmless.

Apparently the house believes that it is time to find out whether Commissioner Whalen's charges are true. There can be no harm in that. If they are without basis, no harm has been done. If they are substantiated, the time for counteracting any influences directed from another country looking to disorder here is at hand. The house apparently believes in finding out without delay just what the situation is.

CUTTING BOOK PRICES

That the book publishers of this country are headed for some bitter competition is indicated by the action which has been taken by one group in reducing the prices of books to a figure which it is believed will stimulate the purchase of more volumes by the public at a time when they are new instead of trying to stimulate sales after the books are old by putting them out at such a figure at bargain sales.

Others strenuously oppose any such move and will not become a party to it. With books, as with many other things, it has been found that the cutting of prices by certain sellers has raised havoc with the trade. It has had its discouragements and it is a common tendency when an effort is made to improve the situation by lowering the price and increasing the sales. Possibly the time will come when the newest and best of the books will be available at much more favorable prices, even though they are put on less expensive paper and with far less expensive covers.

Evidently the time has come when certain questions in the book publishing business must be threshed out, when a practical demonstration will have its effect upon the permanency of any radical change. Indications are that those who have gone in for the cut have not done so without believing that the trade demands different consideration, different encouragement, different methods of securing books. There will be a chance to show whether those who read will be enticed to buy and have their own instead of doing so much borrowing. Whether the increase in business that can be expected in this direction will be more than sufficient to make up for the reduction in price is one of the unknown quantities which at present hang in the balance.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: The population of this country would have been larger but for auto accidents.

Too many persons commit crimes they know will send them to prison, if caught, and after being sentenced pretend to wonder why they did it.

There was a gain of only 11 per cent in the Washington census. Probably the senate drove away the rest of the expected gain.

There is no evidence that Connecticut has waxed enthusiastic over the announced candidacy of Professor Levitt.

Let's have more of it, should be the insistent demand of Norwich voters after reading the financial report of the city for the past year under Mayor Robbins.

AIRMINDED

Dusk was rapidly closing over the landing field of the Avalon Air Transport company. The hangars were almost deserted. Ellen Norwood stood by the runway at the edge of the field looking for the one plane that was still aloft.

First appearing against the horizon as a tiny speck, hardly distinguishable, it grew larger as Ellen watched, and soon took on the familiar outlines of Russell Langdon's testing plane.

Ellen's heart quickened at the sight. Despite her qualms and fears about Russell flying so much she always felt a glow of pride when she saw his plane in the air. He was chief testing pilot of the company, and Ellen was aware of the dangers of that position. For almost a year, ever since they had been engaged, she had begged him to abandon it.

Russell brought his plane into the field at a steep glide, leveled it off and touched it to the earth so lightly that Ellen could barely hear the thud of the tail skid.

"Come on, Russell," she said as he joined her. "I have my car over here. I'll drive you back to the city."

On the way in she renewed her pleas. "Russell," she said, "I'm always so worried when you are flying. And after we are married it will be even worse. I wish you would give it up."

"There really isn't any danger, Ellen," he replied. "And the research work I am doing is going to develop some valuable patents. That will mean a lot for us, now that they have let me buy an interest in the company."

"But, Russell, I know that it is dangerous. I wouldn't mind it so much if I were with you. At least we would be together if anything happened. I think I'll learn to fly."

"No, Ellen. You are too precious to run any risks like that. Don't worry about me, though. I'll be careful."

One evening, about three months later, Russell brought his plane down into the field and taxied up to his hangars. As he climbed down from the cockpit he turned and patted the side of the ship. It was almost a caress. "Well, we've had some good rides together, old fellow. Looks like we're through now, though. The boss says he is going to pull me into the office."

He looked up suddenly. "Hello! What's this?" The drone of a high-speed motor had caught his ear. Far above, directly over the field, was a small plane. As he looked it slid over gracefully into a vertical bank, completed a few circles and then straightened up. The pilot was apparently out for a joy ride. The plane dipped slightly and then rose in a brisk zoom. It seemed to be climbing straight up until it was poised in the air. Suddenly the pilot kicked it over into a succession of wingovers, sliding off then into a fallen-leaf effect that soon brought it down to about a thousand feet. Russell turned to a mechanic who was also watching the maneuvers.

"That fellow is clever, all right. Do you know where he is from?"

"It looks like one of those new speed planes from over at Hubbard field," replied the man.

Russell looked up again. One wing tip was pointed skyward. The other was pointing straight down and the small plane was headed for the field in a fast sideslip.

Russell gave an admiring exclamation as the landing was completed. The ship stopped about fifty feet from where he stood. He started forward to greet the pilot and then stopped, amazed. It was a girl. She removed her helmet and goggles.

"Ellen!" he cried. "Why, when did you learn to fly? And don't you know you were taking some foolish chances just now?"

"Hello, Russell," she replied. "I've been spending a lot of time over at Hubbard field lately. If you are going to fly the rest of your life I am, too."

"But, dearest," he protested. "I'd be worried to death. And, besides, I am going to be in the office from now on. Promise me you will not fly any more, please."

"I'll stop entirely if you will, Russell," said Ellen.

"That's a bargain," he promised.

"I'm so glad, Russell," she said, "I didn't like it, anyway. I'd much rather cook."—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, May 25—If Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick achieves her ambition and becomes a senator from Illinois, she will find that despite its strictly masculine personnel all these years, the senate exhibits characteristics popularly held to be truly feminine.

During the 71st Congress, first regular session, it changed its mind on divers matters almost over night.

As a matter of fact, if women are to become "senators," the name ought to be changed. A woman senator would have been an impossibility back in Roman days from which that designation for a legislator is handed down. The Latin root word is "senis," an old man, according to Mr. Webster, hence the "elder statesman" way of referring to a legislative body that is senior in a governmental set-up.

Japan has a council of elder statesmen. The Roman idea seems to have been that only men of maturity and, presumably, of wisdom and well settled views, should compose the Roman senate. That does not imly a mind changing habit.

It's Something New

Nor has the United States senate heretofore exhibited much mind changing proclivity within the four corners of any particular session. Once an issue was brought to a vote, the roll called and the will of the senate thus determined, be the margin only a vote or two, subsequent proceedings turning on the same issue have been much expedited. Usually only a viva voce vote was followed with nobody actually voting "aye or "no." The vice president merely carried forward the results of the roll call decision and said either "the-ayes-have it" or "the-noes-have it." President Pro. Tem. George Moses can say that phrase so fast from practice that it sounds like one word. It was quite a time saver.

What a mess Vice President Curtis would have been in if he had assumed finality thus in a considerable number of tariff votes in the senate. Things shifted about so rapidly on disputed important rates that nobody knew what any roll call would show until it was over. If you were to take the charges of log-rolling so freely bandied about on the floor at face value, you could readily have imagined it was a "hoss tradin'" transaction going on, rather than the formal exercise of legislative judgment by grave and reverend senators.

Origins Repeal Case

As another illustration, take the national origins repeal case. Under the leadership of David Reed of Pennsylvania, backed by Joe Robinson of Arkansas, democratic chieftain, the original move to repeal that method of fixing immigration quotas, urged by President Hoover, was beaten back in the special session. With Reed and Robinson in London limitation naval building, the senate changed front on the first drive, only promptly to reverse itself and reinstate the national origins in a matter of hours.

Then senate seems to be getting younger or age has ceased to connote fixed views. The real explanation, no doubt, is that senators elected and not selected as of yore.

CHILD TRAINING

Children's Fears
Viola Woodville

Whenever you hear a mother say, "I nearly go wild when there's a storm, it frightens me so," you may be sure here children are afraid when there is wind or excessive rain.

A mother I know usually calls the children together when it rains and makes a pleasant occasion of the event. She shows them how the thirsty earth in drinking up the moisture and points out the reviving vegetation, if there is any green about. If there is not, she explains the phenomena of lightning and thunder, and interests the children in the origin of storms.

True, there are people who are supersensitive to atmospheric conditions, and there are others who have been in cyclones or have had unhappy experiences in storms; still, nervous affections are only increased by giving way to them and they need not be passed on to children.

Modern psychologists tell us that there are only three or four fears that are instinctive in children. The rest are instilled by parent, nurse, or other person. Take the fear of the dark for instance. This fear does not appear until the child is over two years old. Then gradually he receives the idea that all sorts of things lurk in darkness.

He ought not to get the idea, but if he does he must be trained as quickly as possible to think differently. The same imagination that pictures the dark peopled with horrors can be taught to feel that it is a hovering wing that protects the little bird-child while he sleeps. Or if the child is older, he could have a flashlight by his bed to turn on when he thinks harm is near. Probably he will not use it more than a few times, but the assurance that he has it there will bring him tranquil sleep.

Fear of animals is not instinctive in children. If a mother boasts that she has a spasm when a cat comes into the room or that the sight of a dog throws her into hysteria, her children are likely to imagine themselves so affected. It is a pity to deprive children of the pleasure and training that come with the care of pets. The mother ought to find some way to overcome her phobia if she has let it go so far, and certainly not pass it on to her children.

And then there is the world of mental fear that many children must live in! Dread of displeasing parents or teachers, fear of punishment, fear of failure to make grades or to pass examinations. I knew a teacher who prided herself that she never scolded or punished her children, yet never a day passed that she did not threaten them again and again with failure in their work.

"I tell you, children, just as sure as you live you're going to fail in arithmetic. You'll have to study day and night or you'll not pass, Tommy Watkins."

And the poor little wretch did fail. Some day all schools will be conducted on a basis of success instead of failure. Children will be given things that they can do, and tasks will be made harder as their capacity grows. But in the meantime they need not be frightened into failure.

Bad Breath More Than Social Error

Almost everyone is coming to realize nowadays that we usually have to go further than the mouth to find the real cause of bad breath. Bad breath is now regarded as a warning that something is wrong with our health—usually a badly clogged up system. When this is the case, by all means take some reliable laxative—preferable the delicious mint-flavored Feen-a-mint—the modern chewing gum laxative.

Feen-a-mint is specially designed to bring about thorough, distress-free bowel action and to help in cases of headache, coated tongue, billiousness and general bad health arising from constipation.

Because you CHEW Feen-a-mint it is effective in milder doses than ordinary laxatives. For the effectiveness of a laxative is not so much dependent upon the QUANTITY swallowed as upon the thoroughness of ITS DISTRIBUTION THROUGHOUT THE AILMENTARY TRACT.

While you chew this delicious bit of gum, the tasteless laxative it contains is gradually released and mixed with the saliva. Thus it is carried to the intestinal tract smoothly, evenly, without shock to the system or the distressing after-effects so common with old-fashioned laxatives. Each particle of the laxative in Feen-a-mint works with utmost efficiency, gently encouraging the intestinal muscles to resume the activity so necessary for healthful elimination.

The action of Feen-a-mint is thorough, gentle, dependable. With the proper dosage, it is not necessary to increase the amount of Feen-a-mint you take nor to switch to another laxative for a change. Feen-a-mint is harmless and contains no habit-forming drugs. Truly the HEALTH LAXATIVE. Ask for a package at any drug store.—Adv.

Nanny's Quick Wit

Alas, for those whose wits are slow!
Their chance is small to live or grow.
—Nanny Meadow Mouse.

A wandering Merry Little Breeze had done Nanny and Danny Meadow Mouse a good turn. It had brought them the scent of Reddy Fox and it had this just in time. So strong was that scent that Danny and Nanny knew that Reddy was very near. They would have to hide and hide quickly. Danny was in despair. This was a strange place to him and he didn't know a single hiding place close at hand. Perhaps Nanny read this in his face. Anyway, she took to her heels and ran past Danny.

"Follow me!" she squeaked.

Because he didn't know what else to do, Danny did follow her. He raced right along at her heels, wondering all the time where she was going. Straight to the foot of a certain tree she raced. Danny at her heels. This tree didn't row quite straight out of the ground. For a little way it slanted somewhat. Up the trunk of this tree Nanny led the way.

"Where are you going?" panted Danny.

Nanny didn't stop to reply. There was a grapevine twined in this tree. Up this vine Nanny climbed and Danny kept on because he knew he could go where Nanny could go and to remain below was to be gobbled up by Reddy Fox. Up they went and presently they came to a queer thing up there in that tree. At least Danny thought it was queer. It was a tin oil can—a gallon can with a round opening in one end. A little branch passed this opening. Nanny climbed up on this branch and poped into that opening. Danny followed. It was dark inside, but right away Danny discovered that there was a comfortable bed of dry grass there.

"W-what place is this?" panted Danny.

"A safe place," squeaked Nanny. "It's our new home. This is where we are going to live."

"I thought you didn't have a home," said Danny. "You said you were trying to decide whether to live in the bushes or out on the Green Meadows."

"So I was, Danny, so I was," replied Nanny. "You see, I hadn't thought of this place as a home. No, sir, I hadn't thought of it as a home. This old can was over on the Green Meadows when I first found it and I thought then it would make a wonderful home if only you were with me. Now I think just the same thing. You are with me and it would make a wonderful home. Just peep outside and look down."

Danny did as he was told. He poked his head out of the round opening and looked down. Then he drew back hurriedly. "He's there!" whispered Danny.

"Who is there?" whispered Nanny, pretending not to know.

Nanny chuckled. "We've got the finest home we've ever had, Danny Meadow Mouse," said she. "If this was on the ground, we should be quite safe inside it, for Reddy Fox tried to get me in it when it was on the ground. He couldn't. But he might have caught me by laying in wait outside until I had to come out. Up here we are quite safe, because always before we go down on the ground we can look all around. Nobody can get us up here. It's the safest place in all the Great World for us. We'll bring up a lot of grass and make the finest kind of a bed. Oh, Danny, I'm so glad you found me!"

"So am I," replied Danny in that squeaky little voice of his.

YOUR HEALTH

The Child's Recreation

By Edward J. Cummings, M. D., Washington, D. C.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

The health of our children is a matter not only of individual family concern, but also one of group or community concern. For many months in the year the child's activities are centered in the application and confinement of the class room. This life of confinement has its effect in depreciating the child's defensive ability to resist disease. As a consequence the question of how the child should spend his hours of recreation after leaving the class room is of prime importance.

In the first place, being mindful of the number of hours children must spend in the school, it should be the effort of every parent and every teacher to encourage the child to play in the open air in the hours after school. The reason for this is plain. During the hours of confinement the circulation is sluggish and the air cannot be as vitally pure as that out of doors where the changes are more frequent and the temperature different. It is a well recognized fact that people in the open receive better exchange of air in the lungs as well as a greater quickening and exhiliration of the circulation. The growing body of the child needs the best and should get the best.

But one of the very popular methods of seeking diversion and recreation after leaving the class room is attendance at moving picture theaters. This method of diversion is unquestionably a very potent influence on our national life, and on our national education and moulding of character. So let us consider several health factors involved.

It is obvious that afternoon hours spent in movies are taken from exercise and play time.

In crowds at movie theaters there is potential danger at all times to every child that attends. There is exposure to the contagious disease and colds of adults who may be coughing, sneezing, or blowing the nasal secretions within close range of the child. In this manner much disease is spread.

The eyes of children must be considered. The average child would not suffer to any great degree in this respect, but a child who is near sighted may be definitely affected. The eyes of children who are far sighted or have some unrecognized astigmatism are also affected by strain. The strain on children's eyes at movies is greater than commonly recognized. In the case of those whose vision is not normal the eye strain may affect the temperament, making the child irritable and fatigued.

Children need plenty of sleep, and evening movies interfere with that.

I would not advise that parents ban the movies completely, but I would advise that they temper and control such activities. Do not for selfish motives pack the child off to the movies to sit for several hours during the day or evening as is done by many parents. Child development is what makes the man or woman of the future, and you are responsible for your children!

I make no attempt to refer to the moral and social effect of movies, but confine myself to the physical results.

In a little Scotch town there lived old Andy who was what is called in some parts a "natural." He was simple minded, and the villagers used to show him off to visitors by offering him two coins, a big copper penny and a small silver sixpence. Andy would invariably take the penny.

One day an American said to him: "Say, Andy, don't you know the difference between a penny and a sixpence?"

"Aye," said Andy, "I ken the difference between the penny and the sixpence, but if I took the sixpence once, they'd never offer me either one again."—Montreal Star.

POETRY

As The Shadows Lengthen
With apologies to H. F. Lyte

However high or low our earthly state,
Although a pauper or a potentate,
We humbly pray, devoid of all our pride:
"Abide with me! Fast falls the eventide."

However strong, however frail or weak,
That day shall come when we pray, hopeless, meek:
"Abide with me! Fast falls the eventide,
The darkness deepens; Lord, with me abide!"

When youth has faded, years have passed away,
And "to its close ebbs out life's little day,"
We place our faith, we place our trust in thee,
"When other helpers fail and comforts flee."

Abide with me! Friend, Father of us all,
Who watcheth o'er a sparrow in its fall;
"When other helpers fail and comforts flee,
Help of the helpless, oh abide with me!"

Wedding Rehearsal

Spring and summer will be wed!
Spring is wearing on her head
Blossoms from the apple trees,
And her veil's an April breeze
From her fragrant hand she spills
Violets and daffodils
As she dreams upon the hills!

Summer, too, is young and fair,
With a crown, upon his hair
Spun of sunshine, purest gold!
His white hands, so strong and bold,
Spring's shy fingers now enfold,
All the bridesmaids to the bower
Come with gifts of joy to shower

They rehearse the wedding now!
Roses curtsey; tall trees bow;
Summer will his bride endow,
To his sweetheart shall be lean;
Now a princess, then a queen.
When, beneath the bright May sun
Spring and summer are made one!

Sportive crows are said to have amused curious spectators lately by using ice cakes in the Connecticut river near Turners falls to "shoot-the-chute." Even a barber can not make Col. Lindbergh talk. The famous colonel entered a San Francisco barber shop and was allocated to a chair presided over by Gus Krupa, who prides himself on his ability to make interesting conversation for his clients. "Hair-cut," five "Uh-huhs," one "No," one "Nice country" and one "Can't say," was all the help Gus received from Lindbergh. After his customer had departed, Gus, juggling a generous tip in gesticulating hands remarked: "Well, I guess reporters are not so dumb after all."

Life Was a Misery

"Before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was weak and run-down, could not sleep and had troubles which come at my age (forty-three). Life was a misery. Nothing did me any good until I tried the Vegetable Compound. I am on my third bottle and I cannot recommend it too highly. I feel like a new person and I really think I would have been dead if I had not taken it. I think every lady ought to take it at the Change."—*Mrs. Eunice M. MOTORISTS ACT TO REDUCE ACCIDENT HAZARDS

Connecticut motorists and others who participate in the state's traffic are voluntarily taking an increased interest in efforts to reduce reckless and improper motor vehicle driving. Many operators are closely watching the driving habits of others, and during recent weeks there has been an influx of complaints to the state motor vehicle department. A wide variety of offenses are reported and accurate information, in most cases, is supplied concerning the offenders and their car.s

The motor vehicle department is cooperating in every way possible with those who make the complaints. Action of some sort is taken in every case, except when the information supplied is obviously incorrect or so indefininte that it is impossible to proceed. About 30 per cent. of all those complained of are called in for hearings or conference.

The reasons for complaints do not vary greatly from month to month, the same offenses appearing regularly in about the same number. Reckless cutting in and out in traffic is the cause of more complaints than any other violation, but other types of reckless driving are frequently reported. There were 62 reasons for complaints last year. A majority of these parallel closely the frequent causes of accidents.

Not all complaints are concerned with driving, however, many refer to illegal or defective equipment. Unnecessary noise and abusive language often arouse indignation. Overloading and exceeding of seating capacity of vehicles has been criticized. Reports are received of illegal tampering with motor vehicles. One complaint was concerned with private property which obstructed the vision of motorists on the highway. A fairly large percentage of those complained against each month are drivers from other states.

PLANE WITH REGISTERED MAIL IS FORCED DOWN ON FARM IN PRESTON

The crew of three men in a plane of Colonial Airways Mail, No. 1, escaped injury but the plane was wrecked when it was forced down Sunday afternoon about 1:30 on a farm in the town of Preston near the North Stonington line. The aircraft was carrying a pouch of registered mail from Boston to New York.

The plane came down in a heavy rainstorm, being considerably off its course from Boston to New York, and having trouble because of water in the engine. The landing was made on the former Anna farm, now occupied by Mrs. William Sutkochi, about two miles from Preston City, on the road between Glasgo and Voluntown.

It was raining heavily at the time and visibility was poor, so that the plane came down in a swamp spot near a brook, nosed over and smashed a wheel and one wing. The place of the crash was about a mile from the farm of Flood E. Reed, where it was heard circling around for several minutes before it landed.

Shortly after crashing the crew of three was taken in an automobile to the Lewis sawmill, whence they telephoned to Postmaster Casper K. Bailey, who drove out there to secure the mail pouch, which he brought to the post office here and will forward to New York today (Monday).

The names of the crew were not learned but it was understood one was named Mann and that they all are residents of Boston. It could not be learned whether they stayed in Norwich over night.

BACCALAUREATE SERMON FOR GRADUATING NURSES

The graduating class of nurses of the William W. Backus hospital training school for nurses attended the United Congregational church Sunday evening for the baccalaurate sermon in connection with the nurses' graduation exercises to be held this (Monday) evening at the Samuel Huntington school, Norwich Town. The baccalaureate sermon was by the pastor, Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, an address that was most inspiring and contained much helpful advice. Upon the altar was a beautiful assortment of seasonal flowers, the gift of the hospital students.

Following the organ prelude, the members of the graduating class, with all the nurses at the hospital with the exception of those on night duty and representatives of the alumnae, marched into the church and took their seats in the reserved section at the front of the center section. The body of nurses offered a particularly pleasing sight, all of them being attired in their white uniforms. Among the hospital officials attending were Miss Lucy B. Abbott, superintendent, Miss Grace Anslow, superintendent of nurses, Dr. William Wener, interne, Miss Ellen Powers, instructor of nurses, and Miss Kate Perry, operating nurse.

In his baccalaureate sermon, the text of which was taken from the 24th psalm, Rev. Mr. Abbott pointed out that the most important line in this passage was that "passing through the valley of weeping they made it a place of spring." He stressed the point that radiance does not issue from a person who does slipshod work, but radiance that is great issues from work that has been well done. Rev. Mr. Abbott cited two examples of work that had been performed, not in a casual or haphazard way, but very carefully, this by Charles Darwin and Sir Arthur Thompson, who cast radiance all over the world. He told the nurses that it was their privilege to change weeping to places of spring, but he advised them that this is only accomplished by doing it with the utmost care and thoroughly.

The vested choir led in the singing of hymns and the nurses sang the school song during the service, and the nurses left the church with the pastor and the choir when the recessional hymn was given.

The members of the class are Dorothy Louise Malcolm, Norwich; Alice May Glasbrenner, Montville; Edna Mildred Holmberg, Norwich; Doris Bliss, Jewett City; Helen Anna May Ravenelle, Norwich; Frances Sweet, Jewett City; Viola Green, Willimantic; Elizabeth Hall Boynton, Norwich; Regina Rose Gutneckt, Jewett City; Bessie Goldblatt, Norwich.

Mrs. Henrietta Riese, chairman of the hospital auxiliary, was in charge of the transportation of the nurses to and from the institution. Among those who kindly loaned their cars were Mrs. Riese, Mrs. Walter F. Lester, H. F. Dawley, Dr. R. R. Agnew, Mrs. Archibald Torrance, Don Houghton and Shepard B. Palmer.

At the nurses' home Friday evening the class gave a largely attended dance, the music for which was performed by a well known orchestra. The decorations, attractively arranged by members of the class included balloons and flowers, the color scheme being green and white, the class colors.

Rabbi Feldman spoke of the unity in Israel caused by the Allied Jewish campaign, all elements uniting to bring aid to their people in eastern Europe and Palestine.

Rabbi Teitlebaum spoke in an especially interesting way of what he had seen during a recent tour in eastern Europe and Palestine. He told of what had been done in Europe through the joint distribution fund and the pioneer work in Palestine in reclaiming waste lands and other developments

A border of red geraniums which has been set out along the highway walk makes a neat and attractive appearance, which is remarked upon by motorists who drive by.

PRESENTED AMERICAN FLAG TO NORWICH TOWN CHURCH

Most impressive patriotic services were carried out at the First Congregational church, Norwich Town, Sunday morning, when in observance of Memorial Sunday, members of Sedgwick Post, G. A. R., Woman's Relief Corps, and Daughters and Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil war, were specially invited guests of the church. Commander George Crocker of Sedgwick Post, G. A. R., was included in the large attendance. A special feature of the service was the presentation of a United States flag to the church by Mrs. E. Grace Fowler, patriotic instructor of the Woman's Relief corps, in behalf of the corps of which Mrs. Iola Bjurstrom is president.

Prior to the service Mrs. Fowler placed the flag, a large one, on the church platform. The color bearers assisting in the ceremony were: First, Mrs. Jayne Seed; second, Mrs. Annie Turner; third, Mrs. Vinnie Wilson; and fourth, Mrs. Myrtice Tibbitts. The women were all dressed in white making an attractive picture.

The retiring pastor of the church, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, spoke from the text II King's 6:16, For they that be with us are more than they that be with them. The service was formally opened when the organization marched into the church singing Onward Christian Soldiers, the patriotic instructor and her color bearers taking their stand in front of the pulpit, where they were met by Rev. Mr. Bailey. The flag was presented immediately after and before the visitors took their seats.

In making the presentation Mrs. Fowler spoke as follows:

"It is indeed a pleasure for me to be here this morning as patriotic instructor of Sedgwick Woman's Relief corps, No. 16, to bring you as a gift our beloved United States flag. No other flag carries such hope, such grandure of spirit, such soul inspiring faith. How glorious has been its origin, how glorious has been its history, how divine its meaning. It stands for all that we hold dear, freedom, democracy, government of the people, by the people, for the people, these, are the great principles for which the flag stands, and when that democracy, that freedom and that government of the people are in danger, then it is our duty to defend the flag and keep it soaring as it soars today, undimmed and unsullied, victorious over the years. We must be ready to defend it, and like the men of '76 and '61 pledge to it our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor.

"Lead glorious flag, encircled by our love. Lead thou us on, tho skies grow dark and stars are hid above, Lead thou us on, keep thou our hearts, our footsteps guard and guide, in peace with thee may all earths flags abide.

"For thy red stripes, hearts blood hath poured like rain, yet lead us on, a million men for thy bright stars were slain, yet, lead us on. Lead now to peace, for brighter light appears, Lead, glorious flag, through all the coming years.

"Rev. Mr. Bailey, it is with a feeling of pride that I present to you and to the First Congregational church of Norwich Town, in behalf of Sedgwick Woman's Relief corps, No. 16, auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic, this beautiful flag, the flag of our country."

This was followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Bailey, who in receiving the flag extended most hearty thanks and gratitude in behalf of the church and its membership. In the course of his remarks, he stated that the founders of this church stood for such ideals and that they came across for that freedom. It is interesting to note that the first pastor of this church and the military governor laid out the city of Norwich from a point near this church.

Rev. Mr. Bailey emphasized the beauty and splendor of the colors, saying that he was not only glad to have it for its beauty, but for what it stood for. In closing, he again thanked the Woman's Relief corps for its generous gift.

DANIELSON CADET TO GRADUATE AT WEST POINT MILITARY ACADEMY

In the 1930 graduating class of 242 cadets at the U. S. military academy at West Point who will receive their diplomas on June 12 from the secretary of war, Colonel Patrick J. Hurley, are four residents of Connecticut. They are Harry R. Boyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Boyd, 19 South Main street, Danielson; Philip C. Wehle, son of John W. Wehle, 4 Maple street, Norwalk; Frederick J. Crabb, Jr., son of F. G. Crabb, 91 Barnett street, New Haven and Frank Kowalski, Jr., brother of Mrs. V. Scotnicki, 2 Woodly Court, Meriden, Connecticut.

Harry R. Boyd was appointed to West Point by Representative Richard P. Freeman of the 2nd district. Boyd, prior to entering West Point, spent a year at Northeastern university, Boston, and will probably graduate in the upper half of his class of 242 cadets. He has applied for a commission in the coast artillery and next fall will be ordered to join either a heavy artillery, anti-aircraft artillery or mine planter organization.

Graduation exercises, marking the end of four years' work will be held at the base of Battle Monument on historic Trophy Point overlooking the Hudson. On the evening of June 11th preceding graduation day the final paarde of the class of 1930 will be held. After marching onto the parade ground with his company the command "Front and Center" will be given and the entire class of 242 cadets will form in one long line extending clear across the plain. The class will then march across the parade ground, halt and review the remaining three classes. As the Corps pass, the graduates will uncover.

Immediately after the formal exercises, the new second lieutenants with their glistening gold bars will be granted a three months' leave of absence. Sometime during the summer, usually early in August, they will receive orders from the war department assigning them to stations with various regular army organizations. Although graduates are usually sent to posts in the United States, occasionally the war department finds it necessary to assign a few to foreign service.

Major General William R. Smith, superintendent of the military academy, in commenting on the exercises said, "This will be the 128th class to graduate and will bring the total number of graduates since 1802 up to 9030. The first graduating class contained two men, one of whom, Joseph G. Swift, late became superintendent. In the first ten years of the Academy's existence from 1802 to 1812, 88 cadets were graduated. They had been admitted without mental or physical examination and ages at entrance ran from 12 to 34. In those early days one cadet with a wooden leg was appointed.

"When a young man enters West Point he starts with a clean book of life and everything written on its pages is the result of his own actions in the ensuing four years. In attaining this equality we rigidly prescribe every article of clothing a cadet must have in his possession, prohibit them from having money at any time while on the reservation and insist on every cadet taking the same course of instruction. This includes military drills in every combatant branch of the army, academic work and intramural athletics.

"During the academic year which extends from September 1st to June 1st, cadets are required to be in their rooms studying every night from 7:15 p. m. until 9:30 p. m. when tattoo is sounded. Then if they desire they may go to bed, read, or write letters until 10:00 p. m., when taps sounds and the cadet day is finished. Reveille is at 6:00 a. m.

"Saturday nights are the only evenings during the academic year when cadets are free to attend moving pictures on the post or attend Cadet Hops in Cullum Hall.

"During the summer academic work is suspended and the entire morning is devoted to military work in various branches. Afternoons except for evening parade are free as are the evenings.

"While the four years spent at West Point by cadets require intensive application to studies and drills we realize that 'all work and no play' would be most harmful. Their recreational needs are constantly considered and provided for throughout the entire year."

ACADEMY PLAYS DUMB BASEBALL TO LOSE SECOND GAME TO BULKELEY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 24—Playing miserable ball behind some good pitching by Boots Greene and Butsy Weisgraber, Norwich Free Academy handed Bulkeley the second game of their series on a silver platter at Mercer field Saturday afternoon and for the first time since 1924 enabled the Tigers to sweep their annual two-game affair. The score was 13 to 5 and the game saw the Rose Cityites give about as poor exhibition as a Wildcat team has ever turned in.

Bulkeley Plays Smart Ball

Bulkeley got the jump by scoring five runs on only one hit in the first inning and thereafter had little trouble in making a runaway of it. While the Academy was doing most everything wrong, Bulkeley was playing wide-awake ball, taking advantage of every break and converting them into runs.

Eugene Callahan, lanky righthander, scored his second victory in a week over N. F. A., holding them to eight hits and receiving great support from his team in every inning but the ninth when the infield relaxed to the extent of letting in three harmless runs. But, still Callahan had nothing on the two Norwich hurlers who pitched what should have been winning games. Bulkeley was outhit, 8 to 7. Greene allowed five hits in the first four innings, during which time nine runs came across and Weisgraber yielded only two hits during the last four frames, during which time he was the victim of four tallies.

Arico Plays Brilliantly

Alec Arico, first baseman, was about the only ray of light on the Academy side. Alec was in there playing the game every minute, playing his usual first-class fielding game besides driving out two line singles, scoring a run and driving one in. Chubby Gibbs showed a nice fielding game but could not solve Callahan's delivery, for after beating out an infield hit his first time up, he fanned three times, twice with men on bases.

Eight errors were made by the team and Fontaine was the chief offender with three terrible throws to second that went away in center, all at critical times. Whether it was stage-fright or something else, it surely was an entirely different team in there Saturday from the one which looked so good in winning the first eleven games. They committed the worst kind of "bones" and they were too numerous to set down individually.

It could be seen right in the first inning that it was going to be a hectic day for Academy followers when Bulkeley was presented with five runs on a lone hit. John Murphy hit one to Breen who fumbled. Halifteras bunted and Fontaine threw to second too late to get Murphy. Buonano bunted and Fontaine, with the man almost on the bag, threw to third to try to get Murphy so the bases were filled with none out. Barclay forced Murphy at the plate, Gibbs to Fontaine but the fun was renewed when Gigliotti bunted and Arico's throw to the plate was too late to get Halifteras. Beebe hit one to right that looked like a single when it left the bat but the ball bounded away from Flather and rolled to the fence for three bases, cleaning the sacks. Joe Murphy then squeezed Beebe home.

Errors! Errors! Errors!

Three errors, two by Weisgraber and one by Fontaine let in the sixth run in the second and a pass, error and mis-judged fly one more in the third. Two more errors, a wild pitch, a double and a single netted two more to run the count up to nine by the fourth.

Weisgraber went to the mound and fanned the side in the fifth and also got them in order in the sixth before Bulkeley started in where they left off scoring two each in the seventh and eighth; in the former inning on a hit batsman, single, error and steal and in the eighth on one hit, pass, another error and a sacrifice hit. One came when Fontaine thinking there were three out, when there were only two, rolled the ball to the box and Brennan walked in.

The Academy scored one each in the fourth and seventh in addition to their trio in the ninth. In the fourth Arico singled to center, to start off, and Pepin walked. Then, with two out, Breen singled to left. In the seventh Reardon opened with a double and came in on Arico's hit to left. In the ninth Fontaine beat out an infield hit. Breen hit to John Murphy, who threw to second for a forceout only to have Brennan drop the ball. Weisgraber hit to Joe Murphy and Brennan also dropped his throw, letting in Fontaine and when the ball rolled to center field Breen then came in. Weisgraber went to third on Berginzo's tap which stopped dead on the third baseline while Bulkeley waited for it to roll out and Butsy scored on an infield out.

Third Defeat

This was the third defeat for the team in 14 games and these all have come within these last five starts. By losing to Bulkeley twice they have practically eliminated themselves from the championship of the Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island league, which they held for five straight years, from 1925 to 1929, inclusive. If they had only made a fight for the game, but to give it away like they did is pretty discouraging to their followers.

CHICAGO, May 25—(AP)—The league-leading St. Louis Cardinals rallied for four runs in the seventh inning today to defeat the Cubs, 6 to 3, in their one day series.

CRITZ'S ERROR GIVES BROOKLYN A VICTORY

BROOKLYN, N. Y., May 25.—(AP)—An error by Hughey Critz permitted the Robins to win a 4 to 3 decision over the New York Giants here today after Adolfo Luque, veteran Cuban pitcher, held the men of McGraw to four hits in ten innings.

Frederick and Gilbert led off with singles. Herman sacrificed, Flowers rapped sharply to Critz, who, with a play at the plate in prospect, fumbled.

An error by Flowers in the eighth, coupled with three of the Giant hits, permitted the Giants to score three runs and carry the game into overtime.

Spencer, who went to the hill for the Pirates after the Reds had knotted the count in the first game by scoring twice in the ninth off Kremer, tripled and scored the winning tally on Grantham's sacrifice. Larry Benton, former Giant hurler, pitching his first game for the Reds, turned in a fair exhibition in the first game but was taken out in the ninth for a pinch hitter.

Good Morning, Folks.

Here I am back on the job after a vacation of four weeks. And I hope you enjoyed the rest as much as I.

The man that instituted vacations sure knew what he was doing. A vacation spent running here and there trying to do the things you've wanted to do certainly teaches you to appreciate the peace and quiet of your job.

When I started on the vacation I thought of a hundred and one things I wanted to do and places I wanted to go. Well, I did the best I could but about 90 per cent will have to wait until next year.

There's one trip that I made that taught me to appreciate little old Norwich. I spent a coupla days in New York, which was plenty. Sure I had a corking good time and I'd go again but as for living in that turmoil, count me out.

After a day of dodging trucks and taxis, going up and down in elevators and being insulted by waiters I was mighty thankful I was going back to the sticks. And from what I saw of people there I should say that a coupla of years in the country would do them good.

And how hard they try to have a good time. They rush here and there in search of a new thrill and never find it. Just listen to the conversation of two sleepy-eyed men as they go to work on the morning after.

The gist of the conversation runs something like this: "Mornin' Henry, where didja go last night?" "Oh," says Henry, "I went down to the Golden Galosh and had a terrible time. The liquor's rotten and the orchestra is worse. But I met a new dame down there and she's a pip. What did you do?"

"Oh, I took a night off and stayed to home and had a few of the boys in and we tossed the pasteboards about for a time. Tame evening, I went to bed at 2 o'clock. I can't get a thrill outa poker no more."

And so it went. Everybody after a new thrill and never finding it but still hoping it's just around the corner. Everybody in a hurry to get some place whether business or pleasure bent. Every man for himself and the devil take the weakling.

It was this infernal hustle and bustle, clatter and clang that gave me all I want of the big town in two days. And hot. Boy, we don't know what heat is up here in the woods. And the reek of burnt gasoline and other odors I could' identify.

That's why I'm glad I live in a small town where you have time to say "Howdy, Mabel, how's the baby?" and have time to listen to her story of how the baby had croup last night but is all right now.

And you golfers don't know how lucky you are with a club in your own back yard as it were. Imagine having to drive 20 or 30 miles out of town for a round of golf. You're tired before you get there.

And do the New Yorkers like living in New York? They don't. One man said to me. "If I could make only the money I do here in a year I'd move right up to Norwich tomorrow."

LYONS WINS 6TH STRAIGHT VICTORY, BEATING INDIANS

CLEVELAND, May 25.—(AP)—Ted Lyons won his sixth straight victory and brought his record for the season to eight wins and one defeat when he held the Indians to four hits here today and beat them 9 to 1.

ATHLETICS HALT YANKEES AFTER FOUR DEFEATS

NEW YORK, May 25.—(AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics finally halted the Yankee sluggers today after four straight defeats and won the final game of their series, 10 to 3.

Leroy Mahaffey, recruit right hander, turned the trick where his more famous mates had failed, holding New York to seven hits and shutting out Babe Ruth entire. Tony Lazzeri and Dusty Cooke made the only Yankee homers, both in the fourth inning.

George Pipgras, who started for New York, was wild and Roy Sherid not much better. Ed Wells finally finished the game. The score:

JONES FAVORITE TO WIN BRITISH AMATEUR TITLE WHICH STARTS TODAY

)By Frank H. King, Associated Press Staff Writer)

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, May 25—(AP)—Sunday is a rest day in St. Andrews although the world of golf, including America's victorious Walker cup team has come to the old grey town of Fifeshire for the British amateur championship starting tomorrow.

By law not a single golf shot violates the Sabbath peacefulness of the game's ancient shrine. Six days a week the famous stretch of links land from Swilken burn to Eden Firth is a golf course but on the seventh it is only a promenade for townsfolk and cosmopolitan visitors alike.

Hands that itch for golf on Sunday here must be taken to Glen Eagles sixty miles into the Highlands and there most of the Americans, including Bobby Jones, motored today. Only a few of them, however, played golf over the Highland fairways which differ so much from the terrain of St. Andrews.

Laws can't silence golf gossip and on the eve of what is likely to be a most spectacular tournament, the talk of the town revolves about Bobby Jones and his chances of capturing the only major golf title which has evaded his magic clubs. Not because Jones is the only American capable of winning but because, to Scots, the Atlantan is the world's greatest exponent of their national pastime. Their interest in his forthcoming matches will be almost as intense as in his own town and country.

In medal play or 36-hole matches, little doubt would exist that Jones would be the possessor of the title by Saturday night but British tradition is that 18-hole matches and a 36-hole final best expresses the spirit of golf and by that test Jones will win or lose. His test this week is to win seven 18-hole matches in four days—he has no match on Tuesday—then play the 36 hole finals on Saturday.

RIVERVIEW RALLIES IN 8TH TO BEAT COAST GUARD

An eight-run rally in the eighth inning gave the Riverview club a 9 to 2 victory over the Coast Guard Destroyer team Saturday afternoon at the State Hospital diamond. The Coast Guard scored two runs in the second inning and looked like sure winners until the Riverview boys launched their attack in the eighth frame. Some heavy hitting and a little loose playing by the invading forces gave Riverview their chance. The score:

WASHINGTON, May 25. — (AP) — Washington made it five in a row over Boston today. Marberry holding the visitors to three hits. The score was 5 to 0.

Sammy West and Sam Rice led the Washington attack and accounted for most of the scoring. Marberry scattered the three blows of Boston and never was in danger. The score.

ATTRACTIVE BOXING CARD SLATED FOR MAJESTIC ROOF ON THURSDAY

Promoter Jackie Burns has arranged a very attractive boxing card for his opening show atop the Majestic roof next Thursday night. Burns has arranged for 34 rounds spread out over six bouts, five six rounders and an opening four rounder.

Appearing on the card are two local favorites, Tommy McCarthy and Jimmy Quinn. It will be Quinn's first professional bout since deserting the simon-pures a month or so ago. Quinn will box Joe Sposato of Westerly, another amateur product who could not resist the call of the professional ring. Jimmy went big in the amateurs, winning the state featherweight title and being a strong bidder for the New England as well as the national featherweight crowns. McCarthy has not fought in Norwich for some months but has been a favorite at the Laurel Garden in Newark where he has fought several times.

For the main bout Promoter Burns has brought on Matty Owens of New Bedford to box K. O. Bristol Brown of Bristol, R. I. Neither boy is a stranger to local fans for both have fought several times in New London.

The other bouts on the card are: Johnny Murphy of Providence vs. Young Phillips of New London; Young Fuzaro of Fall River vs. Al Walker of New Bedford; Jack Monty of Providence vs. Tommy McCarthy of Norwich, and Larry McManus of Providence vs. Johnny Rish of New Bedford.

SHYMA TEAM HANDS ALL STARS SEVERE TROUNCING

The Norwich All Stars furnished poor opposition against the Shyma club nine Saturday afternoon at the Providence street grounds and were trounced the one sided score of 18 to 3. Dudek, pitching for the winners, had an easy time turning back the locals, allowing only six hits and fanning eight. His teammates, although making five errors, more than made up for this in their hitting, banging out 19 safe blows, seven of which were for extra bases. Dudek retired in the ninth inning to let Red Burelle's younger brother try his hand at hurling and he did fairly well, after playing a poor game in the field, making two errors.

The Taftville club plays its next game Friday, with the Holy Name society of Jewett City, one of the strongest amateur teams in the section. It will be a double header. The score:

KAPLAN-MEDILL BOUT IS TONIGHT'S CONN. FEATURE

HARTFORD, May 25.—Kid Kaplan, of Hartford, former world's featherweight champion, makes his first appearance in a Hartford ring in four years tonight when he battles Joey Medill of Chicago, in the star bout of ten rounds at the Hurley Stadium in East Hartford. The bout, which is down for ten rounds, is a re-match, Kaplan having won the decision over the Windy City lightweight a year ago in a close, hard battle.

Both Kaplan and Medill are in good battle trim: they finished their training yesterday at the St. Nick gym. It is expected that Medill will weigh about 137 and Kaplan 135.

A kayo is expected in the semi-final in which stiff punchers will meet, Battling Tracey of New York and Joe Smith of Hartford, who is one of the hardest hitters ever developed in Hartford.

The card is made up of 40 rounds of boxing: the semi-final is down for eight rounds, there is a special eight round bout between Eddie Reed of Hartford and Johnny Pena of New York, a six and two fours.

N. GROSVENORDALE TEAM WINS NORTHERN Y CHAMPIONSHIP

(Special to The Bulletin.)

A., announced that the Brown team (they are named for colleges) of North Grosvenordale team of the Northern division of the county "Y" league has won the division championship. This team will play at Goodyear, June 2, with Plainfield, in the first game of the Junior World's series. This is the last week of scheduled games of the league. New York, named for a major league team, seems in line to win in the central division, that includes Danielson. League games are scheduled for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. In the southern division, Plainfield leads the standing with five games won and one lost, Moosup second with three won and two lost, Wauregan third with two won and two lost and Sterling fourth, with one won and four lost.

ACADEMY HAS THREE HOME GAMES THIS WEEK

The busiest week of the season faces the Academy baseball team with games scheduled on Tuesday, Friday and Saturday and all at home. Tuesday Windham comes for a league game. Friday Warren Harding of Bridgeport is here for the annual Memorial day classic and then Saturday, New Britain, which on Saturday broke New Haven Hillhouse's long string of victories.

The pitching selections are an open question as both Greene and Weisgraber pitched four innings against Bulkeley Saturday. The Wildcats beat Windham in Willimantic earlier in the season, 7 to 1, scoring five of their runs in the last two innings after being unable to solve Carl Johnson, the Windham pitcher. It is expected that Johnson will pitch again tomorrow.

SCHMELING USES HIS SPARRING PARTNERS ROUGH

ENDICOTT, N. Y., May 25.—(AP)—Max Schmeling, who has been practising a defense against a left jab and sharpening up his boxing for several days, unlimbered the heavy artillery today and twice knocked down Jack Demave.

Schmeling dropped Demave with a crashing right to the jaw and after the big blonde had been brought around and given a minute's rest, sent him through the ropes and flat on his back with another right.

The German's training program for the Sharkey fight also included a round of boxing with Stanley Pureda, two with George Neron and two with Rocky Adams.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

The color and romantic flavor usually associated with the pictures of Ramon Novarro are again to be found in profusion in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star's latest all-talking and singing production, "In Gay Madrid," at the Palace theatre now.

Laid in a picturesque setting with gay Spanish costumes and charming music, the story tells of Ricardo, son of the Marquis de Castelar, who because of his wild escapades in Madrid with the dancer Goyita, is sent to a small university at Santiago where he promptly falls in love with the beautiful Carmina. His father favors the match and they are about to announce their engagement when the jealous Goyita comes from Madrid, hides herself in Ricardo's rooms and is subsequently discovered in his bed. The climax results when Carmina's brother challenges Ricardo to a duel to avenge the insult and almost kills him. But the complications are cleared up and all's well that ends well.

Novarro as the rollicking Ricardo gives a dashing, romantic performance, while his sense of humor makes itself even more apparent than in "Devil May Care." His appealing personality makes his songs seem doubly charming, the young Latin having a certain knack of putting over intimate melodies which accounts for no small amount of his attraction. "Dark Night," "Let Me Give You Love," "Santiago," "Into My Heart," "Wine, Woman and Song" and "Smile Comrades" are all splendid numbers.

As added features the patrons enjoy two Vitaphone specials as well as a technicolor special and the well-known comedy team, Laurel and Hardy, in their latest and greatest riot, "Hay-Wire," a fitting climax to a perfect show.

Broadway Theatre

So small a thing as five aces carelessly dealt by a crooked gambler started a train of startling events that sent a happy-go-lucky kid galloping across the southern border with a price on his head! Just one of the blood-racing highlights in Gary Cooper's newest outdoor drama, "The Texan," now delighting audiences at the cool Broadway. Chucked bodily into a series of wild adventures that yanked him from his native Texas plains, across the Gulf on a pounding windjammer to a South American port, and then onto the limitless pampas, Cooper as the "Llano Kid," rechristened the "Texan," fresh from his triumphs in "The Virginian," has the best and most lovable role of his career and with a most excellent cast offers a delightful picturization of O. Henry's best-known story. Fast gunplay, milling cattle herds, a lovable psalm-singing sheriff, lovely Fay Wray as a charming senorita, and wonderful scenic shots, with an involved plot brimming with humor and action combine in one of the best outdoor dramas that has yet reached the screen. Charles Murray, droller than ever, goes after the suffragette vote when he does a Jimmy Walker in "His Honor the Mayor," a rib-tickling featured comedy, old memories are revived in the song-cartoon, "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," and other screen novelties, complete a most interesting program. Norwich young ladies are agog over the coming award on Wednesday evening of the Broadway's "Summer Girl" outfit, on which the zero hour for the depositing of coupons has been fixed at 9 o'clock on the evening of the award.

Breed Theatre

Another sensational triumph was scored by the most popular pair of screen sweethearts, Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, when their latest Fox Movietone musical romance, "High Society Blues," had its premier local performance at the Breed theatre last night.

There is no more charming couple in pictures than the winsome Miss Gaynor and the handsome and virile Farrell, and when they are given a proper vehicle, such as "High Society Blues," they present a superlative entertainment that wins instant appeal.

Even greater than the personal triumph they scored in "Sunny Side Up" was the reception accorded these young players by last night's capacity audience.

Five song numbers are sung by the stars, of which at least "Just Like a Story Book," "I'm in the Market for You" and "Eleanor" seem certain of national popularity. "Just Like a Story Book" has the same piquant quality which made "I'm a Dreamer, Aren't We All," in "Sunny Side Up."

The Grangers, wealthy beyond their dreams, go east to enjoy life and buy an estate next door to that of the Divines. Efforts of the middle western Grangers to be neighborly with the ultra society leading Divines meets only with rebuffs. However, the daughter of one and the son of the other family find a common ground through their interest in Hawaiian ukuleles and friendship ripens. Complications arise which make the romance at one time seem hopeless.

BUSINESS RECOVERY LAST WEEK WAS OF RATHER A NEGLIGIBLE CHARACTER

NEW YORK, May 25.—(AP)—Business recovery appeared to be making the halting and dilatory progress during the past week, which is characteristic of periods when the nadir of recession has been reached. Sentiment in both business and banking circles appeared to be improving, after the fit of pessimism induced by the failure of spring to bring a vigorous upturn. Definite signs of improvement are now rather confidently expected to appear sometime between mid-summer and early autumn.

Factory activity, on the whole, showed the influences of the seasonal lull expected at this time, although the automobile manufacturers continued to operate their plants at a good rate, compared to a normal year such as 1928. Despite the slackening of factory work, the seasonal increase in outdoor work has probably taken up some of the slack in employment.

Steel mill operations sagged about one per cent during the week to below 75 per cent of capacity.

Automobile output has now reached a rate of slightly more than 100,000 units a week, and has probably reached the seasonal peak, but basic conditions in the industry are generally described as sounder than they have been for several months.

Freight car loadings as reported for the second week of May showed a decline of nearly 9,000 cars from the previous week, as compared to the jump of 36,000 cars shown in the previous weekly report.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Smith & Winchester Mfg. Company, South Windham.

The Smith & Winchester Mfg Co., founded in 1827 by Phelps & Spafford at South Windham to build paper mill machinery and the first Fourdrinier machine, was built here in 1828.

In 1837 the Smith Winchester & Co. was formed and took over the Phelps & Spafford plant, Charles Smith being the leading spirit. This name was retained until 1905 when it was changed to The Smith & Winchester Mfg. company, which title it now holds.

From a small plant of six or eight men, the company has grown to a plant employing from 100 to 150 men, the work requiring the highest type of mechanic.

From building Fourdrinier paper machines the company expanded and added new equipment for paper mills; paper trimmers for trimming paper; paper bag machinery for making all types of bags; and they have recently developed a machine for manufacturing the five wall paper cement bag.

In the beginning of the company oxen were used for transportation and the company has since seen the change from ox teams, horse teams, railroads, automobiles and at the present time, the aeroplane.

The products of the company are being used in all parts of the world, and they have representatives in California, England and France.

Within the last year they have built and installed three of the highest type Fourdrinier machines for the manufacture of condenser paper, the thinnest tissue paper known.

The present officers are: Walter Abbe, Jr., president and treasurer; C. E. Oman, vice president; Cassius A. Barstow, secretary.

YEAR AS BRIDE MAKES ANNE VETERAN OF SKIES

A year as a bride has made Anne Lindberg a seasoned air traveler

NEW YORK, May 25—(AP)—One year ago, May 27, in the living room of her parents' home in Englewood, N. J., Anne Morrow became the bride of the world's foremost birdman, Charles A. Lindbergh. She wore a simple white frock fashioned by the village dressmaker who had made her clothes since she was a little girl, and she carried a bouquet of garden flowers picked by her future husband just a few minutes before the ceremony.

Since that day the quiet and unassuming young woman, remembered by her college classmates as studious, dreamy and so shy that even as a senior she suffered when she had to get up before a class and recite, has:

Acquired a glider pilot's license.

Navigated the airplane in which she and her husband on Easter Sunday set a new transcontinental flight record.

Flies 30,000 Miles.

In all, Anne Morrow Lindbergh has flown nearly 30,000 miles in these last 12 months. That includes:

Two flights to Los Angeles and return.

One 7,000-mile jaunt down over the Mayan jungles and all around the Caribbean sea.

A trip up to Maine and back late last summer after the air races.

A swift race as far west as Wichita, Kas., to hunt for the lost T. A. T. transport City of San Francisco.

Innumerable short hops.

Practically all of this flying has been done with the same pilot—her husband. Once she was a passenger on a comparatively short trip in a T. A. T. transport, and several times she has flown solo. Aside from those occasions, so far as is known, she has never flown with any other pilot.

Suffers One "Mishap."

Mrs. Lindbergh has experienced one crack-up, which her husband described as "not an accident, but a mishap," and two minor accidents which the colonel undoubtedly would decline to dignify by calling them even mishaps.

The "mishap" occurred before they were married when they lost a wheel while in the air and turned over on landing at Mexico City, Feb. 27, 1929.

Twice last July, once at Newark airport and once at Columbus, O., they ground-looped on landing.

The Lindbergh honeymoon started adventurously enough. All alone in a 38-foot cabin motor boat they cruised for nearly a month after their marriage around Long Island sound and up the Atlantic seaboard.

Attend Guggenheim Tests.

On June 20, back from their cruise, they appeared at Mitchel Field, for the beginning of the final tests in the Guggenheim safe aircraft competition, and Mrs. Lindbergh went up with the colonel for a short flight.

Their next flight carried them across the country in Colonel Lindbergh's blue and orange biplane, on an inspection trip of the T. A. T. route.

They returned from this trip July 30, ground-looping as they landed at Newark, and a week later hopped down to Washington to be guests at President Hoover's week-end birthday celebration at his summer camp on the Rapidan river.

On their return, Mrs. Lindbergh started learning to fly from the Aviation Country club at Hicksville, Long Island. Aug. 23, after nine hours' instruction, she made her first solo flight while from the ground "The Lone Eagle" wached, anxiously at first and then with a pleased grin.

Fly Up to Maine.

Next day they hopped out to Cleveland for the air races, returning just in time to borrow a fast ship and speed out to Wichita to help in the hunt for the City of San Francisco. They returned from that trip Sept. 11. The following day, in a small, low-winged red monoplane, which the colonel at that time was said to have bought for his bride, they took a little jaunt up to the Morrow summer home at North Haven, Me.

A couple of weeks late rthey were off with a party of scientists on their Central American cruise, photographing ruins, landing in little inlets to go ashore in an inflated rubber boat and explore the jungle. This trip had been inspired by experiments they had tried in photographing ruins from the air while in the west earlier in the summer. Mrs. Lindbergh operated the camera and, when she was not busy at that, served meals in the air to her husband and the scientists.

Back in New York by the middle of October, Mrs. Lindbergh took some more flying lessons and later in the month received her pilot's license, stopping at Nassau en route from the field after one of her solo flights to get another license to permit her to drive an automobile too.

Two days after Christmas they were off again—to the Pacific coast.

Another Solo Flight.

Jan. 27 Mrs. Lindbergh made a solo flight over Los Angeles—"just to brush up a little on her flying," the colonel said.

Jan. 29 at San Diego she went up in a glider, stayed up six minutes, and won her glider pilot's license.

Until April 18 the Lindberghs remained in California, hopping all up and down the coast in airplanes and gliders while Mrs. Lindbergh boned away on navigation. Then came the record-breaking flight home.

Three years ago this month Charles Lindbergh soared out over the Atlantic to Paris and worldwide fame. And Anne Morrow, then a little college girl, quiet and shy, with a penchant for writing poetry, undoubtedly read about it in the papers up at Northampton, Mass.

Two years ago this month, she enjoyed a triumph of her own—a triumph that would seem much more in her line than breaking aviation records. She was a senior at Smith college then, and she was awarded two prizes for scholarship and literary achievement.

One year ago this month—Anne Morrow, the poet, laid aside her books and papers and became Anne Morrow Lindbergh, one of America's better known women fliers.

OKLAHOMA GIRL BAGS SEVEN RIDING PRIZES

HOUSTON, Tex., May 25—(AP)—In one short season, a young Oklahoma woman has put the men—and in fact every horse fancier of the southwest—quite in their places.

Miss Mary Fiers of Oklahoma City had seven winners, a bigger total than any other owner could show, in the first Southwestern horse show here recently sponsored by the Junior league. Her prize money totaled $990.

Earlier in the season, Miss Fiers' first, she won more awards than any other exhibitor in shows at Fort Worth, Denver and Oklahoma City.

Roxie Highland, $27,500 mare which is Miss Fiers' particular pride, took first award in the open three-gaited championship stake here for her mistress' largest cleanup.

Other winners were Vagabond Prince, first in the five-gaited class for stallions, mares and geldings, $250; Naughty but Nice, fourth in the $1,000 five-gaited championship stakes, $125; Miss Annabel Lea, third in the five-gaited amature stakes $30; Miss Annabel Lea, first in the five-gaited saddle-harness class, $75; Black Lightning, first in the roadster class, $75; Lady in Black, fourth in same division, $15; Whispering Willow, fifth in the open three-gaited $100.

Mrs. Edge Prefers White.

PARIS, May 25—(AP)—White evening ensembles are favorites with Mrs. Walter Evans Edge, wife of the U. S. ambassador to France.

White sets off Mrs. Edge's shining black hair and brilliant coloring. Mrs. Edge possesses beautiful jewels and frequently wears a diamond chain and pendant with white.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

To clean a brick fireplace wash it with vinegar, then dry with a woolen cloth.

If silverware, which is to be stored for some time, is packed in white flour it will not tarnish.

A teaspoon of lemon juice added to each quart of water in which rice is boiling keeps the grains separate.

Paint stains may be easily removed from hardwood floors if rubbed with a cloth dipped in kerosene.

A teaspoon of vinegar added to the fat in which doughnuts are fired prevents their absorbing too much fat.

Covered crockery dishes should be used in the icebox to prevent from absorbing odors. The crockery should be scalded when washed.

To cook meats and vegetables quicker, and to make them tender, put a pinch of cooking soda in the water when boiling them.

Place an egg in a pan of water. If fresh it will lie on its side. If a few days old it will tilt upwards. If stale, it will stand on end. If very old, it will float.

To render fat, cut in small pieces or pass through the food chopper. Then melt in the upper part of the double boiler. Strain through cheesecloth, laid in a wire strainer.

When too much water has been added in mixing pie crust mix a little flour and lard together and add it to the miture. Flour added without the lard will make a tough crust.

Save all leftovers. By using a little ingenuity, many tasty dishes may be prepared. Save leftover coffee in a glass jar. It will be useful for coffee jelly, coffee sourffle or for mocha frosting.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

A cup of water is equal to eight ounces.

A little lemon juice improves applesauce.

Stale bread makes the most tasty and digestible toast.

LET FOOD COOL

Never put hot foods in your refrigerator. Wait until they have cooled. The placing of hot food in an automatic refrigerator during the freezing period will have a tendency to raise the temperature and interfere to some extent with the rapidity of freezing.

BROWN BREAD

You can cut hot brown bread so that it will not crumble by using a silk or linen thread instead of a knife.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Raw starch is a good remedy for a cut that is not serious. Wet it and apply as thickly as possible immediately.

When the feet perspire freely hot water must be used, but it should be followed by the use of cold water, so that the pores will be closed again.

Brush your hair every morning and night for five minutes, and brush vigorously. This cleans the scalp, prevents dandruff and stimulates the growth of the hair.

If your skin is dry and peeling use soap and water sparingly. Cleanse with a soft cream or oil and then apply a richer cream with massage. Leave a film of cream on your face and neck over night.

CLEAN POWDER PUFFS

Powder puffs should be washed frequently. They are bound to pick up the grease of your skin and the oil of creams used. Bits of cotton that can be thrown away after use make the most hygienic puffs. Have several puffs and after two or three days' use take a fresh one.

DEEP-BREATHING

Deep-breathing exercises will counteract the damage done to the lung by a stooped position at your desk, and they develop the chest. Stand before an open window with the arms in an outward circle, up over the head until the hands touch, inhaling deeply as this upward movement is made. Then slowly let the arms fall back to original position, exhaling as the arms are brought down. Do this twenty times.

CONCEALED MUSIC

Since the radio is now as necessary as the telephone all sorts of ingenious ways have been found to house it. Perhaps the pleasantest of all is to place it in the bottom of a secretary of mahogany specially designed for that purpose. The upper part series as bookcase and desk in the usual way, while the bottom drawers conceal the radio.

DOUBLE FLOUNCE

Molyneaux makes a new evening wrap of white satin, with two circular ruffles giving a cape effect in the rear. It has a scarf collar that can be tied or left hanging loose.

NECKWEAR AGAIN

The lingerie touch on frocks is so much in evidence that all the neckwear departments are doing a thriving business at present. Delightful collars are made of dotted swiss and consist of tiny bands fagotted together ending in a smart little bow.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Gray sharkskin, and tan covert are suit fabrics of standing. Black and navy suits are also both good.

Blackberry, a purple so deep as to be mistaken for black is reported from Paris as one of the most important new colors.

Tiered and spiral skirts are among the newest types. Ruffles and flounces of every sort are approved.

Princess slips are quite the accepted ones for wear under spring frocks. Some of them have wrap around skirt portions.

If you are stout, consider the beltline as well as the hemline very carefully, as proper proportions here will mean everything. Exaggeratedly irregular hemlines should be strictly avoided. The flared skirt in which fullness starts gradually from a high point is best for the larger figure.

CHIC SPORT TOGS

Tweed bags are voluminously smart and often appear in large shapes. A smart style is made of a blue, gray and green tweed with a gray prystal frame. Spectator sports shoes adhere to classic tradition—being either two-tone oxfords or opera pumps with leather heels.

FANCY BUTTONS TRIM FROCKS

Whether your frock is severely simple or gaily frilled the trimming is of more important than it may have been in other seasons. Novel buttons of galalith and rhinestones are used on many of the frocks seen in the recent Paris openings. Jeweled buckles are another means of giving a new note to the frock. Fringe is gaining in importance as a trimming on evening frocks.

SLEEVE STYLES OF MANY KINDS

The short sleeve of one kind or another is gaining ground with every week. Several designers are cutting off the sleeves of coats to show the contrasting sleeves of the dress, which in this case must extend to the hands.

Tiered sleeves terminating at the elbow, short sleeves ending in frills of pleating or circular ruffles by now are fimiliar in separate dresses for spring.

Puffs in sheer materials are a favored form of sleeve with complicated drapery at the hand and sufficiently loose to slip back when the arm is raised is a most attractive and feminine one in chiffon print frocks for afternoon.

LATEST MODES IN RAIN COATS

The trend toward a fitted line which is being felt throughout the mode finds a definite reaction in rain coats. Many of the latest models are indicating the higher waistline and the tapering silhouette. Several of the foremost couturiers now include striking rain ensembles in this spring and fall collections. Vionnet has designed an unusual coat in a new rubberized fabric which resembles sharkskin. It has a high belted waistline and full skirt.

SEWING SUGGESTIONS

When pulling threads, try using a nut pick, or a crochet hook, and see how much easier it is.

When sewing long seams, fasten the edges of the goods with wire paper clips such as are used in every office. This eliminates basting of the material.

A strip of muslin about four inches wide stitched across the top edges of blankets and quilts will keep them clean.

If you put snaps on the shoulder seams of your frocks and the other side of the snaps on the shoulder seams of your slips, you can anchor those straps so they will not slip off your shoulder.

Instead of sewing a ribbon belt to a buckle to be worn on wash dresses use a snap fastner. The buckle may then be easily removed before washing the belt.

FLAT HEMS

It is important to know the best kinds of hem finishes which can be used on different materials in order to secure a smooth, flat hem. For silk materials it is best to turn a one-fourth-inch fold and stitch this first turning with the materials determine the depth the hem the desired depth. Put in the hem by hand with a hemming stitch. For wool materials determine the depth the hem is to be, then baste it in place. Pink the raw edge and catch-stitch to the body of the garment. The pinking prevents raveling and gives a flat finish for heavy materials. To make a hem with fullness, determine the depth of the hem, then baste it. Turn a fold one-fourth inch and stitch with a long stitch on the machine. Gather up the fullness by pulling the thread. Baste in place and hem by hand or by machine if the material is cotton.

ITALIAN POTTERY

EMBROIDERED GILET

For wear with a blue suit, there is a charming little gilet of batiste, embroidered in all-over eyelet design which has a round collar of accordian pleated plain batiste with eyelet edge.

BABY SHARKSKIN

Navy blue calfskin purses, with panels of baby sharkskin in matching tone, are very new and very neat. One has a loop on the front for decoration but no handle

FLOORS

For floors, marble, tile, rubber compositions and linoleums are all suitable. The linoleums are especially useful in renovating projects. It is surprising how quickly a colorful floor covering will brighten an entire room. The block patterns in black and white, green and white, and blue and white are all good and give excellent support to the color scheme which is set by the draperies, shower curtains and towels.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Many hundreds of women in southern and midland England earn their living driving and steering canal boats.

The minimum age of marriage for females in various foreign countries is: France, 15; Belgium, 15; Holland, 16; Germany, 16; Switzerland, 16.

The majority of the immigrant women now entering the United States are educated women of the middle class. Many are trained in a trade or a profession.

Anna and Mary Sabol, of East Pittsburgh, Pa., operate a dairy and milk route to aid their crippled father. They not only care for the stock and milk cows, but drive a horse and wagon to deliver the milk.

Miss Ellis Bostrom, youngest daughter of the Swedish minister to the United States, is an expert typist, has mastered shorthand and bookkeeping and speaks several languages. She is doing secretarial work in the legation.

MODERN PEWTER

Pewter has come to play a most important part in the modern household and the new pieces not only reproduce the charm of old ones but in many cases have a unique quality of their own. A pair of candlesticks, holding two candles each, are unusually graceful and in charm far below their modest price of less than four dollars for the pair.

GLOSSY GLASS

If you want a high shine on your crystal goblets, rub with a piece of tissue paper over which a few drops of methylated spirit have been sprinkled.

RECIPES

Sponge cake: Beat six egg whites with a pinch of salt, add one cupful of sugar, beat the egg yolks separately and add, then add one cupful of flour, flavor to taste, and bake for 45 minutes.

Crullers: Mix one cup of sugar with two eggs, two tablespoons of cream, or shortening if cream is not available, one cup of sweet milk, half a teaspoon of nutmeg, two heaping teaspoons of baking powder and flour enough to make the dough stiff enough to roll. Cut out and fry in deep, hot fat.

Filled Cookies: Mix one cup of sugar with half a cup of shortening consisting of part lard and part butter, one egg, half a cup of milk, two and one-half cups of flour, two teaspoons of cream of tartar, one teaspoon of baking soda and one teaspoon of vanilla. Roll thin, put the cookies in a pan, then put a teaspoon of filling on each. Place another cooky gently on top.

The filling: Combine one cup of chopped raisins with half a cup of sugar, half a cup of water and one teaspoon of flour. Cook until thick.

Capes and Jewelry

PARIS, May 25—(AP)—Capes and costume jewelry in one are a midsummer idea utilized by a prominent woman dressmaker.

To choker beads this stylemaker attaches filmy split scarves or little capes which furnish the only wrap for informal dinner dresses or chiffon dance frocks meant for hot weather wear.

Black, White and Red.

PARIS, May 25—(AP)—One of the notable wash-wool suits for hot-weather wear at fashionable resorts is a black and white mixture with bright red belt and scarf.

New Bright Shades.

PARIS, May 25—(AP) — A new bright green, predominantly yellow, cobalt blue and salmon pink over corn yellow are brilliant new shades introduced into midsummer styles by a leading color-expert among dressmakers.

At the same house viola-blue and pistachio green are also prime favorites.

Club Woman Nears 100.

BROCKTON, Mass., May 25—(AP)—Miss Almeda D. Thayer, charter member of the Woman's club of Brockton, says she is the oldest club woman in the country. Miss Thayer was 99 Feb. 12. Until quite recently she attended meetings.

THAT PROBLEM OF PUTTING THINGS AWAY

By ELSIE DREW KENNEDY

The old advice of a place for everything and everything in its proper place is valuable for the housekeeper in the small apartment or house to follow.

The attractive design here shows what a modern storeroom should look like—at least in the small apartment or suburban home. Look about your home if you feel the need of additional storage room, and you will be surprised to find many convenient wall spaces that can readily be converted into such a series of shelves and cupboards.

Perhaps you have a deep hall or a back entrance way, or space in one of the children's rooms which might be utilized. If you possess one of those perfectly enormous pantries that architects liked to design a decade back, why not remodel one set of cupboards and shelves to fit the needs of your household?

Shelves mounted above cupboards are the ideal solution of what to do for storage of old victrola records, back files of favorite magazines, children's school books and all the whatnots that belong in any active household.

The drawers at the bottom make an ideal place for children's rubbers while the man about the house will find adequate place for fishing tackle and kit.

The cupboards at either side will keep the younger children's toys completely out of sight.

If however, the household consists of adults with varied sports predilections, tennis racquets, balls and all the other necessaries of outdoor life can be put away. One of the cupboards might open as a bin to hold tennis racquets in complete order, while the cupboards above will store a host of camp or picnic equipment—portable stoves, duffle bags, riding boots and so on.

Then, they'll do equally well for clothing and that requires protection from moths.

The possibilities of such a storeroom are limited only to the requirements and ingenuity of your particular household and it will more than compensate for the initial expense in comfort.

WIVES OF LATIN DIPLOMATS KNOW ALL SHAWLS' SECRETS

WASHINGTON, May 25—(AP)—The Spanish shawl finds its most graceful use as an evening wrap in the hands of some of the South American women living in the capital.

They know every trick and turn of its silken colorful folds to give an air to any costume.

Madame de Mello will soon go with her husband to live in Vienna, where he will continue in diplomatic service.

Very long ear-rings are in high favor for evening wear. Some of them reach almost to the shoulder. Miss Helen Stone, daughter of Colonel David Stone, wears pendent ear-rings of pearls to many of the spring dances.

SLEEP, BABY, SLEEP, GIRLS TOLD; HEAVY SPORTS TABOOED

WASHINGTON, May 25—(AP)—Women hammer throwers and women high jumpers get no commendation from Mrs. Marvin Rosenberry, one of the first to teach physical culture to women in this country.

The sight of a browned feminine athlete beating her way through heavy surf causes her no elation. She prefers to see a woman handling a wand or an Indian club to a tennis racquet. She likes, best of all, to see them get plenty of sleep.

Dancing about on their bare toes in some sylvan retreat, "greeting the dawn" clad in Grecian robes may be a bit silly, but it's more healthful for women, in Mrs. Rosenberry's estimation, than taking part in strenuous athletic competitions.

As a member of the board of directors of the women's division of the National Amateur Athletic association Mrs. Rosenberry will oppose the entrance of women's teams in the Olympic games in Los Angeles in 1932. Mrs. Herbert Hoover is honorary president of the association. American women's teams competed with women from other countries in the last Olympics in Holland in such events as swimming, discus throwing, broad and high jumping and 800 metre dashes.

"We are not opposed to individual women in professional or amateur sport," says Mrs. Rosenberry. "But to commercialize teams of them in competitive sports we feel is unwise."

Mrs. Rosenberry considers sleep more important to a woman, if she would keep her looks and health, than winning medals. She sleeps nine hours every night. She walks and drives a car for recreation. She refuses to budge from her advocacy of moderation for women in both clothes and conduct. She thinks the present styles, with their hampering lines, are short lived and that women will soon swing back to the straight-line, loose costumes. With the aid of her dressmaker, she has evolved a wardrobe which is smart looking, but makes for freedom and comfort.

Finds Mother After 33 Years.

CLARE, Mich., May 25—(AP)—Mrs. Leah Cour recently found her mother, Mrs. Nellie Chandler, of Elkhart, Ind., after the mother had thought her daughter dead for 33 years. Mrs. Cour was placed in a children's home not long after her birth.

Fur-Trimmed Hats.

PARIS, May 25—(AP)—Fur trimming for winter hats is indicated by the advance models now showing at some of the big couturiers.

Guiding Your Child

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

Lost Youth.

Recently I went with a mother and her 16-year-old daughter to a tennis tournament held in a charming little town in the hills.

The place, on that particular week-end was entirely given over to the activities of youth. As one looked around, the average age seemed to be about 18 and one realized that to be over 30 was to be classed among the aged.

The mother of the 16-year-old did not enjoy herself. Despite the sunshine, the bright colors and laughter she grew more and more depressed.

When, after dinner, it was time to chaperone Elsie to the dance she excused herself and asked me to take her place. She and Elsie went home early the next morning although a whole chapter of youthful festivities had been planned for the day.

When next I saw Elsie's mother, she explained to me quite frankly that to be completely surrounded by youth was more than she could bear. She had married at 18 and missed the good times she should have had.

She could not help now clinging to the illusion of her own youth and feeling a burning jealousy of the daughter whose fun was just beginning.

There are many mothers who for one reason or another feel that they were cheated of youthful happiness. Not all are so frank to confess it.

Anyone who closely observes the relationship of parents and children cannot help but wonder how many of the prohibitions upon the good times of youth are not unconsciously dictated by jealousy of the good times that these parents themselves have missed.

The mother who, presumably on grounds of health and good taste, finds herself restricting many of her young daughter's pleasures would do well to look critically and honestly into her own motives.

WOMEN TO DISCUSS TAX AND NATIONALITY LAWS

NEW YORK, May 25—(AP)—Income tax, world court legislation and nationality laws for women will be discussed by business women from all sections of the United States in Chicago July 7, 8 and 9 at the annual meeting of the executive board of the National Federation of business and professional women's clubs.

Regional conferences will take the place of the annual convention this year. Miss Marion McClench of Ann Arbor, national president, will address many of them.

Women in Minnesota Politics.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 25—(AP)—Although there were no women office-holders in Minnesota before the adoption of the 19th amendment, 348 were revealed by a recent survey. The increase since 1926 is 121.

His cars are respected in the industry and preferred by a large section of the public—with 175,000 satisfied owners at present. The feature car of the new line is a four-door sedan listing at $845 and delivering, complete, for less than $1000.00 in the great majority of the motor car market...This is a rare opportunity for a man of character, capability and capital. It makes no difference whether or not he has had motor car experience. If he has had good business experience and has good business judgment, he will want to see this manufacturer's representative when that man is here. Please address a letter to MOTOR CAR REPRESENTATIVE, in care of The Bulletin, and you will hear from him.

When YOU WANT to put your business before the public, there is no medium better than through the advertising columns of The Bulletin.

To meet the expenditures called for by the foregoing estimates, a tax of thirteen and three-fifths (13 3-5) mills on the last city list will be required, said list being $36,134,928.00.

The tax recommended last year by the finance committee was twelve and three-fifths (12 3-5) mills, on the list of $36,085,256.

In addition to the said estimated expenses for the ordinary requirements of the City, the Committee on Finance has been requested by petition and otherwise to submit to the annual city meeting for its action, estimates for the following purposes, which are as follows:

1.	Bath street curb cut-off	$1,500.00

3.	Broad street cut-off	3,000.00

13.	Court house bonds payable Apr. 2, 1931,	142,000.00
	Total	$272,585.00

The foregoing items are all desirable, but will, if all are voted by the City Meeting, require an additional tax of seven and one-half (7 1-2) mills above that required by the regular estimates for which the Committee has recommended a tax of 13 3-5 mills. Your Committee recommends that the warning for the next Annual Meeting include the last named estimates, commonly known as "extras," and a call for action thereon. Your Committee expresses no opinion as to which of said extra items are necessary and the order in which they appear has no meaning as to the respective merits of each.

Your Committee further recommends the adoption by the Court of Common Council of the following Resolution:

RESOLVED: That the report of the Committee on Finance containing the estimates for the year ending May 15, 1931, be accepted; that the estimates therein contained be adopted and made the estimates of expenses of the City during the year ending on May 15, 1931; that the Clerk cause the same to be published as required by the amended Charter of the City; and that the Mayor, or in his absence the Senior Alderman present, be directed on behalf of the Court of Common Council to submit the estimates embraced in said report to the next Annual City Meeting to be held on the first Monday of June, 1930, and to recommend that a tax of thirteen and three-fifths mills be laid on the last perfected grand list of the City to meet the ordinary expenses of the City for the present fiscal year of the City (May 16, 1930 to May 15, 1931, inclusive).

Respectfully submitted.
LEE R. ROBBINS,
PAUL H. ZAHN,
PETER SELLAS,
Committee on Finance.

The foregoing is a true copy of said report and of the resolution therein contained which was adopted.

Said estimate of the expenses of the City for the year ending May 15th, next, made by the said Court of Common Council is hereby published by me in accordance with the direction of said Court of Common Council.

Dated at Norwich, Connecticut, May 23rd, 1930.

Attest: WESTON C. PULLEN,

ELEVEN PINTS IN LOCKER—WHISKEY-GIN AT PECKHAM'S

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 25—The police conducted three liquor raids Saturday night and were successful in two. The raiders, Sergeant Patrick Murphy, Automobile Patrol Officer Augustus Ray and William Corcoran and Patrolmen Cornelius Moriarty and Edward Riordan, first visited the locker room at 96 Main street conducted by Joseph Baruty. The proprietor was absent and entrance to the lockers could not be obtained. Baruty was communicated with by telephone and ordered to go to his place of business and open the lockers. He refused to do so with the result that the lockers were smashed in and this action revealed 11 pints of whiskey. Baruty, who resides at 114 Hempstead street, was arrested and will be presented in the police court Monday.

The raiders then went to the club room conducted by Joseph Connolly, corner of Main and Federal streets, but a thorough search did not result in either beer or whiskey being found, so the officers were forced to depart without having obtained a particle of evidence of violation of the law. This is the third time that the club room has been raided within a year and no liquor found on the premises.

The last place to receive attention was the home of Howard Peckham, 211 Montauk avenue. The search uncovered 40 gallons of home-made whiskey and five quarts of gin essence. Peckham, who has been arrested several times for violation of the liquor law, was released upon furnishing a bond of $1,000 for his appearance in the police court Monday.

Boleslaw Haberek, 27 Winthrop street, was arrested Saturday night by Automobile Patrol Officer Clarence Martin charged with breach of the peace upon complaint of his wife. Haberek, who has been arrested many times for his fighting, was released upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $30 and will explain the police court Monday.

A Montville man was arrested there this afternoon by State Police Officers Fred Johnson and Arthur Whitmarsh, charged with intoxication. He was brought to New London police headquarters and will be tried in Montville justice court Monday.

HOME OF FRANK GILLANDERS AT WATERFORD ROBBED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, May 25.— Frank Gillanders, 931 Zank street, employed at the Millstone quarry, Waterford, reported to the police late this afternoon that his residence had been entered and robbed during the absence of himself and wife Saturday night. Gillanders and his wife left home Saturday afternoon and the former returned today. When he went into the house he immediately discovered that a thief had been there for a rear window had been forced. Gillanders made an investigation and found that two men's watches had been stolen as was a quantity of silverware. Gillanders said that he would be unable to be certain of the articles stolen until his wife returns to the city.

WEIDMAN AND BERGERIN TO BE GIVEN A HEARING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, May 24.— Walter B. Weidman, 23, of Hartford, and Edwin C. Bergerin, 29, of Gardner, Mass., formerly stationed at the submarine base, now serving sentences in Portsmouth prison, as a result of their attack upon two Boston school teachers in July, 1928, will be given a hearing in the federal court Monday. Habeas corpus proceedings will be started in an endeavor to obtain a lighter sentence for the former sailors. Weidman was sentenced to life imprisonment and Bergerin, who received a like sentence, was later given 15 years at hard labor. The proceedings are brought on the grounds that Weidman and Bergerin were denied their constitutional rights of being tried by jury. Weidman also alleges that he was induced to plead guilty on a promise of immunity. Weidman and Bergerin were driving on the Eastern Point road when they invited two teachers, who were employed at the Hotel Griswold to go for a ride. When the invitation was accepted and a trip along the Military highway had been made, the car was driven to a lonely highway where the young women were attacked and abused by Weidman and Bergerin. The women succeeding in getting free of the sailors and when they arrived at New London they went to police headquarters and told of their treatment. An investigation resulted in the arrest and trial of the sailors.

Julian D. Moran, of Ocean avenue; Jeremiah Connors, Westerly; Mrs. Joseph Fitch, 17 Addison street; Mrs. Blunt White, Mystic; Mrs. James Booth, 761 Montauk avenue; Benjamin Horowitz, 591 Main street; Isaac Gardner, Waterford; Theresa Keefe, 226 Connecticut avenue; Mrs. Doris King, Westerly; Mrs. Serigo Mincarelli and son, 77 Walbach street; Mrs. George McCauley and infant son, 8 Alger street; Peter Carchardi, 41 Front street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged Saturday.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel, Saturday, ordered the driver's license of W. Roy Hart, 40 Montauk avenue, suspended. Commissioner Stoeckel also ordered the license returned to Richard Dyer, 139 Crystal avenue, and the right to drive to Antonio Venturelli, Shaw street.

Cheney Car Abandoned

A Packard coupe owned by Dr. George P. Cheney, Montauk avenue, stolen Friday night, was recovered Saturday in East Haven after a state police officer had given the thief a wild chase only to lose the crook. The automobile was driven to Bank street, between Montauk avenue and Jefferson avenue, shortly before midnight. While the physician was in a drug store for a few minutes, the thief entered the car and speeded away. The car was observed as it followed the New Haven turnpike and the New London police requested the state police at Westbrook to maintain a watch for the stolen auto. An officer was sent to the Saybrook bridge and in a short time observed a machine approaching at a high rate of speed. The driver refused to heed a signal to stop and as the auto passed over the bridge at 70 miles an hour it was decided that the car was the one stolen in this city. The officer gave chase, but the Packard succeeded in outdistancing the officer's machine. The thief continued to drive at furious speed and at New Haven drove to an intersecting street and was lost to view of the officer. A search of New Haven was made for the machine, but not until Saturday was any trace of the car obtained. It was then found abandoned in East Haven, the thief realizing that he was pursued, so followed an irregular route to where he left the coupe beside the highway.

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 25.—The police Saturday took charge of the personal effects of Gordon O. Sims, fatally wounded by a bullet fired into his brain by Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith last Tuesday night on Crystal avenue, after Sims had resisted arrest and had attacked and beaten the officer. Officer Elwood Bailey was assigned to bring Sims' clothing and effects to police headquarters. A search of the apparel revealed an ugly jackknife, for the blade was more than four inches in length and at one point was over an inch in width. Also found in the clothing was a .22-calibre bullet. The weapon and bullet were locked up by orders of Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman. Coroner Edward G. McKay, of Norwich, who conducted an inquest here Friday, it is believed, will render his finding within a few days as to whether Sergeant Smith is guilty of criminality in causing Sims' death.

TRAMPLING ART FOR PROFITS

FOR all its virtues, modern industrialism can run amuck under the spur of greed for profits. Witness, the ruin threatening the Art of Music.

300 musicians in Hollywood supply all the "music" offered in thousands of theatres. Can such a tiny reservoir of talent nurture artistic progress?

The true function of the machine is to increase the value of the product fed into it—not to debase it. Therefore mechanical music, as a substitute for Living Music, is a spurious form of progress—like a loom converting good wool into shoddy.

The grind organ, however operated, is a grind organ still. For music is an emotional art, a form of social intercourse, and hence dependent upon human contact.

Who profits by the elimination of genuine music from the theatre? Not the music-loving public! Not the musician!

If you agree that theatre patrons are entitled to real music—in addition to talking and sound motion pictures, for the price they pay— HELP SAVE THE ART FROM RUIN. Enroll with millions of others in the Music Defense League. When the public's voice is raised its will must be served!

GREENEVILLE

CHINTZ COTTAGE PRESENTED BY 3 G GIRLS FRIDAY EVE

Chintz Cottage, a three act comedy was presented by the 3 G Girls of the Central Baptist church Friday evening at the Greeneville Congregational church with a large attendance, taxing the seating capacity of the hall. It provided an unusual evening's entertainment. Minty, a charmingly attractive girl of 20, was played by Mrs. William Wyman, who, bored with society comes from the city to recuperate in the remote village of Meadowbank. She brings with her a maid and settles down for a stay of peace and quiet. Then the lid blows off and one exciting event falls on another to start the climax. Minty does not rest, but gets a change and incidentally falls heir to a husband. Then there is Minty's aunt, Miss Tillingtop, played by Miss Bly Partridge, a boss with a matrimonial eye on Mr. Kent. The part of Mr. Kent is played by William Spencer, well known local contractor; Peter, played by George Phillips, is the innocent cause for most of the trouble, while his sister, Grace, played by Mrs. John Kingston, helps him in and out of several predicaments. Mrs. Dean, Mr. Kent's sister-in-law, was played by Mrs. Henry Jatkowske. Mrs. Dean's part, though short, was an excellent hit. The proceeds of the successful affair will be added to the treasury of the Sunday school. The committee in charge was Alex Finlayson, general chairman, assisted by Mrs. Archibald Torrance, Mrs. John McNeely, Miss Florence Tilley, Mrs. Campbell, Lloyd Thompson, Miss Natalie Service, Miss Fowler, Russell Wilson, Miss Alice Brown, Miss Ida Luther and Miss Jeanette Beattie. After the show candy was sold with the following ladies in charge of the candy booth: Misses Jeanette Beattie, Miss Alice Brown and Miss Ida Luther. Lloyd Thompson had charge of the tickets at the door.

Wednesday evening a shower was given in honor of Miss Marguerite Copeland at the home of Miss Mary E. Gray, 56 Sixth street, with 18 of her friends present. Many games were played and enjoyed. Refreshments were served by Miss Gray, assisted by her mother. The decorations were wedding bells which were draped with white streamers. Bridal wreath flowers also added to the attractiveness of the room. The bride-to-be was the recipient of numerous and beautiful gifts.

Rev. Mr. Norris attended the annual convention of the Episcopal church held on Tuesday and Wednesday at Christ church cathedral, Hartford.

Mrs. P. H. Desmond, Mrs. Thomas Caffrey and Miss Anna Caffrey spent Tuesday in West Haven, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Limerick, who was formerly Miss Mary Desmond. Mrs. Desmond is to remain for a week.

OBITUARY

Michael J. Kilcollum

The sudden death of Michael J. Kilcollum occurred Saturday afternoon at his home, 458 North Main street, caused by a shock which he received about 1:30 o'clock Saturday morning. Mr. Kilcollum had been in good health and was about Friday as usual. He was born in Ireland, the son of Michael and Mary Kilcollum, and when a young man came to this country, locating in Norwich, where he has been a resident ever since. He was united in marriage to Mary Roddy at St. Patrick's church of this city on Feb. 8, 1910, by Rev. Father Trainor, then pastor of the church. Besides his wife, he is survived by six children, Mrs. George W. Donahue, of New London; Miss Agnes, John, Dorothy, James and Thomas, all of this city, and three sisters, Mrs. Lee Han, of Norwich Town; Mrs. Peter Sullivan and Mrs. Jeremiah Donovan, of Greeneville. Mr. Kilcollum was a devoted member of St. Mary's Memorial church. He also was a member of the old Engine Company No. 2, volunteer fire department. He was a kind and lovable father and his place in the family will be deeply missed by the children. His many friends in the community, where he was favorably known, were deeply grieved upon learning of his sudden passing and they extend their heartfelt sympathy to the members of his immediate family.

Mrs. Evelyn Marshall, of Beacon hospital, New York, was a recent guest at the home of her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Soules, on North Main street.

SPECTACULAR SCOUT JAMBOREE THRILLS HUNDREDS OF PARENTS

Declared to be the most spectacular and entertaining demonstration ever held in Norwich by those who witnessed it, the Boy Scout Jamboree at the state armory Saturday night thrilled hundreds of parents, not only those from Norwich but those who had travelled long distances with their Scouts. Estimated attendance at the Jamboree was 400 Scouts and 800 parents and friends.

Starting promptly at 7:45, the Boy Scout Drum and Bugle corps of Troop Five, consisting of 30 uniformed Scouts gave a ten minute fancy drill. Then came the entrance and review of the Scouts. To the spectators it seemed as if the Scouts would never cease coming. With brisk step, scores of flags waving, the terse commands of scoutmasters and assistants, the review captivated the audience at the start. Closely following came the inspection. It seemed to the inspectors that every Scout had uniformed himself for the occasion. First place was given to Troop 1 of Willimantic, second place to Troop 1 of Norwich and third place to Staffordville troop.

Willimantic Wins Two Places

So many entries for the dressing race appeared that it had to be run off in three heats, Troop 1 of Willimantic again winning first place, Troop 2 of Willimantic winning second place and Troop 12 of Norwich winning third place. Over 50 Scouts removed hat, neckerchief, shirt, shoes and stockings in this race with such skill hat one wonders how a Scout could ever be late for school.

Always exciting the fire by friction race proved its reputation. Thirty Scouts participated and of this number a score made fires by rubbing sticks together. Staffordville, first, Troop 5, Norwich, second, Troop 1, Norwich, third.

Most spectacular of all was the tree felling contest. Fifteen four inch diameter birch trees were chopped down by Scouts in less time than it takes to tell it, Troop 9 winning first, Stafford Springs second, Troop 5 third.

Exciting Knot Tying

Eighteen teams of eight Scouts each participated in the knot tying contest, tying 144 in less than two minutes. The results were: Troop 2, Willimantic, first place; Troop 12, Norwich, second place; Troop 7, Norwich, third place.

Fifteen teams of three Scouts each gave a first aid demonstration showing the worth of Scout training. Tearing open sealed envelopes the Scouts were given a description of an auto accident. Bandages applied included scalp, arm sling, ankle, finger, etc., and first place went to Troop 1, Norwich, second to Troop 5, Norwich, and third to Troop 12, Norwich.

Cub Scouts Give Yell

During the performance 50 cubs under the leadership of Cecil Wetherbee, suddenly rushed to the center of the floor and gave a yell. Bursts of enthusiasm, yells, came from every section of the floor. In response to a yell given by the hundred or more Girl Scouts in the balcony, Howard Ludlow, led a yell for the Girl Scouts. Ludlow dressed as a clown with the aid of an assistant gave a touch of mirth to the entire Jamboree by a continuous mockery of all the serious events going on on the floor.

Games and activities given by the different troops were highly entertaining, from the signaling by Scouts on top of the great birch signalling tower to the mock football game put on by Troop 5. They were both instructive and amusing.

Thirty Scouts led by Cecil Wetherbee gave a mass signalling drill, following which buglers, some half dozen in number, gave many different calls, while up above as if responding to the music whizzed the airplanes provided by Scout Leader Libby and his helpers.

Indian Dances

An unanounced feature of the program was the dramatic entrance and dancing of Eagle Scout Reginald Laubin and Mrs. Laubin, who arrayed in gorgeous costumes entered from their tepee in a corner of the armory. They gave two numbers which were very beautiful and held the attention of every Scout. Mr. Laubin in making one of his thrusts with his long spear scared one of the cubs so that the little fellow fell over backward.

Stepping forth from the huge Boy Scout book standing 16 feet high which was painted by Arthur Adams of Norwich, 50 different Scouts dramatized 50 different merit badges, from angling to taxidermy. Their costumes were entirely original.

Awards Presented

Then came the final, the gathering of the clan, first the Eagle Scouts came forward, then the life Scouts, then the star, the first class, the second class, the tenderfoot. After repeating the Scout oath and law, in unison, 400 Scouts seated themselves on the floor Indian fashion and President H. D. Larrabee, made the awards. To Troop 1 of Norwich went first place with a total of 14 points, and to them went the silk and gold banner valued at $25 a gift of Norwich Rotary. To Troop 1 of Willimantic went second place and a prize of field glasses and signalling kit. Troop 12 of Norwich and 2 of Willimantic tied for third place and to both troops went an archery set.

Fine Exhibits

An interesting feature of the Jamboree were the exhibits, declared by Scout Commissioner A. L. Peale to be the best ever, made by the Scouts Stewart Parmalee, H. E. Budzek, E. H. Lichenstein, Harry Turner, Russell Edmond, and Dennis La Varge all won prizes for their efforts.

First place in exhibits went to Troop 1 Norwich, second place to Troop 12 and third place to Troop 9.

Officers in charge of the Jamboree were: Scout Executive John Sellman, director, Howard Ludlow, assistant director, Scout Executive Fred Burdeck of New London, referee, William Wyman, R. W. Whaples, Captain Meredith Lee; judges, C. N. Bentley, F. H. Wyant, John Williamson. Time keepers, starter, H. Demarest, scorer, Mr. E. L. Duff.

Hill, Nick Tarrant, Carl Young, Walter Weidman, John Boldrighini, Howard Ludlow, Anton Pulaski, Lloyd Rathbun, Robert Burke, H. Downer Johnson, Will Collins, Henry Sebastian, Ernest Plassman, F. H. NORWICH TOWN

Saturday morning there was an attendance of 25 at the meeting of Wolf Cub Pack connected wit hthe Norwich Town Methodist Episcopal church. The pack was inspected by Assistant Cubmaster Clayton Rose, following the opening ceremony and the Wolf Cub howl. There are now four assistant cubmasters, as the pack is growing so rapidly—Edward Jordan, Frederick Ross, Clayton Rose and Edward Gallagher. The pack had a marching period after the cubmaster, Rev. George Warren Potter read the first chapter of a new book. A lively song period and a game period rounded out a happy meeting. Mitchell Floyd was color bearer in the marching, Ellis Bentley played the trumpet and Edward Jordan and William Armstrong the drums. Two new members were received into the pack.

Scouts Choose Troop Name

The members of Troop 2 Boy Scouts have decided to call their troop John Mason Troop 2, in honor of that early patriot of the town. Sunday afternoon the members of the troop made their second annual visit to the John Mason monument for the purpose of decorating it. Last year a wreath was placed upon it and this year a more lasting decoration in the form of two American flags were placed there. In the absence of Senior P. L. Olsen the Scouts were in charge of Patrol Leader Clayton Rose and Patrol Leader Leon Ladd. Following the exercises at the monument, Bugler Edward Jordan played Taps. The Scoutmaster Rev. George Warren Potter and Assistant Scoutmaster Lewis E. Aldrich accompanied the Scouts.

At the meeting of Troop 2, during the past week, the following Scouts received monthly awards—Arthur Bennett, Albert Eyberse, Robert Brown, John Yetke, Leon Ladd, Edward Jordon, Clayton Rose, Earl Robinson, Donald Olsen, Frederick Ross, Edward Eccleston. There was an attendance of 22 including the three judges for the interpatrol contest. The judges were John Carter, William O'Brien and Stanley Adams. The Flying Eagle patrol scored 40 points, Stag patrol 10 points, and the Wolf patrol 10 points. The Stag still holds first place with a score of 160 with the Wolf patrol second with 95 and the Flying Eagles 75. The meeting was in charge of Scoutmaster Rev. George Warren Potter.

Choir Gives Comedy

The vested choir of the Methodist Episcopal church put on a pleasing comedy in the vestry Friday evening before a most appreciative audience as evidenced by the frequent applause. The time of the play was the present and the scene a seaside village. The cast was: Three cousins, Maude Meredith, Virginia Ward; Elizabeth Lyndon, Florence Gembel; Bertha Banisdale, Bertha Backus; Louisa Marston, their aunt, Doris Rose; Mrs. Maloney, landlady at Shoreley, Mary Waters; Jocelyn Denby, M. D., a physician, Muriel Rose. The play was coached by Mrs. Lewis E. Aldrich, who received many compliments for the splendid manner in which the parts were acted. Mrs. Richard Carter was in charge of tickets. The furniture was loaned by the Gilbert Furniture company. The vestry was beautifully decorated with vases and baskets of flowers. Home made candy was sold. Music between the acts was furnished by Francis Wright, violinist and Virginia Ward, pianist. The girls of the choir sang a number of selections. Mrs. LeRoy Miner, assisted by Norman Rose had charge of the sale of home made candy.

TWO YOUTHS FINED AND PUT ON PROBATION

Before Justice of the Peace Walter Tarbox in Poquetanuck Saturday afternoon, two Norwich young men, one 18 and the other 16, and both living in the east side section of the city, were found guilty on a charge of theft and were sentenced. The older one, who is blamed for getting the other one into trouble, was fined $25 and costs and the other was fined $1 and costs. In addition they were both put on probation for a year and ordered to keep away from the Preston City pond for a year. They are not to go within a mile of the pond in that time.

They were arrested Thursday by State Policeman George Dygert after they had been seen rowing across Preston City pond by Game Wardens Bliven and Lillibridge, who observed that their boat contained equipment such as is used in sawmills. The boys claimed this belonged to their fathers, but an investigation showed that it came from the Charles Geisthardt sawmill at Preston City.

TWO SECURE DIVORCES IN SUPERIOR COURT

Joseph Henry Schmidt of New London was granted a divorce by Judge Allyn L. Brown at the short calendar session of the superior court here Friday afternoon. Schmidt obtained his decree from Blanche Julia Keach, Schmidt, alias Palitz, of New London. The couple were married June 19, 1926, and a statutory offense was charged.

Ruth C. Tinkinson of East Lyme was given her freedom from Joseph W. Tinkinson, of Pennsylvania, on grounds of desertion. They were married Nov. 14, 1924.

Decision was reserved by Judge Brown in the petition of Ethel Duklauer Furman, against A. Peter Furman, both of New London. Desertion was alleged.

Judge Brown also took the papers in the case of Herbert H. Adams of this city, against Augusta Friese Adams of parts unknown, in which a statutory offense was charged. They were married Dec. 27, 1922. The father asks the custody of three children. It is said that Mrs. Adams is living in Albany, N. Y.

COMMISSIONER APPOINTMENTS AWAIT GOVERNOR'S RETURN

One or more appointments to fill the two vacancies on the board of county commissioners for New London county are awaiting the return of Governor Trumbull from a fishing trip to Maine as far as could be learned Sunday night.

It is expected that the governor will be back in Hartford on Tuesday and that he will then take up the situation in county commissioner board, which now has but one member and needs at least two in order to be able to function in a business capacity.

Reports current Saturday that Fred A. Beckwith of Niantic had already been appointed to fill one of the vacancies on the board were unwarranted, it was learned Sunday night, as the early return of the governor is being awaited before any action is taken.

Fred Winninger of this city, state policeman stationed at the Groton barracks, was dismissed "for the good of the service" on May 15, according to an announcement made Saturday by Commissioner Robert T. Hurley.

The reason for Winninger's dismissal is said to be that he ran off with a woman recently, although he is already married. Commissioner Hurley refused to make any comment upon this. Winninger's resignation, sent in before he was dismissed, was refused by the commissioner.

TO WHOM, FOR WHOM, THE MASS, REV. FR. GALVIN EXPLAINS

In his series of sermons, having considered the nature of the holy sacrifice of the mass and its excellence, Rev. Myles P. Galvin continued Sunday at the 9 o'clock service in St. Patrick's church to explain the reason for which the mass was instituted, answering the question, To Whom is it offered? and For whom is is offered? Father Galvin had just read the gospel for the fifth Sunday after Easter, John 16, 23-30, in which the Saviour promised His disciples that whatsoever they should ask His Father in His name would be granted them.

Rev. Father Galvin assisted Rev. John J. Reilly in giving holy communion to a large number.

The Junior choir sang "Ave Maria, Star of the Sea," and other hymns at this mass and the recessional of the organist, Henry J. LaFontaine, was the majestic "March of the Priests," from Mendelssohn's "Athalie."

It was announced that Father Reilly will continue the census visitations today (Monday) on Jail Hill, Church and Union streets, while Father Galvin will visit parishioners at the Falls. They are expecting to finish the annual census this week.

Thursday, next, the feast of the Ascension of Our Lord, a holy day of obligation, masses will be at 5.30, 7 and 8. Confessions will be heard Wednesday at 3 and 7 p. m.

A large class of children will receive first holy communion Friday, the 30th, at a special 8 o'clock mass. These children will go to confession Thursday p. m, at 4 o'clock.

TO LEAVE NAVAL PACT FOR SPECIAL SESSION SENATE

Announcement Made After a Series of Conferences With Senate and House Leaders—It Is Expected the Special Session Will Be Ordered By President Hoover Immediately After Adjournment of the Regular Session, Probably By Mid-June—Naval Leaders Continue to Condemn the Treaty Before the Senate Foreign Relations and Naval Committees.

WASHINGTON, May 26—(AP)—Senate leaders determined definitely today after a party conference to defer action on the London naval treaty until the special session President Hoover is prepared to call and agreed on a legislative program looking to an early adjournment.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the republican leader, informed President Hoover of this decision after a series of conferences with both senate and house chieftains during the day and Mr. Hoover was prepared tonight to call the special session for the treaty immediately upon adjournment of the regular session.

House spokesmen declined to discuss a definite date for adjournment while the rivers and harbors bill and the veterans relief measures still are pending in the senate. The republican steering committee in the senate agreed to give these the right of way after the tariff, however, and Senator Watson was looking to an adjournment by mid-June.

Senator Johnson, republican, California, protested at the senate party conference against "rushing" through the London pact and disputed with Senator Reed, republican, a London delegate, over the merits of the treaty.

Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, acting chairman of the steering committee, announced the veterans relief bills and the house motor bus regulation measure would follow in order the rivers and harbors legislation.

Meanwhile, high naval leaders continued their bombardment on the treaty before the foreign relations and naval committees.

One after another of the admirals voiced disapproval of the limitation placed upon American 8-inch gun cruisers.

Answering the request of Senator Johnson, the foreign relations committee decided to request Secretary Stimson to turn over to it the correspondence exchanged between this country and Great Britain prior to the visit last year of Prime Minister MacDonald. In these discussions the preliminary negotiations for the London agreement were undertaken.

Naval officers heard today by the two committees included Admiral Charles F. Hughes, Vice Admiral William C. Cole, commander of the scouting fleet; and Rear Admirals L. M. Nulton, George C. Day and William H. Standley, assistant chief of naval operations; and Captain Alfred W. Johnson.

NAVAL TREATY APPROVED BY CANADIAN COMMONS

OTTAWA, Ont., May 26.—(AP)—The house of commons today approved the London treaty for limitation of naval armaments. It now goes to the senate.

LOOKING UP CLIENTS IN LIQUOR CONSPIRACY

NEW YORK, May 26.—(AP)—Assistant Federal Attorney Watts today made public a letter he said was sent wealthy Americans by Justerini & Brooks, Ltd., London wine merchants, one of whose directors, Edward Tatham, was arrested here recently, charged with conspiracy to violate the prohibition law.

It advised of the impending visit of a director, and said he would help old clients replenish their stocks with "some of our very finest specialties" due to arrive in New York "about March." The letter was typed on what appeared to be stationery of the company and bore Tatham's name as director.

Watts said the "clients" would be "forced" to testify at grand jury proceedings. He added that he produced the letter because the company had been reported as expressing surprise at Tatham's arrest and ignorance of his alleged liquor activities.

ANOTHER CRISIS MENACING NATIONALIST GOVT. OF CHINA

SHANGHAI, May 26.—(AP)—The nationalist government of China tonight faced another crisis menacing its safety. President Chiang Kai-Shek, personally commanding the government forces in Honan province, which since May 8 have been attempting to turn back the northern alliance rebel forces, was informed by Finance Minister Soong that immediate victory was imperative.

Backing his appeal for the quick defeat of the rebels who have fought a series of battles with Chiang's troops, the minister's telegram stated that communistic and bandit depredations throughout China, failure of crops and demoralized business were combining to present the gravest menace the nationalist government had encountered in its brief and turbulent existence.

FAIRFIELD BANDIT HAS ELUDED THE POLICE

STAMFORD, May 26.—(AP)—Joseph Agofsky, 21-year-old Fairfield bandit, wanted in Fairfield county and Lawrence, Mass., tonight had apparently succeeded in eluding police for the third time in less than 24 hours.

After maintaining an all day watch on the wooded estate of Congressman Schuyler Merritt into which Agofsky escaped early today, police tonight practically abandoned all hopes of finding the fugitive there. About forty policemen surrounded the woods, comprising about two square miles, after the youth had sought refuge there. Police Chief John B. Brennan tonight expressed the opinion, however, that Agofsky left his hiding place before the police guard was established.

SLOT MACHINE VICTORY IN COMMON PLEAS COURT

NEW HAVEN, May 26.—(AP)—Twenty-five store and restaurant keepers charged with owning and operating 25-cent slot machines, won a victory in the court of common pleas today.

Judge Robert L. Munger discharged Harry Soff, one of the defendants nabbed in a police drive on the machines, ruling that the evidence did not prove conclusively that the devices were used for gaming purposes.

As the result of his ruling, the cases against the other 24 will be dropped. Four of the defendants, including Soff, were fined $50 each in city court and appealed to the court of commonpleas.

CENSUS SHOWS GROWTH OF STRATFORD 50.5 PER CENT

BRIDGEPORT, May 26—(AP)—Stratford's population increased 50.5 per cent in the last decade, from 12,347 in 1920 to 18,588 this year, a total gain of 6,241, according to preliminary figures of the 1930 federal census made public Monday by George S. Hill, supervisor for Fairfield county. There are 66 farms in the town.

The eastern suburb of Bridgeport maintained its lead over Fairfield during the last decade. In Fairfield, the 1920 population figure of 11,475 was increased 6,134 to 17,1[illegible] or a [illegible] gain of 49.7 per cent.

INVESTIGATING RUMOR THAT RESULTED IN RUN OF BANK

HARTFORD, May 26—(AP)—Officials of the state department of banking and the City Bank and Trust company, today began an investigation of a rumor which over the week end resulted in withdrawals of about $200,000 from the bank.

Bank Commissioner Lester E. Shippee said the mysterious report which gained wide circulation among the Italian depositors, was entirely unfounded and that the bank was solvent and in sound condition.

Many of the depositors withdrew all but a small portion of their savings, beginning Saturday morning when about $50,000 was withdrawn. The run continued today, totalling approximately $150,000.

Shippee said he would press his investigation in the hope of apprehending the person who started the false report and prosecuting him. He said the heavy withdrawals would not affect the soundness of the bank.

COURT DECISION FAVORS EMPLOYES OF RAILROADS

WASHINGTON, May 26.—(AP)—The supreme court today sustained an injunction restraining the Texas and Pacific railroad, a branch of the Southern Pacific system, from interfering with, intimidating or coercing its clerical employes in selecting their representatives in labor disputes.

The controversy was regarded as of great importance not only to labor but to the railroads because it presented to the highest court for the first time, the question whether injunction could be issued under the railway labor act of 1926.

Pointing out that transportation acts of 1920 had provided for voluntary arbitration but not for compulsory relief, the chief justice analyzed the subsequent developments to show that it was the intention of congress to give teeth to legislation aimed to preserve harmony in the relations of the railroads and their employes, and had provided a practical plan to accomplish that result.

PROHIBITION ADMINISTRATOR INDICTED AT SEATTLE, WASH.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 26.—(AP)—Prohibition Administrator Roy C. Lyle and his legal advisor, William M. Whitney, today were indicted by the federal grand jury here which has been investigating the graft charges against the northwest prohibition unit. The charges against the men were not made known.

Earl Corwin, prohibition agent, also was indicted on two counts. He made arrangements to post $2,500 bail.

Later it was disclosed that Whitney was charged with "conspiracy to accept a bribe" and Lyle, Whitney and Corwin each were charged with conspiracy to violate the national prohibition act, the tariff act and the internal revenue act.

SECOND MAILING LIST OF UNIVERSAL OIL AND GAS CO.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., May 26—(AP)—discovery of a second mailing list containing names of more than 50,000 persons in every part of the United States among records of the Universal Oil and Gas company was announced today by E. R. Cochran, postoffice inspector.

Cochran's previous investigations resulted in the filing of mail fraud charges against S. E. J. Cox, promoter and eight officers of the Universal company, and the appointment of a temporary receiver May 7.

Cochran expressed belief that the latest list had been purchased from another oil company just before government action was taken.

The offices of District Attorney Roy St. Lewis and Cochran have been flooded with letters from persons who have invested from $10 to $30,000 each in Universal units and now are anxious to recover their money.

The government charges that in the last year between $1,250,000 and $3,000,000 was obtained from investors by the sale of pre-organization certificates of the Universal concern.

QUIET FOLLOWS BLOODY WEEK END IN INDIA

BOMBAY, India, May 26—(AP)—Comparative quiet, after a bloody week end, today somewhat relieved the tension in government circles.

Violence came into the news again at Rangoon, in Burma where troops and police today kept a tight grip on the situation following a night of strife with dock laborers and coolies imported to take the place of strikers.

Salt raiding continued to engage the police, while numerous other assaults occurred. At Wadala 200 were injured and several hundred other nationalists arrested in a raid on the government salt pans under 83 prominent leaders. The natives stormed the wire enclosure and [illegible] returned with baskets of salt.

The disturbance around the salt depot continued until the police were obliged to fire six rounds of gunfire into the mob, wounding many.

GOLD STAR GROUP AT GRAVE OF UNKNOWN SOLDIER OF FRANCE

PARIS, May 26—(AP)—General Henri Gouraud, the one-armed hero of the Dardanelles, stood in reverent silence today under the Arc de Triomphe while the American gold star mothers of the second group paid homage to the Unknown Soldier of France.

Five wreaths were placed by the American women on the slab which covers the soldier symbolizing the French war dead and over whom burns an eternal flame. It was the first act of the women of the second group before they start for the battlefield cemeteries tomorrow to see for the first time the graves of their sons and husbands.

At a reception later General Gouraud welcomed the women in the name of his government and told them how greatly touched he was by their tender mission.

LORD BYNG RETURNS TO DUTY AS POLICE COMMISSIONER

LONDON, May 26—(AP)—A bronzed and alert appearing commissioner of police came back to his office today after a long holiday. Those who saw him did not need to hear his cheery avowal that he was feeling "perfectly fit."

He was Lord Byng of Vimy, chief commissioner of London's police and former governor-general of Canada. The tall, soldierly form was still unbent, the keen blue eyes had their twinkle, while Lord Byng's face showed plainly the ruddy health left by the healing sun of South Africa.

"I am returning to duty immediately," he said. "As long as I remain in good health I shall not think of retiring."

Recover Stolen Gems Valued At $300,000

Four Men and a Women Arrested In New York—Detectives Had Been On Case Two Months

NEW YORK, May 26.—(AP)—Jewelry stolen from the Blackstone hotel at Miami Beach, Fla., and the Hotel Ambassador at Palm Beach last February and valued at $300,000, was recovered here today. Four men and a woman were arrested.

Detectives, who had been working on the case for two months under the direct supervision of Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney, formerly head of the detective division, made the arrests and recovered the stolen gems in a local hotel.

The prisoners described themselves as James W. Watson, George Cole, Jack Rosen and Hilda Carter, all of New York, and William J. O'Connor, of Buffalo.

Commissioner Mulrooney, in describing the arrest, said Watson, alleged leader of the band, had been under surveillance for some time. He returned today from Chicago and the detectives believing the time ripe, battered down the door of his hotel room, captured the five and recovered the jewelry.

The detectives said the woman threw something out of the window as they crashed in and then swallowed a piece of paper she held in her hand. The jewelry was spread out on a table.

Mulrooney said the owners of the stolen jewelry lived in Detroit, Chicago and Pittsburgh.

Police said the jewelry which was recovered is being checked in an attempt to link the prisoners with two of the most notorious jewel robberies in recent years, the George Maubossin Jewelry store robbery at 530 Park avenue on January 17, 1929, and the robbery of many dinner guests at the home of John L. Carson, Jr., in Snyder, N. Y., a suburb of Buffalo, on November 14, last.

Jewels valued at $500,000 were taken from Maubossin, and jewelry and furs valued at $225,000 were taken from Carson's guests Carson was reported to be on his way to New York with Sheriff Charles Zimmerman of Erie county to see if he can identify any of the five now in custody.

HAUL OF VAULT BURGLARS MAY BE IN EXCESS OF $150,000

ST. LOUIS, May 26.—(AP)—Burglars who looted the safety deposit vault of the Grand National bank here yesterday, may have obtained cash and securities in excess of $150,000, officials of the bank announced late today. The burglars took about $20,000 of the bank's cash, $94,000 worth of negotiable bonds belonging to one customer, and an undetermined amount of securities and cash from 29 other deposit boxes.

At first the loss was estimated at $14,000. Ed Mays, president of the bank, said insurance covered the bank's loss.

Benjamin Strozier, Negro, porter, and William Britten, custodian of the vault, who were bound and gagged, were the only persons who saw the robbers.

Strozier told police there were five or six masked burglars.

MAY MAKE PUBLIC FIGURES OF UNEMPLOYMENT CENSUS

WASHINGTON, May 26.—(AP)—Immediate announcement of the unemployment census by all supervisors has been authorized by Census Director W. M. Stuart.

This will make possible a far speedier summary of the unemployment survey than by a census bureau compilation after all schedules arrive in Washington as was first contemplated.

Supervisors, who earlier had been advised they were not to give out any information concerning unemployment, have now been informed that inquiries have become so numerous it was decided to permit announcement of the figures.

BODY OF NEW HAVEN BOY WAS FOUND IN LAGOON

NEW HAVEN, May 26.—(AP)— The body of Arthur Frankfurter, 12, of this city, was found tonight by two boys in a lagoon at Beaver Pond park.

The boy left his home, located a short distance from the park, about three hours before his body was discovered. Police believe he fell into the lagoon while playing alone.

The boys, who saw the body in the water, notified the boy's father, George Frankfurter, who recovered his son's body. Firemen attempted to resuscitate the boy with an inhalator.

CONVICT FAILED TO BRING HIS COMMITMENT PAPERS

FORT MADISON, Ia., May 26.—(AP)—"No need to send a guard with me," Ed Bonner told officials at Sioux City, where he was sentenced for manslaughter. "I'll go to Fort Madison penitentiary alone."

He did, but when he got here the warden refused to let him enter because he failed to bring his commitment papers, properly signed.

[illegible]nn. Primary An Expensive Affair

Cost of the Grundy Campaign Was $332,076—$200,000 Spent For the Two Wet Candidates.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—(AP)—The senate campaign funds investigating committee learned today that Senator Grundy spent $291,000 of his own money in his unsuccessful race for the Pennsylvania republican senatorial nomination while Secretary Davis, the winner, contributed $10,541 to his own campaign expenditures.

The cost of the senatorial campaign of Francis H. Bohlen, who headed the wet ticket, including Thomas Phillips for governor, was placed at $200,000. The ticket ran third in the primary race of last week.

Robert L. Montgomery, treasurer for the wet ticket, testified the National Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment contributed $100,000 to this campaign. Mr. Bohlen told the senators he spent no money for his campaign but did a lot of hard work which he would not do over again "in a thousand years."

The cost of the Grundy campaign was put at $332,076 by Thomas Bell, treasurer for the defeated senator. He said a campaign chest of $338,602 was collected and some bills remained to be paid.

FAVORS MODIFIED LAW ENFORCEMENT PROGRAM

WASHINGTON, May 26.—(AP)— A modified law enforcement commission program to expedite prohibition enforcement and relieve federal court congestion by defining misdemeanors under the Jones law and authorizing their summary prosecution before United States commissioners was approved today by the house judiciary committee.

After four months of deliberation, the committee agreed on three bills designed to carry out the commission's recommendations. The measures were approved in a supplemental report submitted by Chairman George W. Wickersham of the commission and Attorney General Mitchell. However, the bills do not grant broad discretionary powers to district attorneys and United States commissioners as originally recommended in the report submitted to congress in January by President Hoover.

The Stobbs bill to amend the Jones law to fix the maximum punishment for misdemeanor violations at six months imprisonment and a fine of $500, defines a misdemeanant as one who is not a habitual violator and who has in his possession, sells or transports not more than a gallon of liquor.

SITUATION IN INDIA DEBATED IN COMMONS

LONDON, May 26—(AP)—Debate on Great Britain's troubled Indian situation began in the house of commons today with a plea from Wedgwood Benn, secretary of state for India, for a "rebirth of mutual understanding and respect" between the mother country and her restless Asiatic domain.

Mr. Benn's statement occupied most of the afternoon session. He was interrupted occasionally both by left-wing and by regular members of his own party.

"The duty of the labor government is to carry on the government," Mr. Benn exclaimed angrily, as he swung around.

His speech dealt principally with a review of the Indian trouble. He declared that "the vast majority of the people of India are peacefully pursuing their daily lives in the glad enjoyment of all the blessings of a settled and ordered government, despite all the series of events which have been occurring."

DR. BASS ON HIS WAY TO BEGIN LIFE SENTENCE

BENTONVILLE, Ark., May 26.—(AP)—Dr. Andrew J. Bass, retired wealthy dentist of Columbia, Mo., tonight was on his way to the penitentiary at Little Rock to begin the life sentence imposed on him for the killing of William R. Pearman, Columbia garage mechanic and his co-conspirator in a $200,000 insurance fraud plot.

Abruptly ending his case before the trial began at a special term of circuit court here today Dr. Bass, upon advice of his counsel, entered a plea of guilty to the killing of Pearman, whose body with three bullet wounds in the head was found by the highway near Gravette, Ark., exactly two months ago.

Bass' left arm was bandaged as he came into court, the result of a recent attempt to kill himself in his cell by cutting an artery with a razor blade.

NO GUILT IN PURCHASING OF RUM FROM BOOTLEGGERS

U. S. Supreme Court Finds the Buyer Is Not Liable to Prosecution If the Question of Illegal Transportation and Possession Is Not Involved—Court Also Finds In Favor of Manufacturers Using Liquor In the Preparation of Non-Beverage Products—Both Decisions Were Against the Government.

WASHINGTON, May 26—(AP)—The buyer of bootleg liquor was held by the supreme court today not liable to prosecution as a violator of the prohibition laws if the question of illegal transportation and possession be not involved.

The court declined, however, in another case, to declare whether purchasers who, knowing illegal transportation will be involved, are guilty of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law. It found that the case in which the government had sought to raise that issue had been foreclosed by the plea, equivalent to one of guilty, which had been entered when the accused was arraigned.

In a third case, the court held manufacturers using liquor and alcohol in the preparation of a non-beverage products were entitled to operate until their permits were cancelled for some violation and could not be compelled annually to renew their permits.

The two cases decided on their merits were defeats for the government, and all three decisions were without dissent.

James E. Farrar, of Boston, was indicted for purchasing liquor from a bootlegger. The federal district court for Massachusetts quashed the indictment, taking the position that the prohibition law did not, as the government had contended, make the purchaser equally guilty with the seller.

The government appealed directly to the supreme court, which in an opinion by Justice Sutherland, declared the contention that any purchase without a permit was illegal could not be sustained. The court pointed out that the permit related to that class of persons who are authorized to deal with intoxicating liquors for non-beverage purposes. Purchasers from bootleggers, it added, could not under any circumstances obtain a permit to make such purchases.

Justice Sutherland stated that "Since long before the adoption of the 18th (prohibition) amendment it has been held with practical unanimity that, in the absence of an express statutory provision to the contrary, the purchaser of intoxicating liquor, the sale of which was prohibited, was guilty of no offense."

Suggesting that congress may have considered it more important to make the purchaser available as a witness against the bootlegger, the court added, it had failed to enact any specific legislation making the purchase of liquor illegal.

The justice concluded congress in enacting the Volstead act had "deliberately and designedly omitted to impose upon the purchaser of liquor for beverage purposes any criminal liability."

The second case was that of Alfred E. Norris, a New York banker who was indicted for conspiracy with a Philadelphia bootlegger, from whom he frequently ordered liquor. When arraigned he entered a plea of "nolo contendere," intending to contest the question.

He sought to attack the judgment entered by the federal district court at Philadelphia, and was sustained by the circuit court of appeals, which took the broad ground that the purchase of liquor was no offense under the prohibition law.

The supreme court, in an opinion by Justice Sutherland, held the plea was equivalent to one of "guilty" and that the trial court had properly sentenced Norris. Under these circumstances it found there was no question open which would require it to rule whether the purchaser who orders knowing that illegal transportation was involved was guilty of conspiracy.

The permit decision was in five cases, brought by the government against the Galeno Chemical company, and others; D. P. Paul & Co., Inc., W. H. Long, Inc.; the Swanson Chemical corporation, and Martin H. Cooper, all of New York city.

There was a difference of opinion among senate dry leaders as to the advisability of pressing legislation to fasten guilt equally upon the buyer and seller.

Senator Sheppard, democrat, Texas, has such a measure pending and he announced after the decision today he would urge its early enactment, but Senator Jones, republican, Washington, author of the Jones law, said he doubted the wisdom of such legislation.

Meanwhile opposition arose to the action of the prohibition bureau under the recent supreme court decision that paraphernalia and ingredients intended for use in manufacturing liquor might be seized.

A delegation of Wisconsin legislators protested to Prohibition Commissioner Doran against the seizure of $6,000 worth of such articles from John Lang in their state last week.

Doran told the delegation he had had no report on the seizure.

COURT DECISION MAY REVIVE BATTERSON CASE

HARTFORD, May 26—(AP)—The decision of the United States supreme court that purchasers of liquor under ordinary circumstances, are not guilty of violating the law may have an important effect on the present grand jury investigation, it was learned today and may result in the recall of Mayor Walter E. Batterson and Edward N. Allen, who, when previously questioned about purchases of liquor, declined to answer on the constitutional ground that they might incriminate themselves and were upheld in this stand by Judge Newell Jennings of superior court.

According to authoritative information, an attempt will be made to re-examine the two men and others known to have bought liquor and point out to them that since buying of liquor in itself is not a crime they have no right to refuse to disclose information about their purchases and give as an excuse that their answers would tend to incriminate them. If sustained in this view by the courts, where, no doubt, procedure on such a course would be tested as soon as it was brought into use, the grand jury would have an almost unlimited field for its inquiry.

"BLACK FLEET" SWUNG AROUND BLOCK ISLAND HEADED N. E.

FORT WRIGHT, Fishers Island, N. Y., May 26.—(AP)—The first phase of the minor joint army and navy exercises ended this evening with the "enemy" or "black" fleet drawing off to the northeast, after swinging around Block Island while continuously under observation by the "defending" or "blue" forces. Late in the afternoon presence of the "enemy" was reported from various sources. Army observation planes, observation posts on the mainland, Block Island and Long Island and units of the navy patrol operating with the defense, all reported the approach of the "enemy."

The "black" fleet was observed to consist of eight cruisers, 15 destroyers and a transport. For the purpose of the exercises, it is assumed that the "enemy" fleet did not wish to make an immediate foray up Long Island sound but was content to learn the location and strength of "defending" units. In this the "enemy" must have been to some extent successful for "black" aeroplanes flew over Long Island, Block Island, Fishers Island and the region in which is located the New London submarine base and Trumbull field, the Connecticut base of the "blue" air force.

The exercises, for the first time in this area, gave the army and navy an opportunity to demonstrate that their communication systems could be pooled to common advantage. Hitherto, war games and maneuvers have found the army and navy opposing forces.

PRESIDENT OF HAITI IS TAKING VACATION

NEW YORK, May 26—(AP)—After eight stormy years as president of Haiti, Louis Borno was in New York today to begin a period of rest and travel that will keep him from his own country for many months.

Since 1908 he has been successively minister to Santo Domingo, minister of state, minister of foreign relations, and president of his little republic through years fraught with political friction, but he's finished with that now and he smiled his pleasure as he told of his plans today.

For about two weeks he and his son will engage in sight-seeing here and then, with Mrs. Borno, they will go to France for two months. "The last eight years have been very hard," he said. "I am just going to take a rest and enjoy myself. I will come back to the states from France and will stay for some time. It is a wonderful civilization here and we have much to learn from it."

TARIFF BILL WILL BE TAKEN UP IN SENATE TODAY

WASHINGTON, May 26—(AP)—Minus the export debenture amendment opposed by the administration and embracing a new flexible provision acceptable to President Hoover, the tariff bill conference report will be taken up in the senate tomorrow with a contest in prospect.

Indications tonight were that debate would last well into next week since adjournment over Friday and Saturday has been approved.

Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, chairman of the senate conference committee, presented the report to the senate but under the rules it went over a day.

He said he would explain it schedule by schedule tomorrow.

Beck described the new flexible clause as "worse than the original house proposal" and served notice he would fight its adoption in the house.

MANY WINDHAM TEACHERS TO RETURN FOR REUNION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 26—Many of the men and women who formerly resided or taught school in Windham have already signified their intention of returning here for the Community Reunion week which begins Sunday, June 15th. In the list of the well known former principals and teachers who plan to return are: Fred A. Verplanck, now superintendent of schools in Manchester, Roderick W. Hine of Dedham, Mass., Edwin S. Andrews of Greenwich, George P. Phenix of Hampton Institute, Virginia, Henry T. Burr of New Britain, Edmund J. Bugbee of Turnbridge, Vt., B. Hale Baker of Malden, Mass., A. E. Peterson of New York city, Frank H. Beede of New Haven and John J. Maddox of St. Louis, Mo.

Old "grads" who received diplomas from the Natchaug grammar school as far back as the "eighties" will return in numbers and will gather at a special Old Natchaugers' banquet Friday night of the reunion week. Old Natchaugh was taught by Colonel John B. Welch, who died in 1925, and it is expected that his son, Austin Welch will be present at the Friday evening banquet.

Flag day, which falls on June 14, will be observed here the following day, Sunday as the official opening of the Community Reunion programme. The exercises will be in charge of the local lodge of Elks and will be carried out at the Elks' home where a new flag pole will be dedicated on the grounds. This is expected to be one of the most impressive patriotic functions witnessed here in some time.

The most important "incidental" event in connection with the reunion week will be the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the organization of the St. Jean Baptiste society. With an elaborate historical programme the society's celebration will likewise savor of the reminiscent and comes as a fitting adjunct to the reunion. The organization will play a prominent part in the gigantic Civic day parade.

A special welcome and entertainment for the women, to be held probably at the Elks' home is being arranged for by a committee with Mrs. John Reilly as chairlady.

Coincident with the 78th anniversary of its foundation as an institution of service to the community, the Willimantic Savings Institute will occupy its new banking quarters at the corner of Main and Bank streets next Thursday. Under a conservative management the institution has enjoyed a steady and sound growth until reaching its present strong financial position.

The bank was under the guiding hand of Noah D. Webster for nearly 40 years from 1889 to 1928. Mr. Webster served as secretary and treasurer during these years, retiring from active management in August, 1928, although retaining the office of secretary. Pursuant to a policy of the board of directors, the interest of the depositors of the mutual bank has been held of uppermost importance. Dividends have been made as high as possible, but at no time above a point to threaten the strong position of the institute.

The new building, featuring a new and modern vault, was decided upon by the directors in the spring of 1929 and the result is most pleasing.

The structure is three stories high and faces on Main street, with the depth of the building on Bank street. The exterior finish is of limestone with modernistic design. The banking quarters are done in walnut with furnishings of the same wood. Office suites on the second floor are finished in oak. The third floor is occupied as a lodge room.

O. S. DUGAS SELLS HIS BUSINESS AND RETIRES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, May 26.—Oscar S. Dugas, north end groceryman and one of Putnam's well-known business men, sold his business Saturday to Alcide Gravel of Senexet road and today announced his intentions to retire from business pursuits, at least for the present.

Mr. Dugas came to Putnam from Jewett City about 15 years ago and entered business in the Durand block on the corner of Church and Battey streets, where he conducted the large grocery and meat market. The pleasing personality of the newcomer soon won for him a host of friends and he gradually built up a business which has come to be one of the largest in the city.

Mr. Dugas became interested in the welfare of his community and immediately received the republican nomination and election to the common council from Ward 3, serving the city zealously during his term of office. He is a member of the board of relief and is a member of the new board of water commissioners appointed last year by Mayor Charles A. Richard, during the height of the famous water controversy.

In commenting on his retirement from business life today, Mr. Dugas inferred that he intended to return to some form of business pursuit, following a long rest, but intimated that he had no definite plans for the future.

BENOIT IS FINED $400 ON BOOTLEGGING CHARGES

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 26.—A fine of $400 and costs was paid by Edward Benoit of Battey street, in the city court, at a special session held this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The former supernumerary patrolman entered pleas of guilty to two charges of violation of the liquor laws, one of sale of liquors and the other owning and keeping with intent to sell. The ex-officer, when asked for a plea after hearing the charges read, calmly replied, "guilty." Upon the recommendation of Prosecuting Attorney Eric H. Johnson, Judge M. H. Geissler meted out the fine of $200 on each count with costs, taxed at $27.90, which Benoit promptly paid.

Signing a waiver on the stock of beverages which were seized by state troopers Saturday evening during a raid on the garage beer parlor which Benoit admitted he was conducting, the one-time policeman left the courtroom without uttering a word in defense of himself. State Officer Royal V. Scranton, conductor of the raid, appeared for the state but offered no testimony, other than to state that the beer and liquors confiscated were not of a quality to be used for medicinal purposes.

WEDDINGS

Provost—Robitaille

A pretty early morning spring wedding took place this morning at St. Mary's church at 7, when Miss Rose Robitaille, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Robitaille of Daniels street, was united in marriage with Alfred Provost of Webster, son of Mr. and Mrs Moses Provost of that city. Rev. Joseph D. Casey performed the wedding ceremony and was also celebrant at the accompanying nuptial high mass. Miss Robitaille was attended by Miss Lauretta Provost of Webster, a sister of the groom. Aldege Robitaille, a brother of the bride, attended Mr. Provost as best man. The couple marched to the altar to the strains of the wedding march from "Lohengrin," played by Miss Rose Metras, church organist.

The bride was becoming in a gown of white satin cut on severe lines and devoid of trimming except for a narrow edging of Brussels lace at the neck. Her veil of plain tulle was arranged in cap shape and was crowned with orange blossoms. She carried an arm bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Provost as bridesmaid wore a frock of pale blue and a picture hat to match. Her bouquet of sweet peas and fern was arranged in shower effect. Following the church ceremony, a wedding breakfast, which was attended only by members of the immediate families, was served at the home of the bride on Daniels street. Mr. and Mrs. Provost left shortly before noon on an automobile trip to Canada, where they are to spend their honeymoon.

Rousseau—Lapointe

At 8 o'clock at St. Mary's church this morning, in the presence of a large group of friends and relatives, Miss Rose Ora Lapointe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Lapointe of Ravine street, became the bride of Harry Rousseau of New Market, N. H., and Putnam. Rev. U. O. Bellerose, pastor of St. Mary's, performed the ceremony and celebrated the nuptial high mass. Miss Antoinette Lussier attended Miss Lapointe as bridesmaid and Albert Lapointe, a brother of the bride, acted as best man. The bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" was rendered by Miss Rose Metras at the organ and for a recessional march Miss Metras selected Mendelssohn's Wedding March. The nuptials are popular members of the city's younger set.

A soot-clogged chimney and a sudden cold wave are not the best of combinations in the opinion of Deputy Fire Chief Dumas and his long-held contention was adequately proved this morning at 11:30 o'clock when a tenant in a block at 175 Providence street lighted a small fire to drive off the sudden chill of the house, and in doing so kindled a stubborn fire in the carbon clusters within the chimney. A call was sent to the central fire station and the pumper company responded to the alarm received during the height of a heavy downpour of rain. The fire was extinguished with no little difficulty for the firemen, who spent considerable time and effort protecting themselves from the hazards of the rain-soaked roof from where they sprayed the municipal soot-cleaning chemicals into the chimney.

FUNERAL

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Hackett Breen, 98-year-old Pomfret resident, who died Friday after a lingering illness, was held this morning in the Church of the Holy Trinity, Pomfret, at 9 o'clock. Rev. Frederick M. Coholan, pastor, celebrated the requiem high mass, which was largely attended by friends and relatives of the deceased. The bearers were Michael Eddington, Thomas Maher, Patrick Quigley, Frank Feeney, Hugh Murphy and Keyren H. Cotter. The floral tributes appeared in profusion. Burial was in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery.

Interment services for Sister Jeanne De Chantal, a member of the order of the Sisters of the Holy Ghost and one of the nuns at St. Mary's convent in Jewett City, whose death occurred Friday evening, were held this morning in the plot of the nuns at St. Mary's cemetery. The funeral procession arrived in this city headed by an escort of officers of the state police barracks at Danielson. The funeral mass for Sister Chantal was held at St. Mary's church in Jewett City.

There were more than 160 schoool basketball teams in Montana during the recent season, though the state's population is slightly less than four persons to the square mile.

John Mostil did some travelling from last fall to this spring. The White Sox sent him to Toledo and Toledo sent him to the Giants and the Giants returned him to Toledo and Toledo returned him to the White Sox.

Wonderful Salts Says Mrs. Solomon

Tells How She Lost 47 Pounds In 3 Months

"I have been taking Kruschen Salts for nearly 3 months. I have continued taking one teaspoonful in warm water every morning. I then weighed 217 pounds, was always bothered with pains in my back and lower part of abdomen and sides.

"Now I am glad to say I am a well woman, feel much stronger, years younger and my weight is 170 pounds. I do not only feel better but I look better, so all my friends say.

"I shall never be without Kruschen Salts, will never cease taking my daily dose and more than glad to highly recommend it for the great good that is in it." Mrs. S. A. Solomon, New Bern, N. C., Jan. 1930." "P. S. You may think I am exaggerating by writing such a long letter but truly I feel so indebted to you for putting out such wonderful salts that I cannot say enough."

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts 4 weeks costs but 85 cents at druggists the world over. Take one-half teaspoon in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—walk a little each day. Do not overeat.

IMPROPER TIMING OF SPRAYING FATAL TO BEES

Efforts to save the honey bees from wholesale slaughter through untimely spraying of fruit trees are being made by the Massachusetts department of agriculture through Dr. Burton N. Gates, chief inspector of apiaries for the department. Beekeepers in various parts of the state have reported that spraying of fruit trees frequently kills so many of the bees that there is great loss in honey production. In some cases, the swarms are so depleted in numbers that they are practically useless.

The beekeepers sought legislation to control this destructive spraying, but investigation by the department of agriculture and the Massachusetts Agricultural college indicated that it would be almost impossible to frame any law which would fit the varying conditions throughout the state. The damage is done when the poison sprays are put on during the season of full bloom of apple and other fruit trees. The bees seeking the nectar from the blossoms take in small amounts of this poison and are killed. Spraying at any time except when the trees are in full bloom does no damage to the bees.

The better informed fruit growers of the state are well aware of this situation and would not think of spraying trees when in full bloom for two reasons: first, that spraying at such a time would injure the blossoms and decrease the yield and second, because it would kill the bees and thus cut down the set of fruit. Without a sufficient number of bees in the orchard, pollen would not be carried from one blossom to another.

At a conference held last year, it was brought out that the spray schedules recommended by the experts at the Massachusetts Agricultural college and generally followed by progressive fruit growers, are so timed that they would do no damage to bees. The danger lies in the unwise spraying by less well-informed fruit growers and with the men who travel about doing spraying jobs. Many of these commercial sprayers keep right on through the spraying season, taking one job after another. The conference resulted in a decision to undertake an educational campaign to minimize the danger. It was too late to take action last year, but the campaign is now under way, headed by Dr. Gates.

The first step is the general distribution of a spraying calendar and recommendations as to materials and times of application written by Prof. A. I. Bourne of the Massachusetts Agricultural college. In this publication the danger to the bees is fully brought out, and the possibility of spraying at such time as to minimize the danger is also clearly stated. The state department of agriculture is sending out 1,800 of these to parties who should be interested.

Aside from the ill-timed spraying of fruit trees and ornamental shrubs and trees, there is a real danger to bees from excessive spraying or dumping spray materials. Bees drink a considerable amount of water daily. If the spraying material is put on in such quantities that pools form in hollows on the ground, or if the remains of a tankful are dumped in the field, bees which are getting nectar from other sources get the poison and are killed.

CULTIVATING CELERY IS A "FUSSY" JOB

Celery is not one of the easy vegetables for home gardeners. Plants started under glass or purchased for the early crop should be set in the ground as early as the soil is in good workable condition. They are spaced about six inches in the row. Rows are commonly at least three feet apart, but if boards or paper are used for blanching they may be much closer, even as close as one foot. Celery requires, for satisfactory growth, a soil which is rich in plant food and humus, well supplied with moisture, yet well drained. Rather light soil is preferred.

Blanching is done by excluding light from the leaf stalks while the plants are still growing. The late crop is commonly banked with earth, but since celery rots in hot weather under these conditions, boards are commonly stood on edge close to the row on both sides and held in place by short stakes. Strips of building paper may be stretched between posts instead.

Seed for the late crop is sown in outdoor beds or in cold frames in April. Golden Self-Blanching and Easy Blanching are standard varieties and are grown for both early and late crops, but for fall and early winter use, the home gardener may well grow Emperor of Giant Pascal. These do not blanch so easily, but they are superior in quality.

KNOW TIMBER VALUES

A woodland owner in Maryland received an offer of $1,500 for a tract of timber, which he was inclined to accept as a fair price. Before the sale was made, however, he asked the state forester to estimate the amount and market value of the timber. The timber was then publicly advertised, with the result that the man who had previously made the $1,500 offer raised his bid to $4,500, and the sale was finally made to another person for about $5,500. Only three months elapsed between the date of the first offer and the final sale. Not only was the original offer increased nearly four times over, but the tract was also left in excellent condition after the cutting.

COLOR TYPES OF TOMATOES

The usual idea of a tomato is that it is red but with the numerous varieties developed there is a sufficient variation in color so that there are three color types. These are the red or scarlet, the pink and the purple. The last is really a purplish pink and ordinarily would be regarded as red but the purple cast is obvious when one's attention is called to it.

The bright red tomatoes are the most popular type although the color is no indication of superior quality. The pink tomatoes are sometimes suspected of being tomatoes that are not thoroughly ripe, but such is not the case. June Pink is an excellent type of the pink tomatoes, a rosy red lacking the vivid scarlet of the true red types.

There are, of course, also the yellow tomatoes, entirely distinct from the red, pink and purple types, all three of which are merely tones of the same color.

In season tomatoes fall into three classes, the extra early, second early and main crop varieties. Earliana, John Baer, and Bonny Best are early types. Nearly all of this type have smooth round fruit of regular shape and medium size.

Dwarf Stone qualifies in the second early and the huge Ponderosa in the main crop division.

Plant earliest, second early and main crop varieties to provide a continuous succession of tomatoes when they come into season. Tomato plants may be set out until in June with excellent success. In fact, Decoration day over large portions of the country is recognized as an excellent date on which to transplant tomatoes into the open. They are then safe from vagrant frosts, which have happened well into May on occasions in the central states during the last few years.

Cutworms often do great damage to freshly set out tomatoes. If the plants are grown in paper pots, they may be set out, pot and all, merely tearing out the bottom of the pot, the rest acting as a cutworm foil.

PEAT MOSS FIGURES IN THE GARDEN SCHEME

Peat moss is a new element in gardening that is just beginning to figure in the gardeners' scheme of affairs. It will figure more importantly as its value is known. Peat moss is peat in commercial form ready for use in the garden. It is a soft brown granulated material which comes in big bales at moderate prices. One bale will go a long ways in garden value.

There has been some discussion as to whether it had any real value as a fertilizer and scientific analysis says that it has a slight nitrogen content. Whether it has or not, the main factor to the gardener is that it makes things grow when dug into the soil. When pulverized sheep or shredded cow manure is added, it is a fine fertilizer and shows fine results quickly.

One highly recommended use of the moss is to top-dress lawns where it produces very gratifying results. The usual directions are to sow the grass seed in the usual manner, then cover the lawn with a mulch of half an inch of peat moss. It is fine and light and lumps are readily broken up. They should be crumbled before it is applied.

The grass comes through speedily and makes more luxuriant growth than under the usual lawn methods.

Peat moss is now valued highly in making compost for the germination of seeds that must have a regular degree of moisture in order to grow, the primroses in particular being greatly aided. The usual prescription is one part ordinary garden soil and one part of peat moss with a sprinkling of silver sand to add to the porosity.

Peat moss has an acid reaction in the soil and as it is a sterile medium the claim is made that it prevents damping off. It is very valuable material to dig into the soil to give greater water retentive qualities to sandy soils. It is very useful as a winter mulch put on after the first freeze and being effective in preventing heaving.

THE NORWICH INN

In its effort to meet one of its great needs, increased hotel accommodations, Norwich has had two occasions for elation, the first when it was disclosed following an intensive campaign that sufficient subscriptions had been received to insure the erection of the Norwich Inn and now the realization of that much cherished anticipation, the completion and opening of the new hostelry.

Having recognized the demand for more accommodations for both residents and visitors, Norwich has responded generously in its determination to eliminate a handicap. It has put not only its faith and encouragement into the enterprise but it has backed it financially, so that hundreds in this community are stockholders and therefore deeply interested in its success.

Thus with management of the highest character, with an equipment that cannot fail to please and attract, with accommodations which are up to date in every respect, the opening of the Norwich Inn, located as it is at a point which commands a charming view in several directions, gives promise of solving, for the time being at least, one of the city's long-standing problems, and it should serve as a magnet for much tourist patronage.

Every city needs adequate accommodations for those visitors who would stay therein. It requires accommodations for those who prefer residence in a hotel or inn. If there has been lack of facilities in the past such will not be the case for the immediate future. One of the big assets of a city is good hotels. Norwich has reason to feel that it has done a good deed for itself through the erection of the Norwich Inn and to look forward confidently to results that will be gratifying to the builders, the management and the community.

WHAT PORTO RICO SHOWS

It is not a particularly pleasing picture that is presented by Col. Theodore Roosevelt, governor of Porto Rico, when he reports to the house appropriations committee upon conditions in the island. It is 32 years since the United States took over the governing of Porto Rico, offering an opportunity for sympathetic administration and intelligent legislation for the benefit of a people who had no hostile sentiment towards the directing governmental body. It was an inviting field for constructive statesmanship.

But Colonel Roosevelt's report shows how far short of realizing that opportunity the results have come. The tuberculosis rate is four and one-half times that of the United States, much greater than that of any other country in the American hemisphere. There are 60,000 cases of hookworm. The malaria rate is 50 times that of continental United States. More than half the children are undernourished, and this in one of the most fertile lands on earth, where nature alone is enough to prevent actual starvation. Organized industry does not seem well developed. The real misfortunes of Porto Ricans are basic and not sporadic.

If Washington is responsible for the social progress of the island, it should see the force of Governor Roosevelt's plea for a $3,000,000 appropriation from the United States treasury to improve the economic and political conditions that are far from satisfactory for a people living under the American flag and entitled to protection. Whether the remedy lies through self-government or otherwise, American capital, with government encouragement, could well be most useful, if not indispensable, towards permanent betterment of conditions for the Porto Ricans.

CONQUERING THE AIR

With majestic indifference to hazards of distance, wind and storm, the Graf Zeppelin arrived in Brazil, thus completing the first dirigible flight across the South Atlantic and bringing to the people of South America a new basis for estimating the effect that air travel will have upon their contacts with European nations. Already the South American countries have been awakened to the commercial possibilities of an air mail service, for French and Spanish pilots have made the crossing in airplanes and the United States now maintains a regular South American mail flight schedule, so that our neighbors in the southern hemisphere are within reach of improved mail service to their principal markets here.

The Zeppelin flight to South America was the sixth trip across the Atlantic which the ship has made. The feature of particular interest to passengers on this trip was the matter of fact attitude of the crew. They worked, not as adventurers upon a hazardous undertaking, but as masters of a proved medium of travel, much as the crew of a trans-Atlantic liner might work. Long flights for the Graf Zeppelin seem to have gone far beyond the experimental stage.

The voyage includes a stop at Rio Janeiro, a cruise north to Lakehurst by way of Havana, and then across the Atlantic to the home port, a total of 18,000 miles. While the Zeppelin commander refers in his public speeches to the message of goodwill from Germany that the ship brings, it seems probable that its extensive voyages are profitable. How much of this profit is due to the novelty of dirigible travel cannot be estimated, but the ownership of the craft does not seem to be apprehensive about dissipating the novelty advantage. Repeated successful flights affirm German faith in the commercial future of the dirigible, and reflect a confidence which will stimulate interest among dirigible makers in other countries.

CONNECTICUT RECREATIONAL PROPERTY

When it is disclosed by Tax Commissioner Blodgett that Connecticut has property used for recreational purposes to the value of $51,600,000 and that there is collected over $1,100,000 in local taxes on such property, it may be surprising to those who have given little thought to such a situation, but it represents the steady and persistent growth which has resulted at the shore, at camps and other recreational points about the state.

When it is realized that there are few available places along the sound where the public can find a welcome at the beaches any longer, and when that great long line of cottages from the New York to the Rhode Island lines are visioned it presents a situation in marked contrast to a quarter of a century ago. There have been huge outlays on shore property, but there have also been large expenditures at the many lakes and ponds about the state, a development which has taken place in a much less period of time.

Connecticut doesn't lead the list of New England states in the valuation of recreational property, but it has made big strides and it is still going strong. This property, in fact, is contributing heavily through taxation to the towns in which it is located, even though used but part of the year. It provides a source of revenue for many small towns which they never had before and they are making the most of it.

Thus, while the New England states are attaching much importance to the millions of visitors which spend their vacations here every summer, it cannot be overlooked that recreational property and its owners and occupants are the source of a substantial revenue taxwise and tradewise for what are in most instances the small towns of the state, and the indications are that it will continue to grow much larger before it experiences any turn in the other direction.

NO ANTI-TRUST CAMPAIGN

By a recent explicit denial which he issued, Attorney General Mitchell made it apparent that he has no plans for a general attack upon sundry industrial trusts, mergers and combinations, against which there had been various rumors that it was the government's intention to institute an anti-trust campaign. These reports probably arose through the suit brought by the department of justice under the Sherman anti-trust law against the Radio Corporation of America, the General Electric, the Western Electric and six or seven other corporations. But this suit, it is affirmed, is considered advisable by all the interests concerned in order to procure adjudication upon issues not fully covered by the major trust decisions of the federal courts.

Wilful violators of law are not in the habit of giving information voluntarily regarding their plans and actions, but Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the Radio corporation, says that they have kept the government informed of every move taken by them towards cooperation in the radio industry. Mr. Young and others deny specifically that there has been any trust law violation in the pooling of patents or that such arrangements have hampered competition or tended to oppress consumers. The radio industry has marched rapidly in the last few years and competition is keen, but the celebrated rule of reason employed by the courts in construing the anti-trust law naturally will be applied in the radio case, as it has been in other cases.

There are doubts on certain points which the federal government has and there are misgivings on the part of many members of congress and some independent radio concerns which are to be cleared up by the radio suit in the supreme court. In that view it can be seen that the suit now pending has an important purpose which is quite apart from any trust-smashing ambitions in the department of justice or elsewhere. There have been enough famous court decisions to clarify the anti-trust law so that there would appear to be little occasion for the attorney general to go gunning for corporations more or less at random on the suspicion that they were violating the law.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The determination on the part of President Hoover to have the London treaty vote taken by the senate before the regular session in December has brought to the surface what was an undercurrent of discontent regarding holding congress in session for that purpose after the tariff is disposed of.

It will be recalled that more than a month ago Floor Leader Tilson of Connecticut, predicted that an extra session would be called for the senate, and the house permitted to stay adjourned until December, if the treaty was not acted on by the senate after other business now pending had been disposed off by congress.

Many senators were confident such a thing could not happen, but now are convinced that the proposal, which seems to have emanated from Tilson, will be adopted. Mr. Tilson expressed, at the time, that it would be unjust to require the house to remain in even nominal session, during a prolonged debate on the treaty, as the house does not act on it, treaties being acted upon by the president and the senate only.

So, if an adjournment takes place after the tariff is disposed of, members of the house will have Tilson to thank for it.

There is a big "if" standing between the suggestion and its adoption, however, for the consent of the senate must be obtained, and at this moment, there isn't much love lost between the two branches of congress.

It is also interesting to note, that apparently Senator Walcott is taking a strong part in matters relating to President Hoover's program. Mr. Walcott was a guest at the Hoover camp over the week end; he is one of the leaders of what was temporarily known as "The Young Guard" during certain phases of disagreement among the republicans of the senate. He is a close personal friend of Mr. Hoover; is occupying the Hoover house, on a long lease, and is in many other ways known to be in close association and accord with the president.

So Washington politicians are watching Walcott closely, hoping this week he may make some move that will show more plainly how the presidential mind is working. There are those, however, who think Walcott may not agree with the president on all the matters now pending. So predictions based on his hasty return from Rapidan, his visit to the white house, and quick return to the camp, are practically valueless, unless they are taken to reveal an even closer intimacy with the president than is generally known to exist.

In appointing a committee this week, to investigate the "replacement and conservation of wild life" Senator Walcott heads the list.

President Hoover is holding to his last year custom of spending week ends at his camp in the Virginia hills; he is likewise applying immersion methods to his week end visitors, as they slip, slide and plunge, into the gurgling water of the stream, while he "directs" the building of still more fish dams, just as he did last summer. His latest victim was the tall and portly Dr. Work, former chairman of the national republican committee. We are told that Dr. Work rolled over with the log which he tried to use, as a parking place; that as a result they figuratively hung the dignified doctor up to dry on an improvised clothes line, after an exciting rescue from the shallow waters of the Rapidan river had been accomplished by his fellow dam builders, among whom were Secretary of State Simpson and others of the cabinet and senate.

Spending Sunday at the camp with President Hoover is a sort of royal command, not to be declined, but is suggestive of third degree methods, as described by returning officials who have been honored by invitations.

And speaking of the Hoover camp reminds me that although Senator Borah is devoted to fishing, he has yet to be included in the week ends at Rapidan river. This has caused a good deal of speculation here as to whether it was because he had not been invited, or whether he took the bits in his teeth and declined, even a presidential command. Borah would be quite likely to do the one and the president do the other, for both are what old fashioned down easterners are apt to term "set in their ways." And neither would resent the action of the other, for they are of understanding minds and each accustomed to his own way.

Senator Borah, for years, declined every white house invitation. He would not wear an evening dress suit; he would not conform to certain formal customs; he just didn't want to go, and that was the end of it. But after Mr. Coolidge became president he broke that heretofore inflexible rule of his. And appeared spick and span at one of the New Year receptions. It was his first white house appearance—a sort of social debut. Meeting him I said: "Why, Mr. Senator, you have given us a surprise," and he smiled broadly and replied: "I've given myself one." After that he was a frequent white house visitor at dinners and informal affairs, but I doubt if he donned a spike tailed coat, as he called it, though it is possible he did and so again surprised himself.

Senator Borah is an ardent fisherman, but cares more for big fish than trout fishing. He likes Idaho fish—he likes roughing it in camp; he knows just how to cook his "catch" and when lucky enough to be in his home state when corn is at its prime, he summons a few friends, mounts his saddle horse, and leads a party to his favorite fishing ground. When dinner time comes, the senator rolls up his sleeves, cooks the fish to the queen's taste, fries a big plate of flapjacks, makes the coffee, roasts the corn, and is as much in his element as when he stands on the floor of the senate and waves the party flag down an unbroken path, which his conservative colleagues believe to be the road to national destruction.

In spite of the fact that last fall the government began to destroy and burn the old large size paper currency at the rate of six tons a day, quite a little of it is still in circulation.

One day in Washington, the past week, a man went into a store, made a small purchase and handed the sales girl a big one dollar bill. He smiled sheepishly and the girl smiled back, but he got his dollar's worth of goods just the same. But he seemed to feel he was a cave dweller, or had come "five miles out of a solid rock," as an old time New England expression runs.

The long-cherished ambition of Cleveland to boast a population larger than 900,000 was realized when a recheck of 16 wards added 1,768 names to the previously reported total. The addition gives Cleveland a population of 901,482, a gain of 13.1 per cent over the 1920 population of 796,841.

THESE CLEVER HUSBANDS

"Oh, Mrs. Granger," gushed the new member, misleading her partner by discarding improperly, "I think you must have the most thrilling life. Imagine being the wife of a mystery story writer! Isn't it just terribly exciting?"

"Indeed, it is," replied Mrs. Granger absently, executing a deft finesse.

"But it must be a terrible strain—mentally, I mean," went on the new member. "And, dear me"—here the new member lowered her voice and tittered roguishly—"you must be afraid to do anything. Why, your husband would guess when you had done the least little thing, wouldn't he?"

"Yes. Yes, indeed," said Mrs. Granger. She continued her diamonds and completed the hand with a squeeze play that gave her a little slam.

It was after 5 when Mrs. Granger reached home, the bridge prize tucked securely under her arm. Harold, she decided, would have finished the day's work on his new detective novel. In fact, he probably had been reading or sleeping for the last two hours. It was surprising how little work that man got done when she was away for an afternoon.

Her suspicions were confirmed when she entered the house. Harold was seated in the arm chair, his feet draped over the arm, his pipe emitting great clouds of smoke and the evening paper hiding most of him. He greeted her gloomily, then his eyes narrowed in their most crafty manner.

"Well," he said sagely, "I see you have spent the afternoon shopping. How do I know? You walk in slowly. You are tired. Therefore you have not been sitting down at a party, but have been tramping up and down store aisles. Also, you have a package under your arm."

"Why, how clever of you, dear," exclaimed Mrs. Granger. "But I didn't find much that I wanted. Just a little thing to give as a bridge prize some time." She tossed the prize she had won upon a table, wondering how her husband could possibly think that such a package could have come from a store.

"I think I can carry my deductions a bit further," went on her husband. "You are tired, and it is getting late. Therefore we will have baked beans from a can and store cookies for dinner. Am I right?"

"Oh, I hope you don't mind," said Mrs. Granger anxiously.

"Of course not," replied Mr. Granger magnanimously.

Mrs. Granger deposited her hat and coat in the bedroom and proceeded to the kitchen. Regretfully she abandoned plans for broiling the beef tenderloins, already in the refrigerator. On the top emergency shelf of the cupboard she found a can of beans and prepared to heat them. From the same place she took a package of cookies. That delicious cherry pie would have to wait until tomorrow.

Mr. Granger seemed a bit morose during dinner. Finally Mrs. Granger inquired the reason and learned that the new detective novel was not going well. They talked it over, dipping into clews, motives, criminal psychology. As soon as the dishes were out of the way Mrs. Granger read what Harold had written during the day. Almost immediately she was able to grasp the point that was bothering him. As usual, she was quick to suggest and describe a method of overcoming the difficulty and was rewarded by seeing her husband's good humor restored.

That night, just before going to bed, he kissed her fondly and said, "Marian, it certainly helps me to talk things over with you. As soon as I do that my mind seems to work better and in a flash I see the right way to handle a puzzling situation. It's strange that you should have such an efect on my mental processes, isn't it?"

"I can't understand it," said Mrs. Granger. "But I'm so glad, dear, that I can be of a little help to you."

"It's such a pleasure to meet you, Mrs. Granger," said the out-of-town guest as she shuffled the cards. "And how I envy you! It must be very stimulating to be married to a writer of detective stories. But isn't it rather a strain, just keeping up with such a brilliant man?"

"Yes, sometimes it is rather a strain," agreed Mrs. Granger. Then she smiled. "But it's reaaly not so bad. All you need is a little tact, a good memory for other writers' successful methods, and a few cans of beans on the top shelf of the cupboard."—Exchange

Memorial Day.

Mr. Editor: I do not think there is any day in the year that is looked forward to with keener interest than Decoration day except possibly Christmas. Even the Fourth of July must run second, for on this one day of the year every one who has wandered away from the old home town returns to once again look upon the few remaining Boys in Blue who are still with us. In the years that have passed it seems to me there was more reverence, more of a sympathetic attitude shown toward the day than is shown at this time. Today it is observed in the line of sports and things of a like nature and there is all manner of amusements to make this a day that we love to recall. I do not think the ones who are the few that remain of the Grand Army would care to have it otherwise for they know deep down in the hearts of the ones who are of this generation they are just proud of those few that remain of those boys of '61 to '65, and those old fellows enter into this spirit of the occasion for they can see in those boys who are entered into those different sports just a return of themselves as they were when they answered the call to protect their homes and their loved ones.

There may be others who can travel back to those strenuous days when the president called for help to uphold the honor and integrity of this country, for surely I am not alone in this for many times I traveled over to what to me is historic ground to the fairgrounds that was named in honor of the late General Aiken—Camp Aiken. Here I saw some of those boys, as they love to call each other, indulging in the same sports as running and jumping and other games incident to the times. But now it has to be that the game of life is nearly run. We look back with regret and see some of those historic old places that knew those boys are slowly but surely moving on with those whom we today try to honor and whose memory we try to cherish. All these scenes and incidents are even today as visible and clear to me as though they were but yesterday. I see those men in the mirror of life, splendid specimens of young men, and today after the lapse of years, old and bent; and yet they were the ones who offered their all to protect and keep the union from ruin. To the one whom those Boys in Blue called Father Abraham we recall in loving memory. We give a thought, as he laid asleep, to what his son Tad had said: "Father was never really happy here, for his whole life was full of trouble. And now beyond the skies in that other and brighter world he will meet his boys again: those Boys in Blue."

How many among you can recall the fact that Lincoln's wife, Mary, spent the last few years of her life under a clouded mind, having lost her reason? She blamed herself for the tragedy of Lincoln's death for she had insisted that he go to the theatre on that fatal night. He did not want to go, but he went to please her. Perhaps the very last thing that Lincoln ever wrote was on a petition from a southern boy asking that he might be pardoned so that he could return home to his old mother who was waiting and watching for him. On this petition Lincoln wrote, "Let it be done," and thus his very last act was one of forgiveness and charity. Then in the last act of this great drama of life, we see him perhaps like some one of those rulers of old, borne across the continent to where he had started from some four years before on his way to the greatest office in the gift of a great people. Now he returns and after countless numbers had filed before his coffin he was lowered into the ground in that little cemetery at Springfield, Ill., where he sleeps beside the grave of his little boy, at rest.

On Memorial day in every little village and in every town, we gather together each year in memory of those brave men of whom it can be said, they were the flower of the nation for they went forth to fight for their beloved country, and for the cause they thought was just. Every one true Americans, without regard to race, creed or color.

And now we can say:

"How sleep the brave who sink to rest,
By all their country's wishes blest,
When spring with dewy fingers cold,
Returns to deck their hallowed mould
She there shall dress a sweeter sod,
Than fancy's feet have ever trod."

And so we leave the hallowed ground, just asleep.

New Methods For Old Lip-Reading For The Hard Of Hearing

By Alice G. Bryant, M. D., Boston.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

It is useful as it is timely to turn our thoughts to the hard of hearing. Our educational systems are adapted for hearing pupils, but with 3,000,000 hard of hearing pupils in our public schools, we must safeguard their development by providing and speeding up lip-reading.

Lip-reading widens the scope of individual effort, and makes an enormous difference in results attained. We cannot afford to offer equal educational opportunities to every pupil and then fail to give every hard of hearing pupil the tool to work with. We can not afford the disastrous cumulative effects of only half educating the hard of hearing because we fail to prepare him to share the full educational advantages of our public schools. We cannot afford to starve him intellectually.

There is no excuse for neglecting to test the hearing of all the school children or to overlook the value and use of lip-reading or to resort to medical examinations, treatments, advice and supervision. We need an open mind and more generous policy of efficient service and organization in these matters. We need to be less concerned about the exact cost of adequately training the hard of hearing pupils, and the education offered them ought long ago to have been looked up as out-of-date, risky and unfair when it obstructs unnecessarily the efficiency and progress of the hard of hearing pupils.

Many such pupils, being untrained in lip-reading, fail or come perilously near to failure by having to repeat class after class. Such enforced repetition of work has been many times a hopeless business; involving large money outlay and slender returns in knowledge. Many of the systems of education in force today were made several years ago and they have not kept pace with the needs, difficulties and developments of the hard of hearing. We need a broad and comprehensive survey—a national survey of these needs.

Education should safeguard our hard of hearing pupils and should be subject to such revision by competent authorities as may be necessary from time to time. There are various theories in education, but the real test of their value comes in practical demonstrations and tried applications. We are collecting observed and recorded facts, supplementing them by thought and speculation, and we should use them.

Such facts plead for an education that shall be of equal utility to the hearing and hard of hearing pupil, and that shall give each child full freedom of development for his constructive progress and security. Lip-reading has given a marked demonstration of its individual adaptability and of its elasticity of purpose and action. It is for public sentiment to secure its wider adoption.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, May 26—If senators whose offices have been rifled in the night, believe that government secret service agents did the job, they are remarkably patient about it.

Outside of Senator McKellar's whimsical report in the senate the day after a visitation to his office, nothing has been done about the matter except consider employment of a night watchman.

Hi. Johnson of California, whose office files were overhauled two nights running, seemed to take it as a joke.

McKellar is considering doing something. He told the Bystander he was going to look into secret service activities a bit the next time an appropriation bill providing funds for that service came along.

"The secret service does do a lot of things without authority of law. Why, they had nine operatives on the case of one federal judge."

"Have you any idea what your office visitor might have been after?"

"No. I suppose he was just fishing in my files."

Digs At Secret Service

In reporting his experience to the senate, McKellar said he had heard the government secret service was very efficient.

"It may be efficient, but certainly it leaves a man's office in a very disorderly looking condition," he added.

"If we had a Cheka, as they have in Russia, there might be some excuse for such a proceeding," McKellar went on. "I hope it will not occur again."

But it did, almost at once. It did not happen again to McKellar, to be sure; but it did to Johnson. And if anybody in Washington knows what it was all about it has not yet been disclosed.

Possibly it is just an aggravated form of office pilfering of which Senators Smoot, Brock and some others have been victims recently.

Housekeeper Absent

Had the real housekeeper of the senate office building, the gingery George Moses of New Hampshire, been present probably there would have been more stir about it all.

He has been getting things slicked up about the building since he took over the job until it is spotless enough to satisfy even a New England housewife.

But he's off sightseeing in Europe.

Back in the oil investigation days there was considerable talk about the nocturnal delving into papers of senators. The Bystander does not remember that, anything ever came out of it indicating that the delvers struck pay dirt.

Altogether, it is a mysterious business.

A YANKEE ABROAD

By DEWITT MacKENZIE

Attention, Mr. Stimson!

LONDON—This really is an official report to the American secretary of state, Colonel Henry Stimson. Well, perhaps not "official," but still made necessary by circumstances which will be set forth hereinafter.

It began this way: It was the night before the signing of the naval treaty. I was pretty much fed up with the scrapping of navies and I also had a sudden attack of spring fever.

Not being a vernal poet, my urge took the form of a great desire to go trout fishing. I forthwith decided to hie me off to Ireland as soon as the treaty was signed.

I was chatting with Colonel Stimson and announced my program. I then discovered that the colonel is an ardent Waltonian himself.

He was interested. More than that, he wanted to go fishing. But he had to sign his treaty and make a dash for home.

Report

So I feel it my duty to report to the secretary about that trip, and here it is:

I went over to Caragh lake which nestles among the wonderfully picturesque mountains—they call them reeks—of southwestern Ireland.

I have fished in many parts of the world, but all things considered, the British Isles provide about as good sport for both trout and salmon as any place I know.

To be sure, you miss the guide and birch bark canoe and the rough camp as I knew in Canada, but Britain offers compensations.

There are worse things than being able to sleep in a comfortable inn after a strenuous day in the open.

My favorite haunts are the wild sections of Ireland and Scotland. And believe me or not, they are wild.

For example, up in northern Scotland, where I shall go in June to fish in the lochs and rivers among the highlands, the district is so isolated that there are no telephones or telegraphs.

It even takes a bit of doing to get a car up through the tracks they call roads.

No Steel

But, what scenery—the silver lochs, with the huge highlands, blanketed with purple heather, rising abruptly from the water's edge!

A favorite form of sport here is wet fly casting. By the way, you use a bamboo and not a steel rod. Steel rods aren't considered sporting, because the fish has less chance to escape than he has with bamboo.

The trout in Loch Assynt, where I shall fish, average about three-quarters of a pound, and they are gamey.

And you have to strike quickly to get them on the rise.

Little Talks on Thrift

Patience In Upbuilding One Of Necessary Elements Of Thrift

One of the lessons which we all must learn, if we are to make progress, is the great value of patience. It is one of the essentials of thrift.

We must learn that we cannot always accomplish our purposes, no matter how laudable they may be, as quickly as we might desire. In the process of building up our personal resources we should never lose sight of the fact that safe investments and spectacular profits seldom if ever go hand in hand. Placing our funds where we know they are safe even though the return may be considered small is far better than risking their loss in order to gain exorbitant profits.

In all matters of personal advancement we will do better in the long run if we exercise patience. Many a promising career has been ruined because of efforts to rise too rapidly. It is the old story of the house built on sand.

This is an age when the constant trend is toward speed in everything. We all want to get to the top quickly; we all want to get rich overnight; we all want to compress a week's accomplishment into a day's time. This is the spirit of the age and is not to be condemned because it explains the tremendous strides now being made in every field of endeavor.

However, it places the individual in a position of strong and constant temptation. It is increasingly difficult to be patient and pursue sound and cautious policies of personal administration when stories are being told all about us of the meteoric advancement in wealth, position or influence of others. The point often lost sight of is that very much is made of every specticular success but we seldom hear of the failures.

Notwithstanding the spirit of the age, patience has a high place in the scheme of success and advancement. Sound policies will always accomplish more in the long run than spectacular ones. The man who arrives at his goal through patient effort can rest assured that his success is of the substantial type which will last.

Those who may feel that their progress is not as rapid as it should be may be assured that, while their upbuilding financially and otherwise may seem to be of slow growth, they will in the long run lose nothing by a continued exercise of patience.—S. W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift.

Stories That Recall Others

Give Me Another

Mrs. X went to the bank with her three-year-old son to cash a check. The president gave little Johnny a nickel. His mother said: "What do you say?"

The little boy smiled but said nothing. Again his mother said: "Johnny, what do you say to Mr. —— for the nickel?"

No Hard Feelings

It was evidently the first boxing show for the young woman who was escorted by what appeared to be an ardent follower of the ring sport. The two had been watching a preliminary bout in which each of the boxers had tried his best to knock out the other. Neither was successful and when they left the ring they received hearty applause for their efforts.

Several minutes later the young woman turned and nudged her escort excitedly.

"Oh, look," she exclaimed, "there's those two prize fighters back there that just fought and they're drinking soda together! Why they're not a bit mad at each other."

MOTHERS now learn value of MAGNESIA

Because it is so helpful in keeping babies and children healthy and happy, every mother should know Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

This harmless, almost tasteless preparation is most effective in relieving those symptoms of babies and children generally caused by souring food in the little digestive tract, such as sour-belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, colic. As a mild laxative, it acts gently, but certainly, to open the little bowels in constipation, colds, children's diseases.

A teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia does the work of half a pint of lime water in neutralizing cow's milk for infant feeding and preventing hard curds. Its many uses for mother and child are fully explained in the interesting book "Useful Information." It will be sent you FREE. Write The Phillips Co., 170 Varick St., New York, N. Y.

In buying, be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Doctors have prescribed it for over 50 years.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Danny's Terrible Fright

This fact to me is very clear;
Most folks are prone the worst to fear.
—Danny Meadow Mouse.

An old tin can up in a tree was a queer place for a Meadow Mouse home. A Meadow Mouse is supposed to live on the ground, or sometimes in it. But there are exceptions. Just as Whitefoot the Wood Mouse occasionally builds over a bird's nest and makes it his home, so does Danny Meadow Mouse. It isn't a habit. Oh, my, no! It happens only once in a great while.

Of course, Danny and Nanny would never have thought of building a home in that tin can up in a tree had it not been for two or three things. Nanny would never have thought of climbing up to that tin can. You see, she was in the can when it was put up there by Farmer Brown's Boy. Probably she wouldn't have thought of going back to it had it not been for Reddy Fox. She and Danny had to go somewhere and being strangers in that particular place, they knew of nowhere to go until Nanny thought of that tin can. Then when they got there they decided it would make a lovely home. You see, what with a grapevine and the shape of the tree, it was a very easy matter for them to climb up.

"It's wonderful," said Danny, "and no one knows that we are living here."

"You forget Reddy Fox," said Nanny. "If it were not for Reddy, we wouldn't be here."

"That's so," said Danny. "I did forget Reddy. I notice he comes over here quite often. Never in all my life have I felt so safe from Reddy Fox, excepting when we were living in Farmer Brown's barn. No one can get at us up here. Even Killy the Sparrow Hawk can't get us here. All we have to do is to run right inside and we are safe."

"You forget Shadow the Weasel," Nanny reminded him.

"True," replied Danny, "I did forget Shadow. Shadow could climb up here just as well as we can and he could enter this little round doorway. But he is the only one; and even if he should come over this way, he would never think of finding us up a tree. There isn't any one else."

But Danny was mistaken. He found that out that very day. Nanny was off somewhere looking for food. Danny was just about to climb up to his home in the tin can when he heard a rustling sound above his head. He looked up. What he saw almost made his heart stop beating. It was Mr. Blacksnake. Yes, sir, it was Mr. Blacksnake. He was up in that tree. You know Mr. Blacksnake is a very good climber. Truth to tell, Mr. Blacksnake was looking for nests. He has a liking for baby birds. At first Danny was simply surprised and frightened by the sight of Mr. Blacksnake. Then he was glad that Mr. Blacksnake was up in the tree instead of on the ground. He didn't once think that Mr. Blacksnake might visit that tin can.

Slowly Mr. Blacksnake moved up toward Danny's home. At last he reached it. And then, to Danny's horror, Mr. Blacksake put his head inside. He went part-way in. Danny couldn't remember whether or not Nanny was at home. If she was, he knew he would never see her again. Here was an enemy who could enter that house with the greatest ease and Danny hadn't once thought of him.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" whimpered Danny under his breath. "What shall I do now?"

"What shall you do about what?" asked a squeaky voice. "What is the matter with you, Danny Meadow Mouse?"

It was Nanny! She was on her way home. Perhaps you can guess how Danny felt.

OBITUARY

S. Herbert Giesy

Only recently, Norwich friends have been apprised of the death of a former resident of this city, S. Herbert Giesy, at Washington, D. C., although Mr. Giesy passed away Feb. 4, last. He was the son of Rev. Dr. Samuel H. Giesy, rector of Christ Episcopal church, Norwich, from 1874 to 1885. In the latter year Rev. Dr. Giesy went from Norwich to Washington as rector of the Church of the Epiphany.

Samuel Herbert Giesy was a lawyer of Washington and was unmarried. He was graduated from Norwich Free Academy with the class of '81 and from Trinity college, Hartford, in '85. He was an intimate friend of the late Dr. Witter Kinney Tingley and is remembered by a number who attended Christ church during the notably successful period when his father was rector.

Of late years his health had been impaired and he had undergone hospital treatment for rheumatism.

STREET COMMISSIONER'S REPORT SHOWS MANY LINES OF WORK IN YEAR

The annual report of Street Commissioner Herbert B. Wightman, which was presented at the final meeting of the common council last Friday evening, showed the many lines of work in which the public works department had been engaged during the past year.

The report was given as follows:

During the year numerous small holes throughout the city were patched with a so-called K. P. patch, consisting of a mixture of a tar composition with pea gravel 3-4 inch or 1-2 inch trap-rock. These materials are mixed hot in a concrete mixer and applied to the holes while warm, the traffic rolling the patch down to a smooth and hard surface.

The following macadam or hard surfaced streets were patched with K. P.: Church, Broadway, McKinley avenue, Baltic, Shetucket, Oak, Water, Broad, Warren, Grove, Sherman, Rockwell, River and Smith avenues, Cliff, Boswell avenue, Newton, Hickory, Forest, High, Orchard, Crescent, Dunham, Washington, Woodmansee, Central avenues, Talman, Hamilton avenue, Sturtevant avenue, West Main, Mechanic, Willow, Chestnut, Bath, Golden, Maple, Stetson, Williams and Spring Garden avenues.

The cleaning of the business streets is done at night between the hours of 9:30 and 4 o'clock in the morning, this being impossible during the day because of the heavy traffic and the great number of cars parked along the curb.

Crosswalks were repaired on the following streets: North Thames, Elm, Fanning avenue, Broad, Warren, School and High.

Billboard Removed

A new fence was built on Lafayette street opposite the Yantic cemetery where an unsightly billboard was removed. Fence repairs were made on the following streets: Summer, Laurel Hill avenue, Talman, N. Main, Hamilton avenue, Central avenue, Forest and Yantic streets.

On July 1st a new Colecto body with a capacity of 10 cubic yards mounted on a new motor truck was put into service in the collection of garbage and ashes. This new piece of apparatus has worked very satisfactorily, having pneumatic tires and is very speedy in going to and from the dump at the end of Falls avenue. This truck took the place of an old truck which had become quite an expense as to repairs.

Summary

In addition to the new truck the city maintains eight horses and four dump carts in the collection of garbage and ashes.

During the year 8,557 loads of garbage and ashes were collected and taken to the dump, an average of 542 loads per month. The largest collection for one month was 714 loads in January, and the smallest was 437 loads in June. The dump has been practically free from fires.

The comfort station for women in the Buckingham Memorial building has been well cared for by Mrs. C. Brown during the day and early part of the evening.

A 15-inch drain on land formerly owned by the Rockwell's between McKinley avenue north and Joseph Perkins road became plugged during the winter and necessitated a considerable expense to locate the obstruction and remove the same. This drain was about 12 feet deep and four catch basins on Joseph Perkins road are connected with it which caused considerable flooding of Joseph Perkins road. These basins also take care of all the drainage from the Academy campus and Rockwell's woods.

On the westerly side of McKinley avenue north several new houses were built during the past year and the land filled up to the level of the street causing a considerable amount of water to collect in the street and also run into Neiderman's garage which is about four feet below the street level.

In order to relieve the water it was necessary to lay about 180 feet of 10-inch pipe from Rockwell street through McKinley avenue north and build a new catch basin. This work also made quite a little expense to the department, as the pipe is about 8 feet deep and was laid deep enough so that it may be extended for sewerage purposes at some later date.

As this street was in a very muddy condition during the spring thaw, six inches of gravel was put on for a length of about 400 feet.

Hamilton avenue also received six inches of gravel from Burton avenue to the City Line, a length of about 1575 feet.

At 39 Spruce street opposite the garages of John L. Counihan, the street was widened from two to three feet and a length of about 40 feet by the removal by blasting of a portion of the ledge at the narrow place in the street.

On Watercress avenue from Tyler avenue to the Yantic river, which is a very steep street, considerable washing out of the sides of the street and onto private property was done during heavy rains, which necessitated the paving of both sides of Watercress avenue for a length of about 800 feet, this being an unexpected expense to the department.

In July we had some very severe rain storms which caused several washouts and the street department was kept busy for a week making the necessary repairs.

Street Widenings.

Street widenings were made on Franklin street at the new garage of Krieger and St. Germain's where the curb line was put back 24 inches at a narrow place in the street, tapering down to nothing at either end of a length of about 40 feet. This was at the switch where the Boswell avenue trolley branches off, which was very narrow before the widening was made.

Also in front of the Chelsea Savings bank at the junction of Cliff and Main streets, with the cooperation of the bank, the curb line was set back 5 feet, which improved the traffic conditions at this point. A new concrete gutter was also built on Cliff street along the property of the Chelsea Savings bank.

Also on Main street near the corner of Park street in front of the office of the Connecticut Light and Power company when the Light company made extensive improvement to their property by removing a portion of their wall and shrubbery and building a new concrete sidewalk, the curb line was also put back 3 1-2 feet at a sharp angle in the street tapering down to nothing for a length of about 45 feet. The Light company made a very decided improvement at this corner by making an unobstructed view from Park street into Main street, for the traffic coming from Greeneville.

On the east side of Park street along the property of the Light company the curb line was also set back about 3 feet and a new gutter paved, which gives considerable more room for parking and the traffic on Park street.

Under special appropriations Rockwell street was widened and resurfaced from McKinley avenue to Orchard street, a short section of macadam was built on Joseph Perkins road, 900 feet of 18 foot asphalt bound macadam road was built on Hamilton avenue and the Hobart avenue sewer was built from Oak street to Reynolds street.

North Main Street.

Last spring at a special city meeting an appropriation of $50,000 was made for the improvement of North Main street from 27 North Main street to Central avenue. In May this work was started and finished before cold weather.

The work necessitated the removal of all the old Hassam pavement for a width of 19 feet, the relaying of all new ties under the rails and the raising of the grade of the rails. This 19 foot area was replaced with concrete to finish grade, and the balance of the street from the rail to the curb was covered with asphalt. The greater portion of the street averaged 50 feet wide from curb to curb. During the whole work there was very little delay in traffic and no detours.

The Connecticut company co-operated with the street department throughout the whole work in fine manner and paid for their portion of the new pavement soon after the work was completed.

After the completion of this work and the returns from the trolley company were received, the city had a balance of $13,681.64.

During the winter we had one snow storm of six inches, one of five inches, one of three inches, two of two inches, one of one inch and three of about one-half inch. The streets were plowed out and considerable snow was carted away from the business streets of the city. Park walks and public stairs were also cleaned of snow. We also had a number of ice and sleet storms which required considerable sanding for both streets and walks.

Two Christmas trees were erected by the street department, one on Franklin square, and the other at the Laurel Hill park.

The city Gas and Electric department furnished the lights for the tree on Franklin square and Mrs. William H. Oat furnished the lights for the tree on the Laurel Hill park.

The city parks have been kept clean and the grass cut, settees being placed on the three parks during the summer.

Two new 1 1-2 cubic yard hand dump trucks were purchased to replace two small worn out passenger cars which had been converted into trucks by the installation of iron truck bodies a number of years ago.

During the month of April, 1929, fertilizing 73 trees $70, average cost 90c; planting 21 trees $123.50, average cost $5.88; removal 33 trees, $1,461.20, average cost $44.30; surgery and pruning 116 trees $1,398.80, average cost $12.04. Trucking is included in above figures.

Number of trees removed larger than usual. All trees removed were dangerous, impracticable to repair, or directly in the way of traffic or drives.

Fairmount street entirely cleaned up, as were parts of adjacent streets. Other trees were cared for at various points throughout the city where work seemed most necessary.

A somewhat larger appropriation could be used to advantage but, under present business conditions city officials do not feel warranted in asking additional money. The majority of the trees to be removed this season are not difficult to work in and considerable repair and pruning can be done under the present appropriation.

BLACK FORCES INVADE HARBOR DEFENSES TODAY

After strained relations between the United States and a hypothetical country known as the Black the latter has declared war, taking this country at somewhat of a disadvantage, inasmuch as the United States, relying on the provisions of peace treaties, has not rehabilitated her harbor defenses, although it has brought what is known as the Blue fleet to the Atlantic.

This is the nub of the situation with which the minor joint army navy exercises begin at 2 p. m. today (Tuesday) in the vicinity of New London harbor.

For the maneuver purposes eastern standard time will be used, although the army personnel in the harbor defenses of Long Island Sound are living on a schedule of daylight saving time to correspond with the timing of everyday life on the neighboring mainland. In the opinion of Colonel Charles H. Hilton, harbor defense commander, however, nothing would be gained by causing all the boat schedules, bus lines and school sessions to revert to standard time basis for the three days of the exercises.

Before declaring war the Black had concentrated its naval forces so that the Blue and the Black are closely watching each other in the vicinity of the Eastern Caribbean, with the Blue scouting fleet at Guantanamo, which it was unable to leave until Sunday to steam north to aid the defenders of Long Island Sound, on whom it now depends to block a destructive raid by sea, air and land upon New York and the industrial heart of New England. All harbor defenses are manned with only their peace time force and even the National Guard would be unable to render assistance until May 29, by which time the Black force will have struck its decisive blow and either have the important manufacturing cities of New York and southern New England at its mercy or else be repulsed with staggering loss.

Colonel Hilton is particularly desirous that the public understand that this is not in any sense a sham battle. No guns or torpedos will be fired and no bombs dropped. The purpose of the maneuver is to enable the Army and Navy to work out certain combat problems under what may be classed as wartime conditions.

One feature of the maneuvers that makes for picturesqueness and has challenged the interest of the residents of lower Connecticut is the greatly augmented use of air forces, which have been summoned to both the defense and the attack in such numbers as never have been seen above Long Island Sound in the maneuvers of previous years. The Blue defenders moreover are supplemented by such Navy shore stations and watercraft as can be supplied by the First Naval District and Scouting Fleet.

Captain Wilson Brown, commanding the navy submarine base at New London, acting as senior officer afloat, will cooperate with Colonel Hilton in the defense of the harbor. The naval defensive force that he commands consists of six submarines and a mine sweeper the entire flotilla that is available for opposing a mysterious force of unknown strength that is rapidly bearing down upon the New England coast. The Black force is under command of Rear Admiral Frank H. Brumby, U. S. Navy.

When the maneuvers begin the Black fleet will be something more than 50 miles from Fishers Island. The exercises will be divided into five phases, as follows:

1. Between 2 and 7 p. m., May 26. Black forces will make sea approach in order to furnish Blue off-shore patrol opportunity to discover and report enemy forces, thus giving army opportunity to test communications and coordinate the various elements of defense. As Blue actually has no off-shore patrol, other agencies for observation are to be relied on to furnish Blue commander, at proper time, such information as an off-shore patrol might give. Incidentally, the U. S. scouting fleet, which is supposed to be steaming up from Guantanamo, and hence out of the action, is actually the backbone of the Black enemy force. Certain detached ships of the scouting fleet are numbered among the inshore patrol of the Blue force. Black sea forces actually depart from Narragansett bay this morning to prepare for the sea approach that afternoon.

2. Between 1:30 and 3:30 a. m., May 27, Black forces reconnoiter harbor defenses of Long Island sound, giving opportunity for coordination of inshore patrol and searchlights in night reconnaissance operations. They then withdraw preparatory to commencement of Phase 3. No air forces will be employed in this operation.

3. Between 5 and 7:30 a. m., May 27, an air bombardment on the harbor defenses of Long Island sound, following a reconnaissance by Black force will afford opportunity for the coordination of the anti-aircraft defenses with the air forces of both the army and the navy elements of the defenders.

4. Between 3 and 5 p. m., May 27, Black force will simulate an attack on harbor defenses by gun fire from the ships and air bombardment as a covering attack for a landing operation. This will be a test of the intelligence system and the fire control system of the defenses and will coordinate all elements of the defense.

5. Forenoon of May 28, Black force will cross the race and bombard New London naval station, thus giving opportunity for using all elements of harbor defense and giving personnel of defense close-up view of different types of warships.

Upon completion of these exercises in the strategy of modern coastwise warfare, a critique of the exercises will be held at Fort H. G. Wright, Wednesday afternoon, at which officers will be expected to "put the cards on the table" in the discussion of mistakes made and moves made that should not have been.

Up to date there have been 35 officers ordered here, most of whom have arrived, exclusive of the regular army air service personnel, of whom 55 will be on duty at Trumbull field, adjacent to New London, with 42 planes for participation in this inspiring demonstration.

Of this impressive air armada for the Blue force, 13 planes arrived at Trumbull field Sunday afternoon, their approach to the field being the topic of conversation of the afternoon in that city. The arrivals included 13 pursuit and 8 bombing planes beside two transport planes. The air service personnel at Trumbull field including officers and men, with their arrival, numbered 155. Trumbull field, the pride of the Connecticut National Guard, has been particularly busy for the occasion. The air forces come from Mitchell field, Long Island, from Selfridge field, Michigan and Langley Field, Virginia.

GROSVENORDALE MILLS REPORTED IN MERGER

Taking advantage of the present decreased rate of production and earnings in the textile industry, Bancamerica-Blair corporation has arranged to obtain Grosvenordale company of North Grosvenordale, Conn., as a member of the consolidation of fine goods mills it is building, according to a published statement Sunday in New York.

Several other textile mills already have agreed to submit plans for joining the Bancamerica-Blair consolidation to their stockholders, and it now appears likely that the new group of fine goods mills will start with more than 1,000,000 spindles.

It was said that the completion of the Grosvenordale company has placed the plan in such an advanced stage that the Bancamerica-Blair corporation will be ready this week to mail to stockholders of all the mills to be acquired a complete outline of the merger proposition. Initial deposits of stock also will be requested.

Directors of the following mills are reported to have agreed to recommend acceptance of the merger terms to their stockholders: Bristol Manufacturing corporation, Dartmouth Manufacturing corporation and Neild Manufacturing corporation of New Bedford, Mass.; Davis Mills, Lincoln Manufacturing company and Pilgrim Mills of Fall River, Mass.; Crescent Mills and Queen City Cotton company of Burlington, Vt.; Warren Manufacturing company of Warren, R. I., and the Grosvenordale company.

FRINK DIVORCE TRIAL TRANSFERRED TO FAIRFIELD

The divorce suit of Mrs. Rose Beckley Frink of this city against Charles W. Frink is not to be heard in the superior court for this county but has been transferred to the superior court in Fairfield county upon application for such transfer made by the litigants and their counsel.

Mrs. Frink is seeking a divorce and custody of a minor child on the grounds of a statutory offense but no co-respondent is named in the original proceedings. The Frinks were married in June, 1923.

There is a possibility of the divorce case being heard next month, inasmuch as the 90 day period, which under a new law must elapse after the filing of a petition before it can be heard, will be terminated on June 3.

SEVEN BUILDING PERMITS GRANTED IN NORWICH DURING THE PAST WEEK

During the past week there were seven building permits granted at the office of Fire Marshal Henry R. Taft for new construction work in the city. The permits were all for small work such as alterations, additions and garages. Good weather favored the builders last week and considerable progress was made on local work. A number of the new dwelling houses now being erected were brought almost to the completion stage.

The house being built by Henry G. Montie on Boswell avenue is practically complete and will be ready for occupation within a week or so.

The permits issued were as follows:

To Anthony Halecki to alter present frame and brick building at 107 High street into a two-car garage to be located in the basement. The alterations include an addition 8x7 feet. The estimated cost is $165.

To Mrs. Archibald Mitchell Jr., to alter and extend the present frame garage at 380 Broadway, making it into a three-car garage. The present one-car garage will be moved to the east side and the addition, 12x35, built onto the present structure. The estimated cost is $700. A local contractor has the work.

To Dominick Keirtanis to add a roof to the present frame porch at his home at 160 Prospect street. The roof will be 7x25 feet and will be covered with composition shingles. The estimated cost is $15.

To P. F. Sweeney, contractor, to erect an addition to the present frame house at 28 Union street, owned by Mrs. Helen R. Chamberlain. The addition will be an open frame porch, 8x8 feet. The estimated cost is $35.

To Julian Kowalewski to build a one-story frame garage, 20x18 feet, on his property on Fourth street. The estimated cost is $200.

To Mrs. Francis Sudik to erect a three-car frame garage at 81 Roath street. The garage will be 30x18 feet with cement foundation, novelty siding and composition roof. The estimated cost is $300.

To Mrs. Elizabeth R. Higgins to build a dormer window in her house at 238 Broadway. The window will be 7x8 feet. The estimated cost is $75.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

During the past week there were 11 sales of real estate in Norwich as compared to eight sales for the corresponding week in 1929. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $34,185 and $30,800.

There were eight sales of real estate in New London during the past week as compared to five sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $17,701 and $45,500.

NEW LONDON

Announcement that the Savings Bank of New London in Main street plans to start work soon on the construction of a substantial addition to the rear of the present building in Main street constituted the biggest new development in the local building field last week.

Although the detailed plans are as yet incomplete and no definite figures are available on the cost of the work it is expected that the cost will be around $75,000 to $100,000.

The addition will be built onto the rear of the present building and will be 50 by 70 feet in dimensions, two stories high, of brick, steel and concrete construction.

The ground floor of the addition will contain a large garage and men's rooms, showers, etc. The main floor of the addition will contain two new vaults which are to replace the one vault now in the old building, a new posting room that will be enclosed with soundproof walls to reduce noise from the posting machines to a minimum, an assembly room and offices. A mezzanine floor in the addition will house quarters for the women of the bank with lounging rooms, etc.

It is planned to complete work on the addition first and then, with the additional room available, to begin the rearrangement of the present crowded departments. A feature of the proposed changes in the present interior layout will be the addition of more than 50 feet of counter space. To effect this the counters will be run down corridors on each side of the interior in a U shape. The present mortgage department will be expanded to occupy the space now used for the office of Treasurer George Whittlesey, who will be located in a new office under the new plans. Revolving doors are to be installed at the front entrance in place of the present ordinary doors

MUCH NEW BUILDING BEING DONE IN PUTNAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 26—A new building program is underway in Putnam, according to the number of petitions made to the common council this month for building permits. A one and a half story frame dwelling is being erected on Main street at the corner of May street, by the firm of Medbury and Trowbridge. A petition is before the council for a permit to erect a fire proof garage on a building site adjoining the Medbury property on Main street and if granted, the Place Motor company will be the owners of the proposed structure.

Building in the north end of the city is taking on a new life. On Church street a modern cottage is nearing completion. The property is owned by Frederick Authier. When all work is complete, the house will greatly enhance the beauty of that section of the city. In various places, home owners are carrying out extensive remodeling plans. Final work on the Muir block on lower Main street which was erected last year is now underway. On Grand View carpenters have finished work on an attractive new bungalow which was built by S. Kaminsky and recently sold to John E. Morrison of South Main street.

Interior construction operations on the modernistic Main street banking house of the Cargill Trust company have been renewed with the arrival of marble shipments during the past week. The structure which will be one of the finest of its type in the state, is expected to be complete about June 30.

On Oak hill steel workers are quickly assembling the million gallon water reservoir which will be part of the city water system when complete. The giant steel sheets are being fitted into position and rivetted together. The erection of the water tank is one of the outstanding feats in Putnam's building history, within its scope.

WESTERLY

For the third week in May, Westerly Building Inspector Thomas Wills and Zoning Inspector Louis J. Ross have issued the following building and zoning permits:

May 17. William D. Dolan, 16 Crandall avenue, Misquamicut. Reshingle roof of house on Crandall avenue with slate coated shingles.

May 19. Bradford Box and Shook company, Bradford. Erect one-story cement building, near Bradford railroad station, 40 feet by 100 feet.

May 19. G. Stewart Deland, Shore road. Build garage, 18 feet by 20 feet, on Shore road.

May 20. Cyril V. Moore, East avenue. Make alterations to East avenue house, interior and exterior.

May 20. Michael Dinapoli, 91 Franklin street. Reshingle house at 91 Franklin street with slate-coated shingles.

May 22. Mrs. George E. Smith, Park avenue, Misquamicut. Build two-car garage, 20 feet by 20 feet.

WORK ON THE NEW NORTON MEMORIAL GYMNASIUM WELL ALONG

Work on the new Norton Memorial gymnasium at the Norwich Free Academy is progressing favorably as is shown by the above photograph of the construction work. Contractor W. S. Spencer has the contract and is bringing the building along as rapidly as possible.

The building which is of reinforced concrete and brick is located between the Slater Memorial building and the home of Principal Henry A. Tirrell. The walls have been built up past the first story windows and part of the large granite columns over the front entrance have been set in place. The steel sash and casements for the windows on the first floor have been set in. Work is now being done on the second story.

It is expected that the building will be ready for occupation before the school year as the Academy opens in September. The building will be very attractive and will harmonize with the construction of the other Academy building.

STATE BUILDING REFLECTS GAIN

Awards for new building and engineering projects in Connecticut during April totaled $10,739,700, according to F. W. Dodge corporation. This compares with $8,322,900 for March and $10,532,600 for April of last year. Since the first of January new construction contracts aggregated $28,582,200 as compared with $35,113,200 for the corresponding four months of 1929. Construction projects reported in April as in the contemplated stage totaled $158,024,100, as compared with $13,755,100 for April 1929. The past month's contemplated total not only indicates a large potential demand for new construction in the state, but in the aggregate is greater than any states' April total except New York.

The April record showed contract awards distributed as follows: Residental buildings, $3,346,800, or 31 per cent. of all awards; commercial buildings, $2,517,300, or 23 per cent.; public works and utilities, $1,109,200, or 11 per cent.; educational buildings $606,400, or 6 per cent. All other classes including industrial, hospitals and institutions, social and recreational and public buildings totaled $3,160,000.

BLUE WALLS AID ANIMAL GROWTH

Many home owners believe that raising pets is one of the entertaining activities that go with a house and family. Most animal lovers see that their animals are well cared for and are properly housed. Susie's pet rabbit and Jimmie's pet guinea pigs have sanitary, well-constructed, well-painted living quarters. But few persons realize, even those who are very fond of animals, that the colors with which the interiors of animal pens are painted are likely to have an effect upon their development.

When you build a new rabbit hutch or repaint the old one, remember that pale blue is the most effective color to stimulate animal growth. White and light tan come next.

SUGGEST BUILDING INSTEAD OF MOVING

May moving is an expensive proceeding not only because of the cost of moving but because of purchases of new equipment and furnishings that usually result.

In the field of rugs alone it has been learned that 40 per cent. of all rug sales are made to families moving into new quarters, 32 per cent. to newly married couples starting new households and only 28 per cent. to families adding to or replacing floor coverings.

From the above it would seem that the wear and tear on rugs brought about by moving is a pretty big expense item. The next time a move is contemplated why not make it into a home of your own. Financing homes is not so difficult as it used to be. Any man with certain qualifications can secure from his bank, building and loan association and more recently the large mail order houses sufficient assistance in building his own home without having to save for many years to accumulate a large sum of money.

THE BEST WAY TO PLANT EVERGREENS

Dig hole a foot larger and deeper than ball of earth. Provide good loamy top soil to fill around ball.

For all varieties of evergreens spring is a favorable season for transplanting. They can be moved with little setback up to the time when new shoots are starting, and even later by experienced planters, though it is sometimes necessary to pinch off part of the new shoots which otherwise might wilt.

Evergreens should be dug with a ball of earth about the roots, and this should be kept well moistened throughout shipping and planting and after planting. The shorter the time between digging and planting, the better. If it is not convenient to water frequently after planting, a mulch of hay or straw will retard drying out and lessen the amount of water required.

HOME SPURS TO ACHIEVEMENT

The home is the backbone of our prosperity; once anticipated or attained it puts an ambition into a man that presses him on to a goal of achievement.

When the incinerator combustion chamber is adjacent to the basement recreation room cleaning up after parties is almost no trouble. Paper hats, confetti and souvenirs are swept into a heap and then tossed into the combustion chamber.

BASEMENT FIRES

Defective wiring, careless smoking, accumulations of rubbish, faulty heating plants, and sparks from neighboring buildings are responsible for the major portion of fire losses, but whatever the cause, by far the greatest number of fires in homes have their origin in basements, usually spreading up through floors and walls before being detected and brought under control.

NO TROUBLE TO SCREEN MODERN CASEMENT WINDOW

Discuss the matter of casement windows with the average man and woman and the question of screens naturally imposes itself into the discussion. How can the matter of screens be arranged without a great deal of bother? The answer is quite simple, for the modern science of home building has disposed of that problem quite effectively.

Casement windows, of course, do not go well with all types of houses. They call chiefly for metal frames and metal frames go best on homes which have masonry outer walls, such as brick or brick with stone trim. They also go well with stucco.

Most modern casement windows include provisions for screening, and this screening as a general rule means screen attached to a metal sash which fills the entire window opening on the indoors side. The character of casement windows, which usually open out, makes any other arrangement virtually impossible. When the question of screens first was raised a fixture was devised which passed through an opening on the under side of the window ledge. This fixture is used to open and shut the metal casement sash. It was found, however, that such openings meant added opportunity for cold air to filter through and that meant drafts—one of the things which casement windows were supposed to eliminate.

As a result of this experience a new type of sash fixture has been devised, which operates upon the window ledge rather than beneath it. Some may object to the presence of two of these fixtures, which of necessity must be fastened securely to the inner wooden ledge, and the metallic handle by means of which the window is opened. Actually they should prove no handicap, nor should they be considered objectionable. They are located at the side and usually are hidden from view by the glass curtains and drapes.

By their use a casement window may be opened at will without the necessity of removing or disturbing the screen. The screen is attached to the window by four simple fixtures and may be installed or removed in a few seconds. Once in place for the summer they need not be removed, except when the windows are to be washed. Incidentally, this business of window washing is simplified with this type of casement window and screen because it is so simple an operation to remove and replace the screen. One needs only remove it, wash the inner and then the outer side of the glass, one side at a time then restore the screen. It is a far more desirable order than with screens which are screwed securely to the outer portion of the sash. In such cases the windows usually are washed just before the screens are put up, then are left alone—on the outside at least—until they are taken down again in the fall. Only the most fussy housekeepers will go to the bother of taking down screens in midsummer to allow for washing the outside surface of a window pane.

INSTALLATION OF CASTIRON PIPE POOR ECONOMY

Cheap piping has done more to furrow home owners' brows with wrinkles than almost any other element involved in home building. At the same time, cheap plumbing constitutes one of the most alluring temptations facing a prospective home builder. Most plumbing is out of sight in the walls, and what is out of sight all too frequently is permanently out of mind.

That may be quite safe with some things, but not with plumbing, as many a sorrowful home owner can attest. One of them poured his doleful story into the ears of the writer just a few days ago. Circumstances compelled him to leave the city for a month or two in midwinter. He shut off the water and drained the heating system, figuring that this would be all that was necessary.

Ordinarily this would have been the case, but not in the home of this individual. Unknown to him one of the elbows beneath the bathroom floor had been slowly rusting out over a period of a few years and that two months or so was all that was necessary to finish the process. When the water was turned on again the pressure split the elbow wide open and the result was a flooded kitchen, a ruined ceiling and damaged side wall.

Asked what he had done to repair matters the unfortunate home owner replied that he had sought the best plumber he could find and engaged him to put in either copper or brass piping throughout, regardless of the cost—this in spite of the fact that his financial conditions at that time were anything but affluent.

"I figured," he explained, "that the experience I had just gone through was lesson enough. I didn't propose to be caught a second time. Whether brass or copper piping comes in one grade or several grades I neither know nor care. What I do know is that, barring an earthquake, I'll have no more trouble of that sort."

That is the story of cheap piping everywhere—that and the invariable tendency of iron piping to rust eventually regardless. It is no source of joy for a housewife to find that the hot water she is using for her laundry work is coming blood-red in color, but that is the way it comes eventually, and when that happens the only cure is new piping.

COPPER RADIATORS AID TO DECORATORS

A distinct aid to the decorator is concealed radiation. New, thin, copper radiators, hidden in the walls, occupy no floor space in the room and decorator is free from limitations imposed by other types. They are made in a variety of sizes and shapes, meeting virtually any space requirement. When so incorporated in the wall structure, inlet and outlet openings should be provided for and these may be suitably grilled or otherwise treated.

Radiators are of the complete convection type, drawing cold air in through the bottom, and are copper, for which is claimed a maximum of heat conductivity. Seamless copper tubing carries the steam through a series of vertical fins or "chimneys" wherein the air is heated. The tubing is welded to each of these fins, this contact resulting in almost perfect heat transmission. Cold air is drawn into these fins through the bottom, is heated and discharged into the room through the top.

SCARRED MOULDING EASILY REPLACED

Replacement of scarred molding, base boards and other trim has been simplified by the large number of stock designs now carried. These follow the lines of the originals with such exactness that it is difficult to differentiate between the original and the copy. So much has modern manufacturing methods done for the small home owner.

Stairways, stair rails, bannisters and balustrades in stock designs may also be obtained. The interior trim is as much a part of the decorative scheme of the home as is the furniture and should be chosen with just as much care. Finely carved and well balanced moldings and trim do much toward a successful decorative effect.

GOOD SOIL, GOOD LAWNS

"Natures' boon for baldness is a good lawn," according to Prof. S. D. Conner of Purdue university, "and the first requirement for a good lawn is a good soil." And the main difference between a lawn and a pasture is in the methods of harvesting the growth. Fertility is more important than seed in building up a thin, wornout sod. Generally reseeding is necessary when, if and because the original vegetation has starved out.

ARTISTIC NIGHT LIGHT

One of our friends has a new ornament for the hall stand—consisting of a small metal base upon which stands a tiny naked figure in bronze gazing into a many faceted crystal ball. Beneath this ball is a light of a few watts, which not only makes the ornament more artistic, but serves as a convenient night light as well.

HOME FOR JENNY WREN EASILY CONSTRUCTED

Little Jenny Wren will come and bring her family with her to your garden if you offer her an attractive home. It must be of just the tiny size she desires with a very small entrance door so that she will not be annoyed by larger birds.

One wren house suitable for her occupancy is made of three-eighths inch gulf cypress and has broad projecting eaves. It is weather-proofed with linseed oil and painted an inconspicuous brown. It may be mounted on tree, pole, or the side of human family's house.

Watching Mrs. Wren and her growing family adds to junior's education as well as to his sympathy for dumb creatures. A bird house which encourages birds to nest nearby is one way of cultivating this understanding.

PLASTER ORNAMENT.

For centuries the craft of "plaster" has been known and employed. Plaster ornament is almost always found in the rooms that have become recognized as classic models of their period of design. It is usually found as a prominent element of the finest homes.

CLIMBING VINES ADD BEAUTY, AID IN MANY WAYS

Here a line softened, there a broad plain wall space robbed of its severity—thus and in many other ways the climbing vines elevate the builders work to higher standards of beauty and charm. Vines lend a touch of permanence, of mellow stability to buildings of almost every type.

The purposes which climbing vines may serve are numerous. They may screen the porch from the street, while at the same time providing protection from the sun. They cover lattice arbors, complete the beauty of the garden house, lend charm to certain large trees by covering the trunk with an envelope of attractive foliage, and cover unsightly or outbuildings.

Vines should be judiciously used and only where a definite need of design or utility is satisfied.

The Ivies, the Creepers, Bittersweet, Honeysuckles, Clematis and Wistarias are among the many vines that may possibly be used by you in your particular problems to give added beauty and charm to your home.

It is not exaggerating to say that of all the plants possible to grow in this northern climate, there is none more useful and none more splendid in the flower gardens than Climbing Roses.

The Climbing Roses may be loosely grouped in two classes; those with small flowers in giant clusters, like American Pillar, Aviateur Bleriot, Excelsa, Hiawatha, Dorothy Perkins, Crimson Rambler, Lady Gay and White Dorothy; and those with large flowers, sometimes borne singly, but generally in long-stemmed clusters, like Climbing American Beauty, Dr. W. Van Fleet, Gardenia, Mary Wallace, Paul's Scarlet Climber, Silver Moon and Tausendschon.

The latter class is more generally favored nowadays, but they have not superseded the informal gracefulness of the earlier type as yet. Nothing is sweeter than a rose-arbor covered with the deliciously pink Dorothy Perkins, mingled with a few White Dorothy; and there is still no more dazzling display than a busky, healthy bush of Hiawatha.

Properly chosen and cared for, climbing vines are a great source of pride to the home owner.

CAST STONE HAS MANY ADVANTAGES

Cast stone made from Portland cement, sand and color pigments, said to be fireproof, permanent, decorative and of good acoustical sound absorption, may be used on any type of exterior walls, interior walls and floors. It is waterproof, impervious to frost, suitable in any climate, and will not shrink, warp or fade.

Full of various size air holes irregularly distributed through the mass, the stone is made up from materials of different colors and textures which intermingle as in marble. Texture ranges from the fine Caen-stone to the coarse appearance of a petrified sponge, with an endless combination of curves and shapes. Wide color selection is another feature.

Surface can be polished. Stone is made in any size up to twenty by thirty inches, with needed angle pieces. For lining masonry walls slabs are furnished with a rough backing to be set up in plaster. Where they are applied to wood sheathing or studding they are provided with a nailing base. For interior walls a light weight stone is offered. Weight of stone for interior use, which may be sawed, runs from four to six pounds a square foot; for outside walls and floors weight is eight pounds.

MODERN FIREPLACE RESULT OF EVOLUTION

Our modern and attractive fireplaces which are looked upon from a decorative rather than a utilitarian angle are a far cry indeed from the earlier forms.

Originally in the ancient days fireplaces consisted of a circular stone ledge, a sort of an arena built in the center of the room. This one main room would be the gathering place of the family and the cooking was done there with the heavy smoke rising upward and escaping through a hole made in the middle of the ceiling. But of course this elaborate innovation came only through rich and large families, for, for the most part, people depended for their heat and cooking

Ice Company Building

Work has been practically completed on the construction of the large building erected for the Southern New England Ice company at Jefferson and Garfield avenues. The structure is of concrete, brick and steel construction. Most of the ice making machinery has been installed and it is expected the plant will soon go into operation.

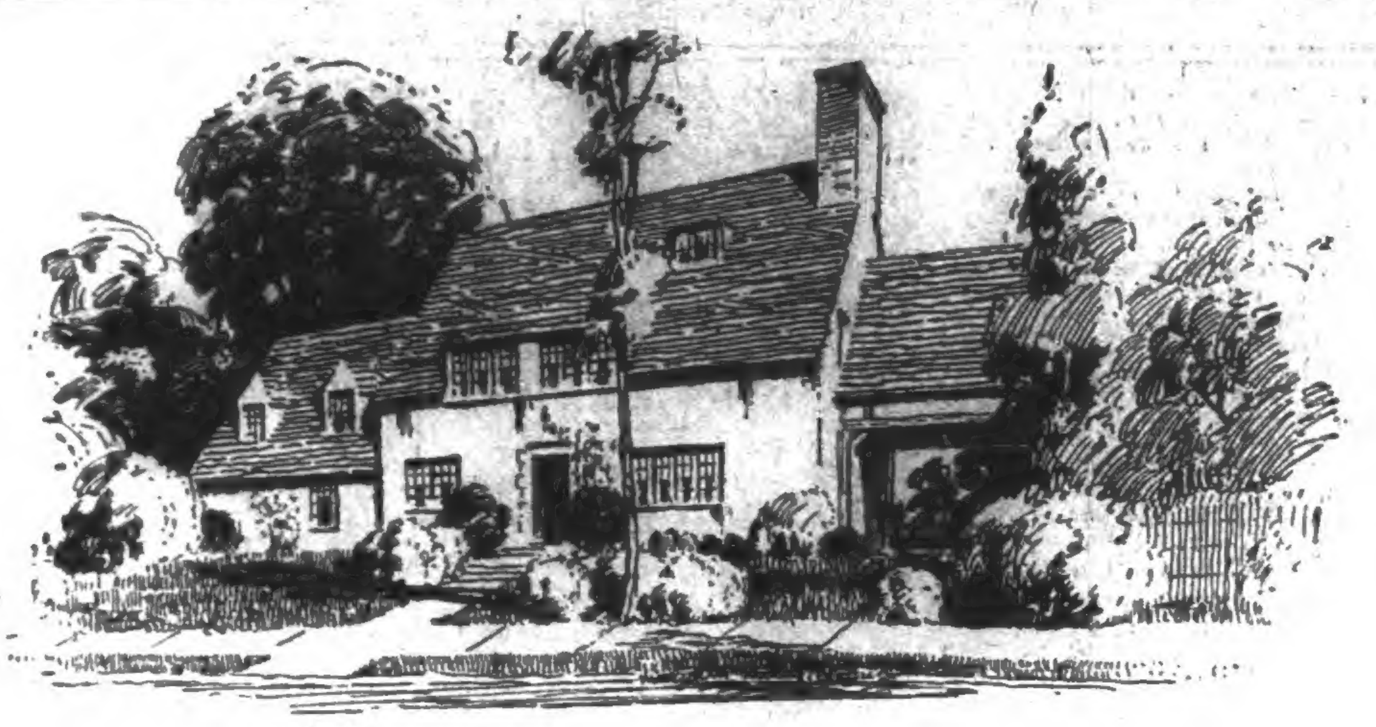
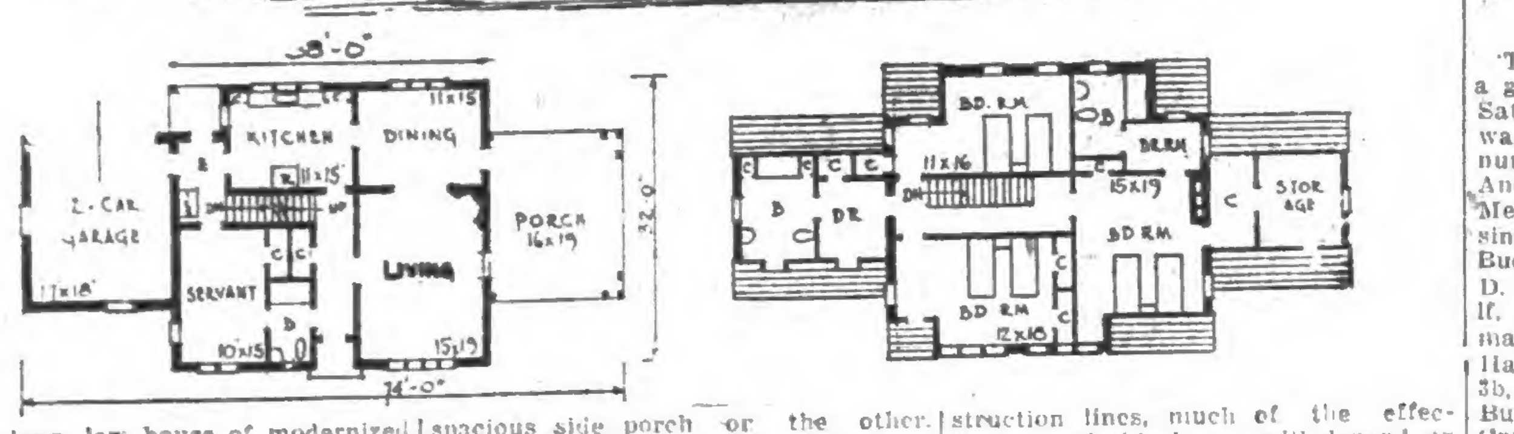
CORNER HOUSE DESIGNED FOR LARGE FAMILY





This long, low house of modernized French design is particularly suitable for a corner lot that measures approximately 75 by 100 feet.

It is especially designed for the needs of a large family. A two-car garage at one side is balanced by a spacious side porch on the other. There are four bedrooms upstairs and a spare room downstairs that may be used as a servant's room.

The exterior is of grayish red brick painted white, and the roof is of red tile. Exterior woodwork is painted in a weathered gray.

Because of the simplicity of construction lines, much of the effectiveness of this house will depend on carefully planned landscaping to lend character to its finished appearance.

In communities of average size, such a house usually will cost between $12,000 and $15,000. Choice of materials and labor costs may cause slight variations, however.

DUTCH COLONIAL HOUSES "SAD" IF TWO STORIES

Of all sad houses, some of the saddest are those whose owners insisted on their being both Dutch Colonial and full two-story at the same time. Sometimes the second story front wall carried up on the same plane as the first story wall, attempts to camouflage itself as a dormer by the transparent device of carrying six inches of eaves down along its end and across its front.

Sometimes the second story half of a vertically straight front wall has shingles carried down over it in a pitiful attempt to make a vertical shingled surface look like a gently sloping roof.

OUTDOOR DECORATING

Since science has definitely enlisted on the side of the housewife, less bulky materials than cast iron have been found from which to manufacture furniture to defy the elements. Duralumınum and other light weight metals have replaced cast iron, and chairs made of these materials may be painted the old-fashioned green or gay orange, yellow, sky blue, or what you will.

Modern wicker, reed rattan, willow of fibre furniture is far more durable than anything of the kind seen heretofore. And for upholstery and coverings we have new materials such as fabrikoid and oil cloth, as well as mohair, cotton and linen, which are as unfading as the grass upon which the outdoor furniture stands.—From the June issue of the The American Home.

LIVING OUT OF DOORS

Plan your garden as an outdoor living room, advises the June American Home. The modern idea is to make a garden not a show place, but a beautiful extension of the house itself. Arrange it so that it looks attractive from inside the house, and provide space for tables and chairs so that you can really live in your garden.

Trees like the dogwood, which afford a welcome shade but do not starve the flowers are suggested for such a garden.

SELECTING A HALL LIGHT

A colored electric light bulb for the reception hall which reflects a warm glow is quite effective in impressing visitors with the cozy, welcoming atmosphere of one's home. Even when one comes home to a fireless house in midwinter such a glow helps a bit. A rosy light may not give as much illumination as a plain frosted bulb, but it makes far more friends.

STUCCO POPULAR FINISH

Prior to very recent years stucco was generally compounded by unskilled labor and applied in a more or less haphazard manner.

In recent years, however, much research work has been carried on, and much has been done by large manufacturers of building materials toward bettering the quality of stucco, and toward determining the proper classes and kinds of under-construction over which it should be applied. The result being that today there is no reason or excuse why every stucco installation should not be entirely satisfactory and every stucco building a permanent structure.

It is erroneous to assume that a good stucco material can be compounded in a mortar box, by throwing together cement, sand, lime and coloring matter as is often done. The manufacture of stucco is a difficult problem, and requires modern machinery and equipment with which to grind, weigh, mix and measure the ingredients, also the knowledge of chemists and engineers who are thoroughly experienced in the business.

Water System Extension

Plans and specifications for the proposed extension of the city's water system in the north end of the city have been practically completed and are expected to be available soon for contractors to bid on the work against the price set up by the public works department.

The plans provide for the laying of 8,800 feet of 12-inch pipe and the construction of a new reservoir north of the present small reservoir north of the Connecticut college. The estimated cost of the work is placed at $80,000 by the public works department, this figure being approximated from an incomplete early detail.

Factory Alterations

Extensive alterations and repairs are being made to the factory building in Woodbridge street recently purchased by Louis Lubchansky and others from the Bridgeport Brass company. What use is to be made of the building has not been announced. The structure is 240 by 480 feet, one story high of brick construction.

Tydol Garage and Addition

A New London contractor started work this week on the construction of a large garage and addition to the office of the Tydol gasoline and oil headquarters for this section at Quaker Hill. The new garage is to be of concrete construction, 50 by 34, and is designed to accommodate four large oil trucks. The office addition is to be 24 by 34 feet, one story high.

Work is progressing favorably on the construction of a bungalow being built for William Gray at 14 Terrace avenue. The new structure is 24 by 30 feet and will contain five rooms and bath besides a breakfast nook and sun parlor. The estimated cost is $4,000.

JUST WHAT IS BROCCOLI?

There has been much discussion about broccoli of recent seasons. It has almost seemed as if it were a brand new vegetable. As a matter of fact, it isn't. The English grow broccoli largely. They also grow it on the Pacific coast and the average person can't tell it from cauliflower, as it has the same white curds and head. As a matter of fact, this old-time broccoli is a form of cauliflower and is botanically Brassica botrytis, the "flower" being the deformed and degenerate flowers which do not fully develop but form a mass of albino vegetation which provides a welcome table delicacy.

Now comes the broccoli which is regarded as real broccoli although no more so than the white sort. This is the Italian or green sprouting broccoli. It is also a branching broccoli. It is a broccoli that grows naturally and develops perfect flowers. There is a certain amount of deformity that produces the heavy branching heads which is known botanically as fasciation. This is the thickening or growing together of stems.

When the Italian broccoli becomes too mature in the stores or in the garden the green heads will develop into clusters of yellow flowers much resembling mustard. It is an easily grown vegetable with the same culture as cabbage or cauliflower, equally well beloved by the cabbage worm. Botanically it is a variety of the white heading broccoli and is known as Brassica botrytis var. Italica. The white and green broccolis are really all the same plant.

The leaves and stems as well as the green heads, of the Italian broccoli are edible and it has an even more delicate flavor than cauliflower or the white broccoli. It is cooked the same way and should not be overcooked. The heavy stems need a longer cooking than the tender flower heads require if they are to be used and expert cooks cook the heavy leaves and stems separately. The Italian broccoli has long been known in southern Europe but is a newcomer on American tables and regarded as a delicacy. It is an excellent vegetable and worthy of the praise given it. It is something that any gardener can have in his home garden as easily as he can cabbage or cauliflower. It is worth trying.

WHEN A MAN OUT OF WORK FOUND ONE KIND FRIEND

Sam Halter, of New Bedford, has been out of work over seven months—cannot buy a job—went everywhere that money could reach. So in Boston one day, walking along, he came to a big brick building where a sign on the door read "Men Wanted." But a young woman at the telephone said: "One man wanted," while 500 rushed over.

"I waited in line three hours and still no job in sight," Halter says. "Down to my last quarter with nothing to eat all day long, I put a beef stew under my belt and started to walk toward New York without a cent in my pockets—also wearing my only pair of shoes. Coming along slowly, no kind auto owner gave me a ride; all the way I came by shoe-leather express. I stopped and asked for work in all the towns, but no luck. So hearing about Fishers Island having lots of work, when I hit New London I got across on the boat free.

"But I found the island like Capt. Kidd's gold—all gone. That place could hang crape on it — so dead! All I could do was to get back. But luck was with me and I landed in New London and started to walk back home. I came to a village called Noank, with a large shipyard. Hearing that men were wanted I was going down to see, but found it bone dry, as the Volstead law. My feet were sore from walking. I came across a kind man and asked him for work. I told my story true from the bottom of my heart. Mister, I walked from Boston to New London; my shoes are all gone. Did not eat much for five days. A ham sandwich would look as big as a turkey on a table to me! I could eat a sandwich stuffed with a fire-cracker right now! Work is so slack! I've been everywhere. If I was lazy it would be different, but I've walked from Boston here, looking for work. I would do anything! This country is some dull on the work line! Never in my life have I seen it like it is now!"

The kind man felt sorry to see a man looking for work who could not find any. A large lawn needed to be cut as the grass was high and so putting down his first meal in five days, the stranger went to work on the lawn. It took seven hours to do it, so the man gave him a $5 bill, paying his fare back home. The stranger did not want to take it, as tears came to his eyes. That was the first five he had seen in six months or longer. He said: "When your last dollar is gone you realize that was your best friend—and with no eats—a fellow is broke. But them kind words over a Salvation Army door read: "A man may be down but he's never out!" At last he got through with the lawn and got his 5-spot and was ready for home after being away four weeks. Boston got hit heavy, where thousands of men are out of work. I was a weaver in a mill in my home town when the bubble broke in Wall street. That threw over 1,000 out of work. Now they are thinking of moving the mill down south because it can be run cheaper. Every place I've been for a job they say: "You are a bum—don't want to work!" But, not pinning any Mayflowers on my chest about myself, I bet there is no other man in this North America who has walked from Massachusetts to Connecticut looking for something to do!

When I was a boy, born in Canada, I was raised on a farm—had to work from sun to sun, hard work, but there was plenty to eat. Today, if you have not got a dollar that is your best friend missing!

Well, I am not married—that helps a little—and no children, but sleeping out in the open space is not so good for a man my age. When September rolls around I will be 67. You've got to be tough to stand it. When I reach home I hope business will be better soon!

Well, Noank sure is a kind-hearted place to help a stranger in time of need. Where people understand a hard luck story that is the truth. If I ever left New Bedford I sure would make my home in this village. I think now that I will learn the fishing trade, where you can go out and get some fish once in a while. Then I'd buy a boat.

My trip did not do me any harm. I have made friends, have found out that work is still slack. It sure is hard on a fellow. Auto owners will not pick up a man walking on the highway anymore. They think they will get robbed, so much of that is being done. I don't blame them. I never ask for a ride now—walk all the way. Outside Providence, a girl and a fellow in a big sedan going to New York, asked me if I wanted a ride; but with a smile I said "No." "I kept right on walking. That was the only one that stopped to pick me up. You cannot blame them. It might be a bad move if you don't know the party."

Putting on his coat and having his suit case on his back, he shook the hand of the kind man who had helped him out when a ham sandwich was like $100 to him. Then he was soon beating it over the Ctore hill to catch a train back to New Bedford, after no success getting a job. That was one time a man sure needed help for he was down, though not out!

POETRY

Beyond Two-Score, But Not Venerable

"Tennis," they say, "is a game for young men;
Golf for the aged is fitting;
You have been forty a year and a day,
Tennis you ought to be quitting."
I'm not so young now as I used to be;
I am prepared to admit it;
But when the ball whizzes over the net,
As a general thing I can hit it.

I am quite agile and vigorous still,
Though I admit I am forty;
I am not bowed by the burden of age;
Indeed, I am feeling quite sporty.
I'm not so spry as I was years ago,
Still I am far from rheumatic,
And those who have watched me I'm sure will agree
My serving is seldom erratic.

In the heat of the game I can manage the ball;
It goes where I want when I whack it.
The niblick and brassie are all very well,
But I have more fun with the racket.
So I think I won't shift yet from tennis to golf;
I'll wait till my hot blood is colder;
It is true I am forty, but still I feel young—
We shall see how I'll feel when I'm older.

Tempters

Spade in hand, into the garden
Trod I, to stir the pulsing earth
With deep thrusts
And quick, joyous turn of wrists
In the year's Spring.

The garden seed seemed eager
To repose in the receptive soil,
But, ah me, I spied a worm
Wriggling there—
An angleworm. Just one of many.

A can of squirming bait suborned me,
Like magic, my metamorphic garden spade
Became a bamboo fishing pole
Luring me away
From home, scoffing at responsibilities

As in a dream, I started for the creek;
But my wife's hail halted me abruptly
And turned me back to gardening.

As a collector of postage stamps, George B. Higgins, of St. Louis, is in a class almost by himself, if not entirely so. He assembles and classifies his stamps according to the kind of pictures they bear, rather than according to countries, denominations, dates of issue, and so on, as do most collectors. For instance, all the stamps bearing pictures of animals are in one classification. Altogether, Mr. Higgins has seen fit to divide his collection into eighteen classifications, each based on the character of the pictures on the face of the stamps.

Fire Insurance
the Bulwark
of Trade

The volume of trade in the United States is estimated at more than 80 billion dollars annually. Probably 90 per cent of this is transacted on credit.

The underlying safeguard of this credit is Stock Fire Insurance, with more than $150,000,000,000 constantly at risk in the protection of burnable property in this country.

This background of $150,000,000,000 of protection against disaster makes commerce on its present gigantic scale possible.

Few indeed are the activities of the home or of business that are not benefited directly or indirectly by the stabilizing effect of Stock Fire Insurance and the security that it affords.

Stock Fire Insurance is the silent partner in every enterprise—the Bulwark of Trade. It has rendered its service at a cost which on the average has constantly declined for more than twenty years.

NORWICH INN MAKING TWO SPECIAL DINNER DANCES FEATURES FOR ITS FORMAL OPENING

Tonight will mark the formal opening of the new Norwich inn which has been under construction for the last year. A dinner dance for the hotel officials and stockholders will feature the opening of the new inn. It will be strictly an invitation event. The public opening will take place Wednesday evening at which time there will also be a dinner dance.

The beautiful new inn is located on the Norwich-New London highway and adjoins the ground of the Norwich Golf club. Charmingly simple in its Colonial lines, superb in its setting amidst trees and shrubbery, about one mile from the city and set back from the busy main highway, the new inn has a distinct appeal to the guest searching for a change from the noise and bustle of the city.

NOBLE C. MILLER Manager

Manager Miller in Charge

Noble C. Miller, the resident manager, is very enthusiastic about the new inn. Mr. Miller has been here for several weeks, coming to Norwich directly from Florida where he was located throughout the winter months. He says that the first tee of one of the finest golf courses in this section is right at the front door of the inn.

The new inn is one of the Treadway chain of inns, controlled by the Treadway Corporation, a New England company, which has pioneered the inception, planning, organization and administration of a number of Colonial inns. They have constructed the now famous system of Treadway inns, located in various parts of New England, particularly in Vermont and Massachusetts. The Norwich inn is the corporation's first venture in this state, although several other Connecticut cities are negotiating for Treadway system inns.

Officers of the Treadway organization, now known as the Consolidated Hotel Service, Inc., are Everett B. Rich, president; Joseph A. Peck, vice president; William H. Davis, secretary and treasurer; L. G. Treadway, operating director. These officers and Charles M. Hart, the architect of the system, Robert L. Sharpe, Richard Remsen and C. Patterson, constitute the board of directors of the system.

Mr. Treadway has selected well in naming Mr. Miller as resident manager. Mr. Miller for three seasons managed the True Temper inn at Wallingford, Vt., for the Treadway firm, and did exceptionally well. His other affiliations have been Mountain View House, Whitefield, N. H., the Mount Washington, Greve Park inn, Asheville, N. C., College Arms, Deland, Fla., and he was with the United chain and Wiggins hotels for some time.

Mr. Miller's secretary is Mark Potter of Miami, Fla., who also will act as relief clerk. Mr. Potter was formerly with the Hotel County club, at Miami and the True Temper inn at Wallingford, Vt. The inn kitchen will be under the supervision of Chef Joe Valades who has been with Managed Miller for 10 years. Mr. Valades made quite a reputation for himself in Miami; he gained his experience in Spain and France and at the Commodore and McAlpin in New York city.

The dining room staff will be headed by Carl Johnson, formerly of the Lord Jeffrey inn, at Amherst, Mass., the Hollywood Beach hotel, at Hollywood, Fla., the Bellair, in Florida, Stoneleigh Manor, Rye Beach, N. H., and other hotels. In the office will be Harry C. Philbrick, Jr., of Boston, formerly of the Fensgate, and The Mayflower hotels in Boston, and the Farragut House at Rye Beach, N. H.

INN PROJECT LAUNCHED BY BUSINESS MEN

It was in October 1928, that the first announcement was made regarding the erection of the Norwich inn. At that time announcement was made by the Norwich chamber of commerce that the inn would be erected if plans aproved by the chamber directors and others interested became effective. The Norwich Golf Land Co., owned the land on which the inn stands. When the inn was first talked of, the officers of the Norwich Golf Land Co., voiced their support. Many business men of the city felt that Norwich needed a new hotel and it was the consensus that the financing would not be difficult.

A few days later the preliminary agreement between the officers of the Treadway organization and the Norwich chamber of commerce was signed. The chamber of commerce committee included Harold D. Larrabee, then president of the chamber, Robert W. Perkins and Judge Nelson J. Ayling. The agreement dommitted the chamber to cooperate with the Treadway organization's architect in the sketches and plans for the new inn. The construction cost of the inn was set at $325,000.

October 31, 1928, 50 leaders among Norwich business men, representing the backbone of the city's financial strength met at the chamber of commerce rooms to definitely launch the Norwich inn project. The group constituted itself a general committee, under the chairmanship of William G. Park, then president of the Norwich Golf club, and accepted the responsibility of a campaign programme that involved the raising of sufficient funds by popular subscription to insure the success of the inn project. Arthur M. Brown was the chairman of the campaign and Joseph C. Worth, who succeeded Mr. Larrabee as president of the chamber, served as associate chairman. The working out of the financial programme was placed in the hands of Robert W. Perkins of the Eastern Connecticut Power Co.

Shortly afterwards the financial campaign organization was completed and was known as the Norwich Inn Builders, Limited. The campaign was successfully carried out, 436 subscribers, or stockholders, raising $200,210, thus assuring the construction of the new inn.

General Contract Awarded

The plans for the inn were approved the following March and in August of last year the building contract was awarded to the Peck-McWilliams company, of this city. Chandler and Palmer were the local representatives in charge of the architectural and engineering work and supervised the construction work.

L. G. TREADWAY
Operating Director

The new inn is three stories in height, is 225 feet long and 65 feet in width. It is located just easterly of the Norwich Golf club house and is about 300 feet from the Norwich-New London highway. The main floor is devoted to the office, lobby, lounge room, dining room, sun porch, etc. The main dining room has a normal capacity of 225 which can be expanded 100 or more for banquet purposes.

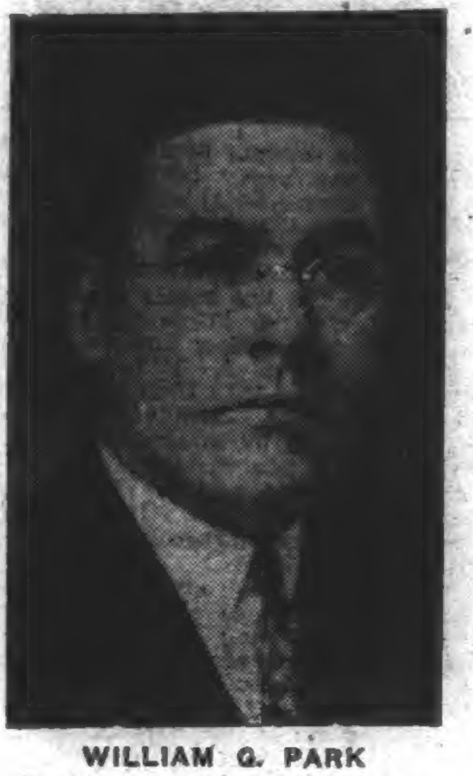
There are in addition a private dining room, children's dining room and a grill room. Above the main floor are two floors with a capacity of 70 guest rooms. The servant's rooms are all located at the rear of the house and are separated from the main building. Practically all of the rooms either have a private bath or have a connecting bath and most of the rooms have southeast or southerly exposures. A few single rooms are available, but most of the rooms are large enough to use as double rooms.

Officers of Norwich Inn Co.

The officers and directors of the Norwich Inn Co., are: Directors, Arthur M. Brown, Charles R. Butts, Shepard B. Palmer, William G. Park Robert W. Perkins, Ernest O. Rodier, Philip A. Johnson, F. Russell Smith, Charles W. Taggart, L. G. Treadway. Joseph C. Worth. President, William G. Park; vice president, Joseph C. Worth; secretary, Shepard B. Palmer; treasurer, Gilbert S. Raymond.

COLONIAL PERIOD IN DECORATIONS AND FITTINGS

The painting of the inn was in charge of L. W. Whiting, well known local painter. The designing for the elaborate panelling was done by Marion Booth Trask, of Trask and Hart, decorators, of No. 247 Park street, New York city. The spacious lobby is panelled below, with an oriental rug, showing the old tree of life design, (copied in Colonial days in both fabric and print).



WILLIAM G. PARK
President of Norwich Inn Co.

The fixtures throughout the first floor are handmade copies of the Colonial period and wherever consistent with modern comfort, the old spirit has been retained, for inns are more interesting resting places if they can show something of art or history. The lounge, like the sunrooms, overlooks the nearby hills and the Thames river. Large solid beams of handhewn oak and panelled ends of knotty pine give this room the air of an old hostelry of the finer type.

It is papered with an antique pattern in yellow, a color which our ancestors in their pioneer days found cheerful in their long New England winters. Cheer is the keynote of the place, gay warmth for winter and plenty of breeze with good protection from the sun in the summer.

The stone terrace with its tea tables, sun umbrellas and lounging chairs, as well as the sun rooms with their gay comforts are, of course, luxuries which have come to us with modern days.

As far as possible, however, the spirit throughout the building, is one not of slavish imitation but of adaptation. For our ancestors were careful craftmen, with an eye for beauty as well as use, but life has brought us more of comfort.

The rugs and carpets, household linens, etc., were furnished by The Porteous and Mitchell Co. In the lobby are four Marshall Fields washable Oriental rugs; two, 12 x 20 feet and two 6 x 9 feet in size. In the lounge are three beautiful rugs, 12 x 26 feet in size. They are Mager's Embassy Seamless Broadloom carpet made into rugs.

In the second and third floor, bed chambers are Mager's Belmont seamless plain broadloom carpet size rugs, there being 70 of these. All the rugs and carpets are laid with "Perfection" carpet and rug cushioning pads underneath. The Porteous and Mitchell Co., also furnished all household linens, including table cloths, tops, etc., all towels and towelings for the bed rooms, bath rooms, kitchen, etc., the bureau scarfs, runners, napkins, bath rugs, etc. The bed coverings furnished by the Porteous and Mitchell Co., include the bed spreads, blankets, comfortables, mattress pads.

JOSEPH C. WORTH
Vice President, Norwich Inn Co.

The fact that practically all of the furnishings in the hotel were purchased locally is a striking tribute to home buying and the superlative purchasing power of the Norwich stores and their capacity to meet the most severe competition on the part of not only Connecticut's leading stores, but also that of several of the outstanding wholesale jobbing and contract houses of New York and Boston.

Guest Rooms in Maple

The Gilbert Furniture Co. furnished the 70 guest rooms with charming solid maple pieces in the early colonial style, harmonizing with the general style of the inn.

The rooms on the second floor are equipped with four-post twin beds, dressers with Sheraton mirrors hung by silk cords from the mouldings, chests, writing tables, upholstered and rush seat chairs, trunk racks, etc.

The bedding is of the finest grade obtainable, upholstered box springs with spring filled mattresses with extra hair upholstery. The rooms on the third floor are equipped with "Simmons" metal beds in color to match the maple of the furniture.

The dining room has convertible tables to accommodate four or six persons. The dining chairs are of braced back pattern, also in the Colonial maple finish.

The lobby has the famous "Stickley" colonial tables, chairs and benches in attractive finish. The nook is equipped with unique pieces, also furnished by "Stickley." The long lounge has colorful upholstered sofas and chairs with attractive lamps in colors. In the sun-room off the lounge, one finds complete sets of Rattan furniture with beautiful cretonne cushions.

Guests and visitors to the inn, even persons passing along the highway, will notice the harmonious and lustrous window shades, made by a new imported process that makes them sonfast and washable. The rain can beat on them without any harmful effect. The Melrose color was personally selected by Mr. Wriston, the managing director of the inn, who also chose the Triplex shadowproof or opaque shades to match, in Melrose, for the rooms on the sunny side of the inn. All the shades were furnished and installed by the Reid & Hughes Co.

The heating system at the inn was installed by Harold C. [illegible] Warren Webster Vacuum, the latest type of heating plant for large hotels or business houses. The same equipment is used also for heating the large storage hot water tank located in the pump room in the basement of the inn. The system is fired by two Kewanee steel tubular boilers the entire plant being the largest of its type ever to have been installed in Norwich.

Mr. Dahl also had the ventilation system to install. This is used for ventilating the complete and modern kitchen. The dining room is also ventilated, this being a large blower placed in the attic of the inn. Each bathroom is separately ventilated by means of automatic propellor fans. This complete equipment ensures perfect ventilation at the inn at all seasons of the year.

The type of plumbing used throughout the inn is entirely of brass for both hot and cold water, practically all rooms being equipped with built-in tubs, the remainder having showers. All exposed parts of the fixtures used for plumbing work are chrome-plated adding to the beauty of the interior work of the inn. All flush valves used throughout the entire building by Mr. Dahl are Norwich products having been manufactured at the United Metal company.

GILBERT S. RAYMOND
Treasurer, Norwich Inn Co.

arrangement of the hot water system. This is of the circulating type, ensuring patrons of hot water instantly the faucets are turned on.

In all the entire work of plumbing and heating is the largest handled in Norwich by a local concern and speaks well for the ability of Norwich workmen to handle work of this kind in competition with houses from larger cities which bid unsuccessfully for the work.

Hardware of Special Type

The Eaton Chase Co. supplied the hardware for the inn and this selection includes guest room locks of the latest type. These locks are so delicately constructed that with just a slight turn only, a master key will open the door from the outside, but they are at all times readily opened from the inside by the turning of the knob.

On the entrance doors, forged hardware of antique pattern is being applied. This is in line with the hardware furnished for the Lord Jeffery inn at Amherst. The hotel officials, in making their choice of knobs and locks considered carefully both quality and price, and their experience has given the inn the best hardware at the lowest possible figure.

The inn officials selected the Frigidaire for use in their kitchen in order that they may be able instantly to serve frozen desserts at any hour. The Frigidaire ice cream cabinet has been installed by Carl W. Brown, Inc., in the serving counter where ice cream can be delivered to the waiters as quickly as it is served from a soda fountain in a drug store.

The O'Neil Electric Co., supplied a complete electrical installation for lighting and power at the inn, also installed the telephone conduits for telephones throughout the building, and the lighting fixtures which are of a unique design and which blend with the building. There are five large exhaust fans which take care of the ventilation and there are electric clocks at convenient locations. There is a complete fire alarm system on each floor.

In the modern kitchen the following electrical equipment has been installed; large commercial electric range, electric steam tables, electric bake oven, electric dishwasher, eight slice electric toaster, electric waffle iron, electric coffee urn and various other small electrical appliances.

The inn officials selected from the International Silver Co., a silver equipment of Colonial pattern in keeping with the Colonial atmosphere of the new inn.

To properly house and file the records of the inn, the inn officials have had installed an Art Metal four drawer steel letter file, and a five drawer steel card index case, together with a steel safe. This filing equipment may be added to from time to time as the records grow. Walter N. Block installed the office equipment.

The Eastern Bridge and Structural Co., of Worcester, under the Peck McWilliams Co., had charge of the steel work, the Tuttle Brick Co., of Middletown, supplied the brick, Puritan Front Brick, and the F. A. Miller Co., laid out the roadways.

The inn has been connected up with the city water supply and a 14,000 gallon septic tank has been installed to take care of the sewerage.

C. E. Whitaker had the roofing contract, he supplied Johns Mansville Super Class A asbestos roofing, all flat roofing. Mr. Whitaker was the sub-contractor under a Hartford slate roof firm.

William M. Ryan and Sons of this city furnished washed sand gravel and loam of concrete work and grading at the inn and also did the excavating work.

Evergreens, flowers and trees are to be planted about the spacious grounds in the fall. Otto F. Ernst of Geduldig's greenhouses will have charge of this work.

The Edward Chappell Co., has furnished the coal, the H. F. and A. J. Dawley Co., provided lumber, principally for the flooring.

Charles C. Treat has the contract to furnish the ice cream.

The Cranston Co., have provided the office supplies, such as ink, paper, ledgers, etc.

The inn is on the main highway from New London to Worcester and points north. It is within easy range of numerous shore resorts on Long Island sound. New London, Hartford, Providence, Boston, New Haven and New York are within easy driving distance. Norwich-New London trolley cars pass the inn at regular intervals.

CHAMBER TOOK PROMINENT PART IN FINANCING

The Norwich chamber of commerce paid a large part in the financing of the new inn. Speaking of the part the chamber took in the new inn, John Richardson, secretary of the chamber, said Monday:

On September 10th, 1928, the idea of a new hotel for this city was advanced at a meeting of the chamber of commerce. From that time on this proposition became an important issue with this organization, supported by a small group of progressive and far-seeing Norwich men who had faith in the idea and backing their faith by their works, set forth to build for Norwich a new hotel. Today this idea, fanned by the flames of faith, courage, and hard work, is an "accomplished fact." Yesterday an idea—today a living monument from which will echo the hospitality of "The Rose of New England."

Today we can point with pride to this hostelry and what it means to the advancement of our community. It is a striking example of the power of co-operation and in the swinging open of its doors great credit is reflected to all who gave of their time, energy, and money to bring it about.

From its inception this project was advanced step by step by the untiring efforts of Walter H. Pilcher, former secretary of the Norwich chamber of commerce. To him and his associates is extended congratulations in bringing about the accomplishment of this outstanding civic enterprise.

WESTERLY

AGREEMENT IS REACHED IN TRESPASS CASE MONDAY

Trial in the trespass case, Annunziato Yucho vs. Frank Capalbo and Joseph Grillo, began last Thursday in the Westerly adjournment of the April term of superior court for Washington county before Associate Justice Pouliot and continued through Friday, came to an abrupt ending at 12:30 Monday. Following a conference between the judge and Attorneys Tuzano and Flynn for the plaintiff and Ferguson for the defendant, Mr. Flynn announced that the plaintiff would agree to a decision for the respondents. Civil Engineer Louis J. Rossi was on the witness stand Monday morning in the continuation of his cross-examination by Attorney Ferguson. At that time he traced the descriptions from old deeds, Joseph Hiscox to Franklin Burdick and Franklin Burdick to Peter S. Parks and Peter S. Parks to John Catto, who deeded land involved to the defendants, supplied by Mr. Ferguson and indicated the same to the jurymen from plats hung on the courthouse wall. The boundary line in dispute was that which separated the "Old Bank lot" so-called, from the other properties bounded by Main street, the New Haven railroad and the Pawcatuck river in Bradford.

As the spare jurors were excused on their court appearance Monday morning, only the panel on the case being tried were left when the suit came to a sudden close and Judge Pouliot directed all jurymen to report this (Tuesday) morning at 10:45 o'clock. The next case on the Westerly calendar marked ready are the actions at law, Margaret W. Smith vs. Nancy M. Browning and William H. Smith vs. Nancy Browning, with Attorney Roche for plaintiff and Judge Watts for the respondent.

The much-tried case for damages, Edwin D. Vennard vs. Harold Lihme, it is understood will go over to the September term of Washington county superior court.

Annual Memorial services were conducted Sunday by Rev. Arnt L. Schoning, pastor, at the Broad Street Christian church and were attended by nearly 200 members of patriotic organizations and church members. Heading the delegation of patriotic society members was Commander Samuel Tefft of Budlong post, No. 18, G. A. R., of Westerly.

Sunday morning, the members of Westerly grange, No. 18, P. of H., attended their annual memorial services for departed members held at the First Baptist church, Broad street, Westerly. Rev. B. U. Hatfield, pastor, conducted the services. He preached on the topic, "Life As a Garden." Mr. Hatfield left Monday for Cleveland, to attend the annual conference of the Northern Baptist convention as a delegate from his church. During his absence, Rev. Herbert E. Weise, of Noank, will occupy the pulpit. Mr. Hatfield expects to return before June 6.

In special session of Third district court, Sunday night, Harry Damurjian, 33, of Queen Ann road, Bogota, N. J., was fined $25 and costs by Judge Oliver H. Williams, when he pleaded guilty to a charge of speeding. Damurjian was arrested on the Nooseneck Hill road by a state trooper who testified in court that he had traveled over that road from Exeter, Hope Valley, at a rate exceeding 50 miles an hour. He was driving a one-ton truck

SEGAR STORE ENTERED— EVIDENT WORK OF BOY

The burglary of a High street store over the week-end was reported to the Westerly police Monday. The break was in the grocery store of William Segar & Co., 72 High street, and was discovered when the store was opened for business Monday morning. Missing was about $5 in money, two boxes of cigars, several cartons of cigarettes and some candy. Patrolman Paul McCarthy found that entrance was gained through a back window, which had been broken out. The work is believed to have been that of a boy who crawled through the sash.

Collins, of Providence, Lieut. Howard V. Allen, of East Greenwich, and Maj. John F. Datson, of Westerly. A medal provided by the Westerly town council will be awarded the winner of the competition. In addition to the medal for the individual drill, it is also expected that prizes will be offered for the best squad.

Whipple, president of Westerly Historical society, and Westerly town clerk, a Spanish-American war veteran, has been named a committee to represent the Westerly town council, who will attend in a body, and to make the presentation of the town council medal, also the $5 and $2.50 gold pieces which come from the council.

ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING OF CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., May 26.—Over 100 prospective members of the rejuvenated Westerly chamber of commerce were present tonight at 6:30 for the first dinner and meeting of the civic organization at Peckham's Inn. Preceding the evening session, a meeting of the executive committee was held at 5:30. Here as well as at the dinner and meeting which followed, the president, Dr. John Champlin, presided.

Welcoming those present, President Champlin stated that he had an executive committee of willing workers, young men who would be relieved by younger men who would be put in their places if they did not function. The Westerly chamber of commerce was to be a clearing house for Westerly and Pawcatuck, whose cooperation and backing was most desired. Through different committees a chairman had been appointed who was to be held responsible to name its membership and to direct its activities.

At the head table besides the presiding officer and speaker, were seated First Vice-President Walter C. Hiscox, Second Vice-President James McCormick, Lewis Stanton, Past President and Executive Board Member H. Russell Burdick, treasurer; Frank G. Ahern, reception committee; Frank A. Sullivan, trades and manufacture; Harry R. Milner, traffic; Charles P. Eccleston, new industries; John F. Gallagher, Pawcatuck; Henry L. Burdick, traffic; Dr. John Champlin, Jr., sanitation; George B. Utter, publicity; Rogers E. Trainer, secretary.

Secretary Richard Watrous of Providence chamber of commerce, President Champlin announced, would entertain those present by giving them valuable knowledge of the work of the Rhode Island and New England allied bodies and locally by telling them how to keep committees busy, as by experience he knew how to do this. Mr. Watrous declared that members of the chamber of commerce should appreciate their opportunities as the originators of ideas. As many of those present were of the Westerly and Pawcatuck Retail Merchants' association, it was known that they were out for business and to improve their opportunities. They should map out their economic campaign with a balanced program of civics and industrial activity, taking care for a logical industrial expansion. By advertising the shore resorts would be known as a wonderful coast country and a rich possession for Westerly. He cautioned his hearers to avoid controversies, especially along lines of religion, labor and politics.

He said that specific work should be undertaken and care given to the choosing of co-workers. As possible sources of activity, Mr. Watrous declared that a city planning program to tie up Westerly and Pawcatuck was a most desirable one and urged that the chamber undertake a new hotel project to fill the void made by the burning of the Rhode Island hotel. In closing, he said that the Providence chamber would stand by the Westerly body and give it help should they send for it.

In a round table talk which closed the meeting, Harry R. Milner called attention to the corrosion of the iron work on the Pawcatuck river bridge at Broad street and declared it his belief that a new bridge is desirable, to cross the river from the Rogers warehouse on Canal street to Lewis avenue in Pawcatuck and that a by-pass would relieve traffic congestion on Canal, High and Broad streets, by taking traffic through Liberty street and through Morgan street, to West Broad street.

Report was made by Wells R. Fowler that a knitting mill in Lebanon, Pa., was seeking a Westerly location; its superintendent is Arthur Austin, a former Westerly resident. Charles P. Eccleston spoke of an industrial plant which he knew was seeking a site near Westerly. Henry L. Burdick, in stating that the service given Westerly by the New Haven railroad was equal to any along the line, declared that the Pittsburgh train, formerly making a Westerly stop, would be a part of his program in securing a continuance of the Westerly service. John F. Gallagher stated that he would use his best endeavor to secure Pawcatuck cooperation.

Dr. John Champlin, Jr., president of the Westerly Sanitary corps, and chairman of the sanitation committee, said that a clean-up campaign would be inaugurated the first week of June in Westerly and Pawcatuck. Brief addresses assuring cooperation were made by James McCormick, Frank A. Sullivan, Lewis Stanton, Walter C. Hiscox and H. Russell Burdick.

DUWELL PROGRAM TO INCLUDE HORSE RACING, AERIAL CIRCUS AND TITLE RUN

The program to be conducted at the fairgrounds on the afternoon of Memorial day in conjunction with the National A. A. U. 10-mile championship run was completed Monday afternoon at a meeting of the general committee, held at the chamber of commerce rooms. Announcement was made at the meeting that arrangements had been made with the Reliable Flying Service company for the staging of an aerial circus at the fairgrounds, in addition to the horse racing, band concert and the title run.

"WHITEY" MICHAELSON
15-MILE CHAMPION

A plane, driven by Chief Pilot Charles F. Arnold, one of the best in the business, will figure in a stunt program from 2 o'clock to 2:30, prior to the starting of the title run. Lieut. Arnold will fly here from Massachusetts early in the afternoon and will make headquarters at the Beebe farm, Gallows Hill road. At 2 o'clock he will hop off for the grounds and will present a program of fancy flying which will include looping, the barrel roll, immalman roll, dead stick landing, flying upside down and other fancy flips. Later in the day Lieut. Arnold will take Red McKinney high into the skies and the latter will drop several thousand feet in the air to a point in the vicinity of the Beebe farm. After the program at the fairgrounds the plane will remain at the Gallows Hill road for the remainder of the afternoon.

The starting time for the afternoon's program was definitely decided upon as 1 o'clock. The opening events will be a series of horse races, this part to finish at about 2 o'clock. Then will come the aerial circus with the big run scheduled to start promptly at 2:30. Inasmuch as the winner will be in before 55 minutes is up the entire program will be over by 3:30 o'clock, allowing the spectators ample time to get to the Academy campus for the N. F. A.-Warren Harding ball game, scheduled to start at 4. Throughout the entire afternoon music will be provided by Swahns military band.

The horse racing program includes a special race and two open events. In the closed event two of the local rival horsemen will race for a purse and in the open numbers a field of eight or more horses will race for prizes. In addition to the five horses mentioned a week ago, additional entries received Monday for the open events were: Fly Back of the Two Well ranch and Brown Jug, and Harold Choice of the Brown stock farm.

First prize in the three races will be twenty-five bushels of oats. In the open events second prize will be 15 bushels of oats, and third prize, 8 bushels of oats in one race and a bridle in the other.

Entries for the championship run continued to come in during the day Monday, the entry list touching 85 before night. There is every indication that it will go close to 100 before starting time. Several of the competing athletes have written the Duwells that they are confident that the world's record for ten miles, established in 1913 by H Kolehmainen at New York, will topple. Inasmuch as the fastest distance men in the world are entered there is a strong possibility that sporting history may be made here.

Acceptance notices from several prominent sport figures, invited to officiate as officials, were received Monday. The most prominent to specify his intentions of visiting the Rose of New England was Christopher (Bat) Battalino of Hartford, featherweight boxing champion of the world. State Athletic Commissioner Thomas E. Donohue, who a week ago accepted an invitation to officiate, advised the Duwells Monday that unless the unforeseen happens Bat will positively be on hand for the celebration.

INDIANS TAKE DOUBLE HEADER FROM CHICAGO

CLEVELAND, May 26—(AP)—Indians took both games of a double header here today, 7 to 3, and 5 to 2, behind good pitching by Wes Ferrell and Clint Brown.

Red Faber, veteran spitballer, held the Tribe hitless until, with two out in the fifth inning of the first game, eight successive hits drove him to shelter and produced seven runs.

Cecil Caraway, young Sox pitcher, also did well in the early innings of the nightcap, but retired under a five-hit assault in the sixth. Smead Jolley collected four hits in the second game, including a home run.

GETTING JUNIOR'S HAIR CUT

Scene: Any barber shop, anywhere.
Characters: Mother, Junior, Barbers and Customers.
Time: The busiest hour of the day.

Enter Mother and Junior, aged 3 years.

Mother: "Does mother's precious little sugar plum want the nice barber man to cut his little curly hair?"

Junior: "No, No, No."

Head Barber: "There'll be a chair ready in just a minute. Sit down and Mr. Nick will be at liberty soon. He has a way with children."

Mother: "Did mother's little pet hear that? See that nice man over there, he's going to make Junior look just like a little man."

Junior: "Don't want to be a man now. Want to go home."

Mother: "If Junior has his hair cut like a brave little man mother will buy some candy for him."

Junior: "Don't want candy, want to go home."

Mother: "Oh, Junior, look at the funny pictures in this magazine. Now don't tear the book, the barber man won't like it. There, Junior see what you did, you tore two pages out of the man's nice book. What will he say to Junior?"

Junior: "Don't care."
